SAWING WOOD FOR FAGGOTS.

Comparison is a good thing once in a while, for, no matter how on the bias our own luck is running, there is always some one else who is having a harder time navigating. And if any American woman finds herself thinking hard things of fate because her life wasn't cast in a down-pillow setting, she may get a little left-handed consolation, remarks the Detroit Free Press, from the fact that she wasn't born to the life of a Bavarian woman of the poorer class.

Frederick the Great is said to have once remarked that Bavaria was a paradise inhabited by human beasts. Of course times have changed since the Great Frederick looked around in that part of the country, but, nevertheless, there still are evidences that he had justifiable cause for making the remark. In Bavaria the status of woman is much what it is in half-civilized communities where the hard work all falls to her, while "man, proud man" looks on and smiles his approval or frowns, just as the mood and his dinner happen to strike him. In America the sight of a woman sawing wood is a curiosity that never fails to bring down sympathetic observation, but in Bavaria it is a common sight. In fact, in all Bavarian cities it is the customary employment of a large number of women.

Not only at wood sawing, but in many other lines of hard labor women are regularly engaged. They are seen in all sorts of home building operations, such as carrying mortar, wheeling brick and doing many other tasks that rightfully belong to man. The woman wood-carrier and rag-picker are common objects in the Bavarian capital, and even the Munich municipality encourages female employment by allowing the Tramway company to use women for cleaning out the tram-rails. The extent to which women in Munich replace the men for services elsewhere almost universally entrusted to the latter is antonishing, and the women have not even the privilege of female suffrage to comfort them.

In Bavaria the streets are cleaned by the women, but in Detroit men are the only ones that wear the wings. There will be no quarrel over the honor; it is safe to say that no woman is hankering after the job of any of the featherless dusters.

It is not only in the Bavarian cities that the women are allowed to spend the day in manual labor; in the country they have just as many privlieges in this regard. The Bavarian highlander, for instance, has a reputation for indolence. He is not agricultural and is always spoken of as a man of so many cows. His possessions are under the management of the women of his houehold, who rear and tend the stock and do all of the rough work in this connection. Apropos, a curious duty falls to the lot of the Bavarian peasant girl in what is known as the life on the higher pastures. The lower pastures begin to dry up in the month of June, and then the herds are driven up the mountain side for the summer. With them goes the herd-girl to pass at least three months of unbroken solitude, with the exception of a saving relief on Sunday, when she receives a visit from her lover.

During this time she lives in a stone hut divided into two parts—one for the cattle and one for herself. The only articles of furniture are a rude bed filled with hay and covered with a blanket, and a very few other necessities. There is a shelf containing bottles of medicine for the girl and cattle; against the wall hangs a small crucifix of carved wood, and somewhere hangs an almanac. A long oak chest contains her simple wardrobe and the silver ornaments with which she bedecks herself on the occasions of the lover's visits. There is nothing else for her but the beauty of the great outdoors and her beloved cattle. They are not only her charges, but her companions and friends. She has names for all of them and studies their tempers and their dispositions as if they were so many human beings.

During the week she spends much of her time making cheese, for which operation she is provided with rude utensils. When the cold winds blow and the snow begins to fall, the Alpine herds return home in solemn procession, headed by the queen or bell cow, hung with a garland of Alpine flowers. At last comes the herd girl herself, riding upon the flower decked back of one of her favorites.

BUSINESS-LIKE MARRIAGES.

The Bavarian highlanders cling tenaciously to the old customs and manners of their race, and are extremely superstitious. Their marriages are arranged on so business-like a principle as to be almost devoid of sentiment. A kind of professional best man is employed who has to obtain the bride and her dowry, to invite the guests, and also to persuade them into giving as many presents as possible. He also has to manage the festivities, which sometimes stretch out to the length of a week.

In making the match, the best man has first to visit the selected maiden and make an offer to her on behalf of his principal. His method of doing this is by offering her a cup of wine

If she accepts it is understood that she consents to the proposal. However, if any wine is spilled on this occasion, it is an especial sign of ill-luck; also, it is unlucky for a girl to accept an offer of marriage under a roof—probably a second cousin to our superstition about walking under a ladder.

After the best man has obtained the consent of the maiden, formal visits of inspection by the parents on both sides are made to each other's houses; and, although each knows beforehand the amount of goods possessed by the other, every part of the two houses from cellar to garret is examined. Next comes the betrothal, a ceremony of almost greater importance than that of the marriage. After the business arrangements have been concluded between the bridegroom's professional best man and the bride's father, the prospective bride is brought in by her mother, and rings are exchanged. The girl gives the bridegroom a shirt of her own make in exchange for which he makes her a small present of money.

The furniture for the new house is provided by the bride, and two or three days before the wedding it is taken to the house of the future husband. The transportation is by means of a wagon drawn by oxen, and when the girl arrives the prospective husband must help her down from the wagon and lift her over the doorstep into the house. If he allows her feet to touch the ground the direst evils are predicted. In her pocket she carries a little salt and bread to drive away evil spirits.

On her wedding day when the bride is going to church she must be very careful not to look behind her, for that would be a sign of reluctance, and she must be equally careful not to hasten forward, as that would indicate unbecoming haste. But above all things she must not smile, for it is an old and deep-rooted superstition that she who laughs as a bride will weep as a wife.

SUPERSTITIOUS ABOUT DEATH.

The superstitions regarding death among these people are as peculiar as are those pertaining to marriage. For instance, a light is placed before the eyes of a dying person for the purpose of driving away evil spirits; and to die between midnight and 1 o'clock is regarded as a bad omen, since at that hour the devil is supposed to claim his own. But if death occurs toward morning it is taken as a hopeful sign. As soon as one dies, the windows of the house are thrown open to allow the soul to find its way heavenward; but the moment the body is moved out of the house all doors and windows are tightly closed to prevent the spirit from re-entering. If the master of a household dies, all the animals in the house—cats and dogs, horses and cows—must be separately and officially informed of the loss they have sustained.

There is little in the lives of the hard-working Bavarian woman to suggest "the gentler sex." In some countries women may be the weaker members, but that term doesn't apply in Bavaria. However, the outdoor work that these women do, though arduous, is, nevertheless, healthy, and is much to be preferred to the drudgery of factory life sometimes found in the congested portions of our largest cities. The Bavarian woman, too, is domestic and is little concerned over matters beyond her own threshold.

NATION OF BEER DRINKERS.

Apropos of the contentment of this class of drudges, it would scarcely be possible to explain it without mentioning the beverages that has made Bavaria famous. An American who resided many years in Munich, says: "I think the higher education of the heart of the common people is, to a great extent, due to the fraternizing tendencies of beer."

A Bavarian can no more get along without his beer than he can get along without air—so he thinks. When he is very thirsty, beer tastes good to him, and when he is not thirsty it tastes equally good. It is said that Bavaria takes the lead of all nations in the consumption of beer, but that "Munich out-beers all Bavaria." Acquaintances, for instance, upon meeting, do not say: "How are you feeling?" but "How is the beer today?" It's the all-important question, and everybody has to take a share in settling it—even the babes in arms. Bavarians do not drink beer as Americans do, at a gulp. They sip it and that slowly, thereby avoiding jags and indigestion. This they are taught from infancy.

It is said that when General Grant visited Munich on his famous trip around the world he carefully eschewed the art gallaries and kindred sights, but that he was amused and much interested in a trip to the Court brewery. He much enjoyed the contents of a suart stein, which he put away American fashion, only once stopping to take breath and to remark: "Ah, this is excellent beer!" But when asked if he would have another, said: "My, mercy I could hardly get THAT down!"

The Japanese-American Dance.

(See First Page Illustration.)

The Japo-American" dance is a unique form of entertainment that promises to be fashionable throughout the autumn.

A smart English hostess originated the idea while the Longworths were visiting England in compliment to the "American Princess," as the Old World press has called the President's daughter since her notable trip to the Orient.

The original "party" was an alfresco affair molded over the principles of a garden party. The program consisted of an open-air vaudeville which included songs and dances from "Mikado" and recent musical operas having a "Japanesey" flavor. Coon songs, cake walks, monologues and a pony ballet with girls dressed as cowboys and wearing large sombreros were other amusing and interesting features.

The refreshments were served under marques and these, together with the decorations, were suggestive of the Fowery Kingdom.

The girls who took part in the program were dressed in the national attire of Japan, while the men wore flannel suits, silk shirts and yachting caps.

Such an entertainment may be easily modified to meet the requirements and pleasure of the individual hostesses. For those who wish to entertain in a general way as a feature for a house party in honor of a betrothed pair, visiting guests, or to celebrate a birthday party, will find that it will prove very attractive during the autumn days when Nature lends such a picturesque setting to the scene.

Last week a well-known hostess entertained in a similar manner for her daughter prior to her departure for college.

This "party," like the original, was given al fresco, though it is a bit too cool at this time and later to be given entirely in the open air. The piazzas and lower floor of the house can be used in place of the lawn.

The grounds were decorated with Japanese lanterns strung on wire and directly in front of the house, outlining the path from the tall gate posts to the piazza steps, were lanters swinging on wire and supported by poles. Directly over the doorway and in the archway along the piazza were suspended lanterns.

In the choice of decorations nothing could be more effective or appropriate than autumn leaves, combined with chrysanthemums, yellow, lavender and dark red, a scheme that proved very attractive. Scarlet sage or dahlias, the latter in their variegated colors, give pleasing contrast to the brilliant hues of the autumn foliage.

Arrange the leaves over the doorways, behind pictures, on mantlepieces, in fireplaces, anywhere; everywhere fancy suggests. Tall vases and baskets should be massed about the piazzas, besides bowls of flowers. Burn joss sticks in little vases; they have a two-fold purpose, keeping off mosquitoes and imparting an odor suggestive of temples and shrines.

The invitations were written on scarlet paper, and designed at home. In the corner was painted a dragon, a butterfly, a woman's head, a typical scene, birds in flight, their sacred mountain peak, any subject characteristic of Japan. The girls were requested to appear in national attire of the gay little Geishas, while the men wore serge or flannel suits, silk shirts soft felt hats or yachting caps. The hour appointed for the arrival was 9 o'clock. The lettering was done in gilt with a soft brush, resembling Japanese characters, written vertically, not across the paper.

The diversions were made up of typical forms of amusement of the first natives of America and the almond-eyed Japs across the sea.

There was a sun dance given by four men who were garbed as Indians, that proved to be a genuine novelty. This quartet of merrymakers knew the life of the plains and the queer costumes of the "redskins," having at one time lived among them. There were war whoops and recitations that made one think of pioneer days. The Geishas gave a queer but pitcuresque fan dance and songs were punctuated by the clanging of brasses similar to those heard in the "Darling of the Gods."

Dancing followed this special program.

Quite a little attention and thought had been given to the menu and table decorations. The refreshments were served at small tables, each decorated with autumn leaves and flowers as the center piece. Japanese napkins were used as such, also to serve as plate dollies. These were decorated with characteristic scenes.

The name cards were attached to miniature sunshades, which were stuck in tiny, dull green pots that held the dearest dwarf plants. The latter were the favors.

There were a few national dishes which space forbids to thoroughly describe in detail; others included American dishes garnished with fans and sunshades in varying shape.

For example, the sweet bread croquettes were pierced with wee fans fans having tassels on the sides, and the broiled mushrooms were very festive looking under the shadow of sunshades, thrust through the center.

The ices, orange, cherry and pistachio cream, were oddly molded, and on top of each reposed a tiny Japanese figure in china. Macaroons and other fancy cakes enlivened with colored frostings, candied cherries and mints were rivals to Japanese honey cakes, candied plums, citron sticks and other sweets that were placed in comforts.

At the conclusion of the supper tea on trays was served in little bowls reposing on brass stands. In the finger bowls were little Japanese flowers that opened in the water.

A picturesque decoration for a large table is a big Japanese umbrella, to which are attached lanterns, sufficient in number to give plenty of light. The candelabra should have Japanese shades. In the center of the table should be arranged a miniature garden with rustic bridges, temples and ponds, with here and there a dwarf bush or two in small pots. A couple of Japanese china figures would add a realistic touch, also a pagoda or a paper house.

Boiled rice, molded and decorated with cherries, over which has been poured a little Maraschine, which is palatable and is simply made. Calf's liver and peas in Hollandaise sauce, on toasted bread, garnished with eggs and served in quilled paped cases with gilt edges, is another interesting dish. A vegetable salad mixed with boiled cream dressing, then thoroughly chilled and served in china cups, demi tasse, decorated with fans, may be added to the menu.

Ices served in crystal plates or small bowls are especially pretty, the color reflecting through the glass. There is still a host of dishes, which, thoroughly American, can be made to look as though a Japanese chef had turned them out.

FLAG FUNERALS.

Britain is the only country which allbws its historical flags to go into the pawnshop or the auction room. One such flag, after having waved over the Thirty-ninth Foot for three years during the great siege of Gibraltar, was actually found covering the sofa cushions of a tradesman's sitting room!

In 1886, the First Battalion Gloucester regiment recovered from a pawnbroker at York four flags which it had borne from 1785 to 1810 through the Egyptian and Peninsular campaigns.

There may be seen today in the Kendal parish church a pair of the old colors of the Second Battalion Border regiment. They were rescued in 1888 by Lord Archibald Campbell from a London upholsterer who had advertised them for sale as though they were mere window curtains.

To prevent old colors meeting with such fates, many have been cremated with great ceremony, and the ashes carefully preserved in a box. Others have been buried with full military honors, among them being sets belonging to the King's Own Scottish Borderers and the Second Battalion Gloucester regiment.

EMPEROR'S FAVORITE FALLEN FROM HER HIGH ESTATE

How Pretty Emma Linden's Romance With Royalty Found Its Sequel in a Massachusetts Police Court

EMMA LINDEN

Now Abandoned Poor and without Friends

A score of years ago, a Massuchetts girl by her wit and beauty enslaved an empire and the proud rulerof millions openly courted her.

A few days ago that same woman was a prisoner in the Taunton police court, says the Boston Post.

Success, such as even her childish dreams never pictured, came to Emma Linden; ignominy, as blasting as any her most vengeful enemies could have wished, has followed.

* * *

Raynham is a little town down Taunton way; probably half Massachusetts has no more than heard the name. It is a sleepy little village whose biggest citizens are generally its most prosperous farmers.

Years and years ago Farmer Linden lived there. He was not of the most well-to-do, and probably his fame would have been perpetuated only by the modest slate tombstone in the village cemetery but for his daughter Emma.

AGREED ON HER BEAUTY.

At the age of three months she was voted by all the farmers' wives to be "just the prettiest baby that ever was"; at the age of seven the verdict of the jury which sat in the general store decreed that "Linden's daughter was a little beauty."

In her teens the young men of the town showed their approval of elder judgment and the fresh-cheeked girl was courted right and left. There were no beaux left for anyone else in Raynham.

Emma Linden flirted with them all. The bare old farmhouse had little charm for her so long as she could be out of doors meeting new people and bantering her wit with that of others.

Raynham was her small world. She had never been outside it, save in those waking dreams when her books told her of the great cities and peoples that folks in Raynham scarcely ever even talked about.

DREAMED OF A PRINCE.

In those days Emma Linden read mostly fair tales. She read of gay princes who traversed the earth to find handsome princesses, and she read, too, of princes who married beautiful maidens who were not princesses at all.

She pictured as best she could what a court might be like and how a prince should appear, and she wished that some kind fairy godmother would take her out of all the humdrum of Raynham and make her a princess.

Once a straggling troupe of actors came to Raynham and played in the town hall. Emma Linden went to see them. It was a pretty poor sort of show. The tinsel was very apparent and the costumes second hand at best, but it was all very wonderful to the wide-eyed girl of fifteen.

From that day she dreamed of becoming an actress, and spent surreptitious hours learning to dance.

Daily she grew more graceful and more beautiful until it is doubtfuf if even the fairy princesses in her books could compare with her.

THEN HER FIRST "PRINCE."

Then after a while came another troupe to Raynham. At its head was Count Balbrigga, who appeared back of the footlights in tights and bespangled, the very prototype of a fairy prince.

Balbrigga was a magician, but while his hands were busily employed at magic his eyes found time to roam over his rustic audience, and they chanced upon the face of Emma Linden. It was like a lily in a bunch of wild flowers.

Balbrigga did not leave Raynham the next day. Instead he remained to find the girl who had attracted him the night before.

How the country girl's heart beat when he sought her out! Her prince had come for her at last!

"Count" Balbrigga was certainly infatuated with the country maiden. He wanted her to join his company—promised that he would marry her.

Emma turned a glad ear to his pleadings. Her dreams were coming true. She would go off with him and see all the great world she had read about.

THE SECOND CHAPTER.

Her parents consented at last, and then began the second chapter in Emma Linden's life.

Balbrigga married her and for a time all she had dreamed or hoped for in life seemed to have come true. But after awhile, as she saw more of the world, her first infatuation was over.

She came to understand that her husband was not a really truly prince after all, and the courts and pleasures she had pictured as a girl seemed far away as ever. Still she remained true to her husband, traveling with him and helping him what she could.

At last Balbrigga secured an engagement to go to Brazil. Hitherto his wife had never been outside of republican United States. He was to play before the court of the Brazilian emperor and again Emma Linden's heart leaped.

Marriage had but made her more beautiful, but now she was not the ignorant country girl, but a woman whose wit had been sharpened by contact with the world.

NOTICED BY EMPEROR.

Dom Pedro, a real live emperor, was in his box on the opening night, bedecked with gold lace and looking all that a king should look.

From the first the emperor saw nothing but the wife of the magician. Before the evening had gone he sent the Raynham girl an invitation to dine with him after the theater that very night.

At last the girl's hopes seemed likely to realized.

She accepted the invitation, clad in a simple gown which she knew best displayed her charms.

And if the emperor had been attracted to her from the footlights he was infatuated on beholding her at nearer view.

He took her driving the next day and to dine, and the next and the next and the next. Emma never went to the theater now; she was with the emperor constantly. He lavished thousands of dollars' worth of costly gems and other rich gifts upon her.

RULED AN EMPIRE.

His carriage with the emperor's coat of arms emblazoned upon it was constantly waiting at her door, the servants of the emperor were at her beck and call, and the ministers and diplomats who wished a favor in Brazil sought her influence, knowing that she was the most powerful person in all the realm, for she ruled the emperor himself.

Dom Pedro wanted to divorce his wife and make the Massachusetts girl his queen, and it is likely that he might have done this had not his enemies raised a hue and cry throughout the nation until the name of Emma Linden was cursed in the homes of the peasants on the plains.

For a summer Emma ruled a virtual queen, for three months the Raynham farmer's daughter ruled as in her childish dreams she had ruled over palace and court and state.

It was the climax to her meteoric career.

Then came the decline.

FORCED TO FLEE.

Balbrigga and the girl fled, leaving the emperor to face the storm which his illicit love had raised and which was destined ultimately to sweep him from his throne.

To return to the hard work of the stage after so brief a glimpse of luxury was hard to the girl. She carried her jewels with her from Brazil, but one by one they were sold as her good fortune deserted her.

For a few years more she and Balbrigga wandered about the land repeating the shows. Then Balbrigga died. Emma could not carry on the work alone, so it happened that one rainy morning a saddened but still handsome woman drove into Raynham and made her way to the Linden farm.

Her face had lost its freshness and in her eyes no longer lurked roguish innocence. She had seen the world for which she had craved and had now returned to the little village where she had dreamed.

Her parents were dead but the woman took charge of the farm, laid aside or sold her gay dresses, and became as one of the farmers' wives whom she had once despised and who now drew away from her.

A few years ago she married one of her own farm hands, a man by the name of Burke, so that she who ruled or a throne became the cook for a farmer's hired man.

After awhile neighbors began to shun the Linden farm as they shunned Emma. Strange stories were told, stories which finally reached the ears of the police, who swooped down and arrested the one-time favorite of an emperor, charging her with selling liquor unlawfully.

It was under this charge that she was arraigned in the Taunton court, a faded out, bedraggled woman, a ghost of the princess that was.

Sports in Which Queens Delight

Of all the mistresses of European courts, there is scarcely one who has not some ruling passion in the matter of sport. If there is an exception, she is probably the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria of Germany, whose prosaic, austere nature is almost above anything partaking of physical exercise. And perhaps that explains why at 48 she appears as old as Alexandra at 60.

At Sandringham, far from the London fogs, Queen Alexandra lives the simple life when freed from palace cares.

While not a markswoman herself, she takes keen interest in the king's hunting parties and rides out to meet the huntsmen at luncheon. Every fine morning she takes a horseback ride; this, despite the fact that she was once thrown from a horse and almost killed.

Of all the animals on the estate she is passionately fond. Her dairy is famous. It was a present from King Edward, and differs from the ordinary dairy in that it is architecturally a palace of combined Swiss and Indian design. The shelves are of white marble; the pans of silver, lined with thinest of china; the churn is of dull silver, and bronze and marble statues of cattle stand here and there on the magnificently tiled floor.

She feeds the chickens, pets her dogs, plays with her canaries and waters the roses, which are her favorite flowers. Once in a while she slips away, sits on the bank of a stream and fishes for a day. In winter she skates on a lake back of the palace. There is a fine golf course on the grounds, but the queen has never been induced to play.

But even the English queen must fall behind the ever-fascinating, ever-original, though no longer young, Margherita of Italy in love of sport, says the Philadelphia North American. No other feminine monarch would conceive such a bold thing as touring Japan and America in an automobile.

Not only this, but the Queen, who is an expert chauffeuse, will, for the most part, run the car herself. According to the plans cabled from Rome, she and a royal party propose to sail from Japan to San Francisco, tour across the country to New York and there sail for Italy. Although 55 years of age, the "Pearl of Savoy" is, thanks to her outdoor life, a robust, handsome specimen of womanhood.

Brave and determined, she has not relinquished her interest in motoring since she dashed her automobile into a barricade on an Alpine trail last year—an incident which the Italian police believed to be an attempt on the dowager's life.

After that experience, she was twice stoned by peasants; the chief cause for the attacks being, it is said, her passion for driving at high speed.

Not so passionately fond of motoring as her husband's mother, but still much given to the sport, is Queen Helene. She and King Victor Emmanuel III are often seen together in the streets of Rome and on the roads of Italy in an electric auto, driven by the king himself.

When little Ena left home last spring to become the bride of King Alphonso of Spain, there was much speculation in England as to whether in addition to changing her religion she would adhere to Spanish custom by giving sanction, by her presence, to bull fighting.

Not long did she leave the curious ones in doubt, for, shortly after the wedding, she appeared at a bull fight, in company with Dowager Marie Christine, mother of Alphonos, and Queen Amela of Portugal.

Since then she has appeared at target shoots to see her royal husband smash clay pigeons, and often takes a horseback ride with him. Still in the throes of intense love, she takes a great interest in all his personal sports. As before their marriage autoing was their chief delight, so it still remains. In the case of Ena the pronoun "they" must be used, for she and Alphonso are seldom seen apart.

In one respect, Queen Wilhelmina is situated more favorably for sport than any other sovereign, for she can leave her dominions when she pleases, while others, the Queen of Spain, for instance, must first obtain the permission of the national legislature. Thanks to this privilege, she has driven through almost every country in Europe incognito.

At home she is often seen in white riding habit cantering over the palace driveways. She is quite fond of dancing also, and during sojourns at The Hague gives teas at which the guests waltz and two-step most informally.

Hunting is the favorite sport of the Czarina Alix of Russia. With her husband, the Czar, she occupies a seat in the forest toward which peasants drive the game, and it is a simple matter for her to drop birds as they pass.

One of the chief exponents of outdoor recreation for feminine royalty is Queen Maud of Norway. Soon after her arrival in that country she exhibited a great interest in skis. Indeed, every week or so in the winter she is observed, with the king, dashing through the country on snow skies.

Moreover, she likes to coast, "sliding down hill" just like any peasant.

You can hardly call sailing on a royal float, fitted with a throne and filled with royal ladies, upon a mirror lake a sport that is strenuous, yet it is the chief recreation of Empress Tai An of China. Every summer evening when the sun begins to set her suite embark upon the royal float, and are towed about by dozens of oarsmen in a barge.

It is cool, however, and more fitted to the age of Empress Tai An who is 71, then the recreation of the Emperor of Morocco's wives would be. They race on tricycles upon the palace track.

Why So Many American Women Are NOT Beautiful

A Japanese Woman's Rules for Beauty

"I was disappointed in your American women. I had expected to find them very beautiful. They are not beautiful."

So spoke his royal highness, the Gaekwar of Baroda. And the American nation was up in arms against him.

"The English women are not at all beautiful. The women of my country are far more attractive."

So spoke the King of Cambodia, and all England was arrayed against that African potentate.

But wait. Is there no truth in what these men, half savage though we fancy them, say? asks the New York World. Are American and English women beautiful? Do they lack the charm of the French, of the Orientals? Have we been worshipping them under a delusion that they were the incarnation of all that is beautiful and pretty?

And now comes another Oriental, a Japanese, who declares that the American woman can never be beautiful until she attains the prime requisite of beauty—a soul!

There you are. No cosmetics are needed, no new way of dressing the hair, no different form of corset, no original type of heel—nothing at all, only thought!

There may be a good deal in what this Japanese woman says on the subject. At any rate, it will not hurt our American women to read what Mme Fuji-Ko, the eminent Japanese actress recently arrived here, has to complain about.

Seated in her apartments, with her black hair piled high above her childish face, her tiny figure draped in the beautifully embroidered gown of her own country, Mme. Fuji-Ko, who is woman of broad education and culture discussed the beauty of American and Japanese women, with a decided partiality for the latter. If beautiful thoughts do influence bodily perfection, then it must be admitted that Mme. Fuji-Ko has been thinking about some very lovely things. The Japanese actress is five feet in height, and her figure is exquisitely developed "Japanese women are of the type of the classic Greeks on a smaller scale," she said, without any show of personal vanity, as she extended a rounded arm tapering at the wrist and ending in a small, beautifully shaped hand.

"Oh, corset," suddenly exclaimed Mme. Fuji-Ko. "They are death to beauty of figure!"

Oh, you American women, how you do distort what nature has given you! There is no beauty which is not a reflection of nature, or nature itself. Japanese women lead natural lives, they are simple in their tastes, their minds never dwell on anything that is not good and beautiful, and the long centuries back of them have made their lasting impression upon their physical beings.

"The women of my country have beautiful bodies because they have beautiful thoughts. American women must not scoff at that statement, for if they would only believe it they, too, might make future generations of perfectly formed women.

"It will not make a woman's figure beautiful, however, for her to sit down and try and think about beautiful things It will take longer than a day's endeavor before the lasting impressions of such beautiful thinking could have a definite effect."

"So you do not think American women have beautiful thoughts?" Mme. Fuji-Ko was asked.

"Oh, in America it is always ambition or striving of some kind that crowds the thoughts of the beautiful out of the mind. American women are the great fretters. They are always worrying about something. The Japanese woman is ever placid and contented Her mind is tranquil, and therefore receptive to beauty. The long years of never changing tranquillity and patience have made her what she is.

"First of all, she is happy, for her happiness is born of the contentment that follows an acceptance of circumstances. She is a true philosopher. She is the ideal woman, moreover, for she is the expression of what nature most desires—art and beauty from the true aesthetic standpoint.

"What has thought to do with it? Everything. If a woman is continually brooding over unpleasant and ugly thoughts it affects her face first of all. If you will not admit the material subtle effects, as I understand them, that continued ugly thoughts have in bodily expression, perhaps you will admit that a discontented, worrying state of mind affects the digestive organs. Will not this have its effects on the body? This is a gross explanation, if you must have tangible expressions, but it does not bring out the effect of thoughts over body in the full sense I mean it. I believe that beautiful thoughts express themselves materially.

"The beauty of the Japanese woman is that of a grown-up child. There is nothing artificial about it. Here comes in the mental element, too. The mind of the Japanese is like a child in that it is always happy and bright. Added to the child's qualities comes tenderness. The child is the true idealist. He sees life through rosy glasses. The Japanese woman is the grown up idealist of childhood.

"It is only when the child grows up to the age of indiscretion, as I prefer to call it," said Mme. Fuji- Ko, with a fluttering movement of her small hands, "that he begins to deteriorate in thought and body.

"The trouble with American women is that they are so seldom children, even when they are mere infants. The American woman is always talking about her troubles. If she is in pain she wants every one to know it. The Japanese woman has behind her centuries of reserve, which have schooled her in a knowledge of the fact that the more you give voice to an ill the more you suffer.

"Discontent is the maker of wrinkles, and high living and fast living wear out the body. I mean by fast living just the instinctive nervousness and lack of repose that strikes one the moment the ship sails into New York harbor.

"Of course, American women have been coddled and babied in their petty complaints so that makes them more discontented than ever.

"The Japanese woman is exceedingly clean. In fact, she is the cleanest woman in the world. Her mind as well as her body is clean. She leads a simple, wholesome life, with none of the beauty-killing pastimes, such as midnight suppers and endless frivolities in which the women of America indulge.

"American women think they know what happiness means, and you will see a fashionable woman leave her home in a contented frame of mind until she chances to come in contact with some one she fancies is better dressed than she is herself. This spirit of getting ahead of every one else is killing the American woman. Soon there will be absolutely no appreciation of beauty and truth left, for there will be no time for their development. Think of this spirit of forging ahead and consider the cloisonne artisan who works contented for years upon a single vase contented to have created a thing of beauty."

"You surely will admit that American women are beautiful, whether their thoughts are placid or not?" the new beauty exponent was asked.

"Of course, there are beautiful women in America, but they spoil their beauty by trying to accentuate it. The Japanese woman is content to obey natural laws. The American woman must improve on nature. She wears the abominable corset, and what is the result? She soon needs them.

"The Japanese woman is as firm as a child, her flesh is never flabby, and her body, which is exquisitely proportioned, needs no artificial braces like the corset."

"But what about the obie? An American woman would think it worse than a corset."

"The obie, properly adjusted, is merely a tight sash wound around the waist, not so much to support the figure as to conceal the curves, which in the Japanese women are always beautiful. The obie tied in the back conceals the rounded side lines and the general contour of the figure, which would be revealed in the Japanese dress. Japanese women have exquisite figures, more beautiful than the American, but, oh, what a difference there is in revealing them! The American woman desires to show the curves of her figure."

"Then you will admit that she has them?" the little Japanese actress was asked.

"Oh, certainly she has them, and when she hasn't she finds a way to get them. The conscious pride in every curve with which the American woman walks along the street is a striking contrast to the woman of Japan, whose beautiful figure it is her one aim to veil from the public eye.

"It is this flaunting of physical attractions so indisriminately in the face of the world at large that makes the American woman's charms lose their artistic value.

"And right here the effect of thought on bodily beauty can be brought out, too. Does not this free, unashamed spirit of exhibiting the curves of a voluptuous body come from a mind which has not the aesthetic appreciation of natural beauty? The corseted accentuated figures of the American woman are fit expressions of the thoughts which are so far removed from the placid beauty-loving contentment of the daughters of the Chrysanthemum.

"The American woman puts herself out to attract, and in this obvious endeavor to accentuate the charms nature has given her she defeats every purely aesthetic principle.

"Now please do not think I am criticising American women," protested Mme. Fuji-Ko. "They are capable, attractive and well built from the standards of modern development. They are merely the expressions of what their dominant thought has made them. You cannot expect them to be artistic when their thoughts are far from beauty."

And so, if American women want to be beautiful according to purely aesthetic standards, they must follow Mme. Fuji-Ko's advice—have beautiful thoughts, and perhaps some day they will look like the Japanese women.

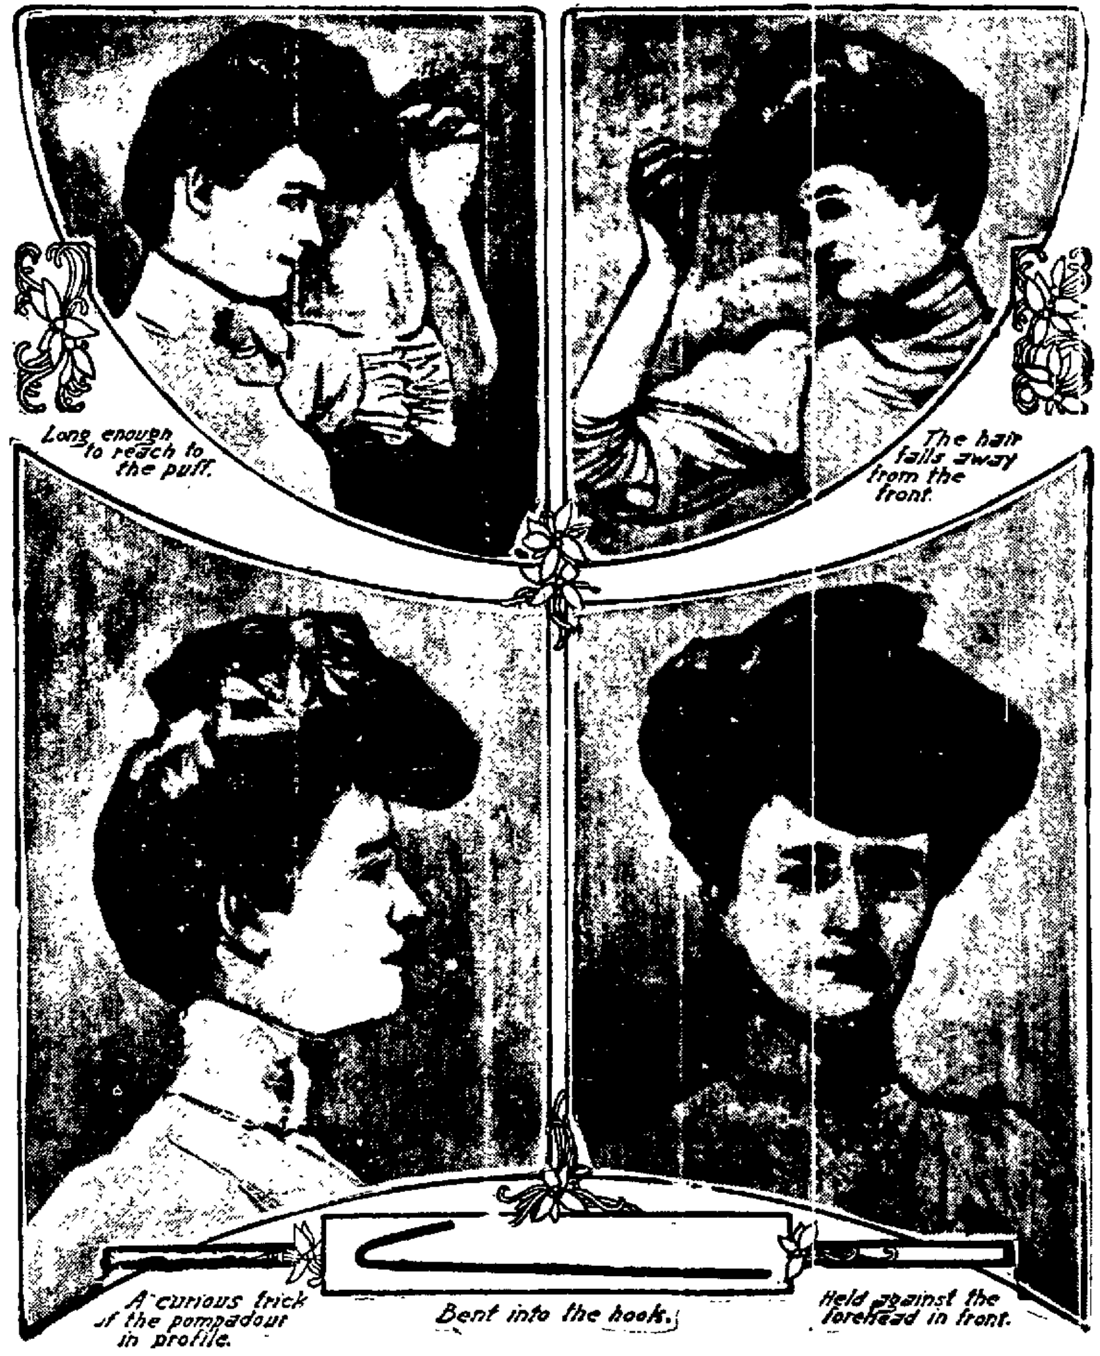
A USEFUL INVENTION OF THE FRENCH COIFFEUR'S



Long enough to reach to the puff.
The hair falls away from the front.
Bent into the hook.
Held against the forehead in front.

Trust the French for meeting promptly every emergency of fashion, and usually without much expenditure. The latest tax upon this ingenuity was the discovery of a way to accomplish the present high coiffure, which must round upward without other break than its great regular waves. Hence, no more of the faithful side comb, rendered useless by its weight.

The French "coiffeur," thus tried, was not for a minute found wanting. To appreciate his efforts it is best to describe minutely the cause that led up to such satisfactory results.

The primary part of this latest coiffure follows out a method that has been for some time in use: A part is described around the head, about three inches from the edge of the hair, dividing off the center portion. This latter is, as usual, arranged in a tight knot, not unlike a pincushion on top, while the outside portion, much ruffled in back, is taken up very loosely, though its ends are tightly twisted about the top knot.

French women prefer to use a "crepe" of false hair instead of exhausting their patience on a careful combing out, for in careless combing, not ruffing, which is unjustly blamed for it, does the breaking usually occur.

Americans, however, seem to retain a certain disdain for false hair, looking at it in an entirely different light from their French sister, who hopes that you will adjudge her coiffure pretty, and gives no further thought to you or to its morals.

Whether the foundation be false or real, it is now ready for the "chi-chi" of loose curls, or puffs, that is at this stage lightly pinned on top. It will be seen the hair so loosely gathered up is inclined to fall away in a flat, ugly manner, while in profile it often has a curious way of standing off from the forehead.

How to get the right shape was the burning question. Side combs only added to the trouble, and the very longest hairpin was not nearly long enough. The obvious thing seemed to be to make one longer. And this the French coiffeur very simply showed us how to do—by taking an ordinary hairpin, straightening out the middle bend and arranging a hook at one end—going back to the stiletto principle.

A hairpin so fashioned is five or six inches long, so that when it is pushed through the pompadour there is an end which is stuck into the tight knot, with long enough purchase to hold the angle at which it is adjusted. This angle holds the hair out and upward at the sides and against the forehead in front.

If the hair were taken away there would be found a semicircle of pins resembling the half of a halo—the whole of which is merited without question by the inventor who has obtained for us that most grateful of all things, a comfortable, secure hair dressing.

For the bending process has made even those tiresome little objects known as invisible hairpins eminently useful. By arranging a tiny hook in one end they will hold quite permanently the invisible net or rebellious lock, instead of slipping into your eyes or down your neck at a fatal moment, according to their former habit.

THE BEST ATUHORITY.

The cleverest of lawyers occasionally find their match when engaged in their favorite occupation of breaking down an opponent's witness; and this frequently occurs in the case of "horsy" individuals.

"Now, I ask you, sir, under what authority you are prepared to swear to the mare's age?"

"Under what authority?" said the hostler, interrogatively.

"You are to reply and not repeat the question put to you."

"I don't consider a man's bound to answer a question afore he's time to turn it in his mind."

"Nothing can be more simple, sir, than the question put, and I repeat it: Under what authority do you swear to the animal's age?"

"The bes authority," said the witness, gruffly.

"Then why such an evasion? Why not state at once?"

"Well, then, if you must have it—"

"Must! I will have it!" thundered the counsel, interrupting the witness.

"Well, if you must and will have it," rejoined the hostler, with imperturbable gravity, "why, then, I had it myself from the mare's own mouth."—Chicago Journal.

SURE SYSTEM AT MONTE CARLO.

Conversation overheard on a train for Monte Carlo. Two travelers, unknown to each other chattering familiarly:

"On your way to Monte Carlo sir, that delightful and exclusive home for gamblers?"

"That is exactly where I am going."

"And you will play a little, I suppose?"

"I do nothing else, sir, it is my business."

"Gracious; you don't mean to say you make a business of it?"

"Yes, sir; twice a day regularly, and I never by any chance lose."

"In that case perhaps you will explain your 'system' to me."

VELOCITY OF A BULLET.

A bullet which was fired by a charge sufficient to give it an initial velocity of 1700 feet a second in dry weather would travel at no more than 1800 feet through moist air.

OLDEST ROYAL HOUSE.

The oldest royal house in Europe is that of Mecklenburg. They trace their descent from Genseric, who sacked Rome in A. D. 455.

The Making of a Markswoman

Practice.

Things She Must Learn to Do.

"What possible pleasure can men find in tramping about over fields or through forests with guns on their shoulders?" queried a stately matron the other day. "My husband is never satisfied unless he can get away each fall on a gunning and camping expedition."

Had she addressed the question to a crowd of women there would probably have been quite a number who could have given a ready answer, comments the Philadelphia North American.

For the number of women "sportsmen" is increasing each year, especially of those who go after big game, and they are as enthusiastic as the men in praise of this form of outdoor pleasure.

It is something of a canard now to assert that a woman cannot shoot a gun. Just how simple a matter it is to learn is told below by one who has handled firearms since her fourteenth year, and has trailed big game almost as frequently as she has sought quail in the fields or snipe along the waterways.

In the first place, says this woman who knows, the female beginner must become accustomed to handling and discharging the firearm, whether it be a rifle, shotgun or revolver.

One of the earliest lessons, which must never be forgotten, is that you should not draw back or flinch as you pull the trigger. Such motion tends to raise the muzzle and alter the aim. When firing at a distant object with a rifle a deflection of a fraction of an inch will send the bullet astray.

In order to shoot well one must practice, just as one learns anything else by constant application. A great deal is almost instinctive in shooting, and it can only be done well through thorough acquaintance with the weapon and its use.

Rifle shooting is different from using the shotgun, or fowling piece, with a rifle one usually shoots at stationary objects, or, at least, at large game.

Smaller game, generally quick moving, is usually the quarry of the shotgun sportsman. The bird piece, therefore, must be handled more speedily than the rifle, and there is not the same opportunity for accurate aim. That is why a load of shot is made to distribute itself over a larger space in its flight.

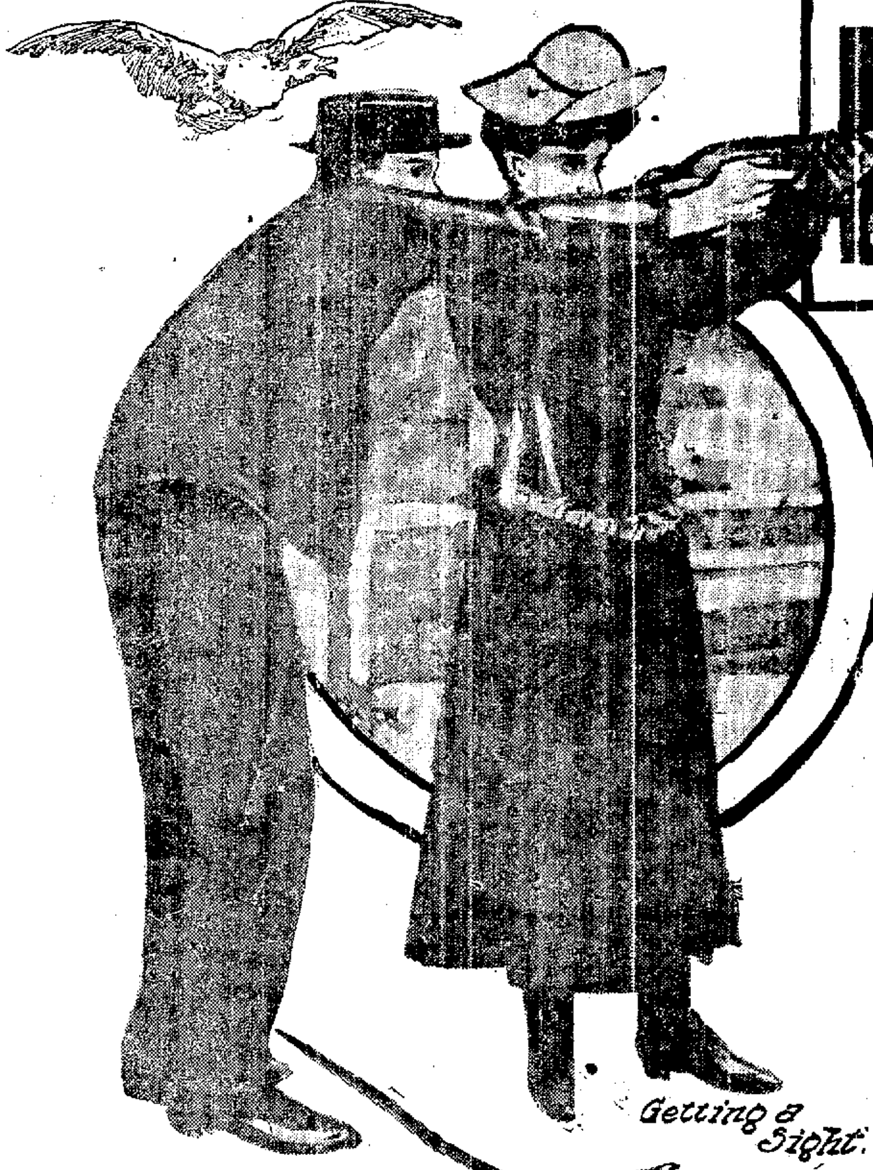
Aspiring to become an expert with the rifle, a woman should begin shooting with a small piece, generally known as the cat-and-rat rifle. It is of light weight, easily handled, yet at the same time affords adequate practice in handling, aiming and firing. She can find excellent practice in beginning in the shooting galleries found in nearly all cities.

With this little 22-calibre affair is used what is called a BB cap, or else a "22 short" cartridge. It is important to have the stock of the right length; one that will permit the rifle to be adjusted readily and easily to the shoulder.

In bringing the piece up to position for firing, the butt of the stock should fit the arm at the shoulder joint. Some women rest the butt a little lower on the arm, but in this position the piece, especially a shotgun, is more apt to kick.

Hold the gun firmly against the shoulder. This is important, if one wishes to avoid the kick. In making a wheeling shot the upper part of the body should be turned to follow the direction in which the gun is pointed.

TARGET PRACTICE.



Getting a Sight.

The Wrong Way. Impossible to Get a Sight.

A Difficult Shot On the Wing.

For practice with the cat-and-rat rifle, pin a small paper disc to a tree trunk, or place a tomato can on a fence, and blaze away at it. Keep this up until proficiency in aim is acquired.

Good practice is afforded by shooting frogs in the marshes. Frogs can be killed with the BB caps, while the "22 shorts" will slay a rabbit or a pigeon.

Feeling in time that she has become a good marksman with the small rifle, the ambitious woman should take up the regular size—a 32- or 38-caliber. With this she can materially increase her range until she finds herself plugging away with confidence at a distance of 500 yards.

Let her try her accuracy of aim at a bird in a tree or a crow sitting meditatively upon a fence on the other side of a five-acre field.

When she can drop one of these with ease she is ready to pack her outfit and hie away with husband or father to the shooting camp in the northern woods.

The Old Campaigner and a Novice.

To attain proficiency with the shotgun, or bird piece, a somewhat different course of practice is necessary. One should not begin with a small gun, in the first place, but with a regular weapon.

One of seven pounds is heavy enough. Some women begin with a five-pound, single-barrel piece. The muzzle should never be permitted to rest in line with any other person. When climbing a fence hold it toward the ground, and never draw the gun toward you, muzzle foremost.

Accidents from handling shotguns are comparatively rare, considering the number of gunners, and those that occur are usually due to carelessness.

The person practicing with this weapon should shoot at moving objects. No true sportsman will ever shoot a bird or rabbit that is still, and as the woman is preparing for the enjoyment of sport she should observe its ethics.

At the beginning one should overcome the natural impulse toward haste to shoot too quickly. With a bird in its flight or a target sent flying aloft, there is always a certain moment when the object is easier to hit than at its start. Then, too, the gunner must take time to steady herself for careful aim.

The gun should have what is called an easy trigger—one that is easily pulled—a hair trigger has no place on a shotgun. When using a hammerless gun, always see that the "safety" is closed except when preparing to shoot. This will prevent accidental discharge, as the gun cannot be fired when the "safety" pin is in place.

For field shooting, a seven-pound, double-barrel, 16-bore shotgun is an excellent weapon for a woman. In some places it is difficult to obtain 16-bore ammunition, as a 12-gauge is the standard size, so that an ample supply of shells should be taken on a trip.

Successful women gunners have the right barrel of their gun of the ordinary cylinder type and the left barrel a choke-bore—smaller at the muzzle than at the breech. The first scatters the shot. the second carries the load in a bunch.

When a flock of birds springs up at your feet you may wish to fire into it at random, and you have a better chance of bringing down one or more if the load of shot scatters.

As the birds get farther away you select an individual flier, and to bring it down the shot should be hurled after it well bunched.

But to begin practice—the best results in the way of proficiency are found in shooting at clay pigeons sprung from traps. These rise at unexpected angles, go skimming through the air, and afford a thoroughly satisfactory target.

Many women, however, do not have traps available. These can practice at tomato cans or other objects thrown into the air.

An apple orchard forms an excellent practice shooting gallery. Have some one pick up apples on the point of a sharpened stick and hurl them into the air. Shooting through or between trees qualifies one for bringing down game birds that may be raised in a wood.

Different birds have different manners of flight. Excellent practice is afforded by the river snipe, which has a swift but flat flight.

The flicker is a difficult bird to shoot, its flight being quick and dashing. Somewhat similar is that of a meadow lark.

After practicing until she is able to hit a can tossed aloft, or an apple thrown with considerable speed, the gunner should take to the fields or woods in search of real game, for, after all, the best practice is at whatever is the object of the sportsman.

DISCONCERTING EXPERIENCES.

One can never become accustomed to the startling upward jump of the pheasant or the swift, eccentric flight of the woodcock by shooting at tin cans.

Each woman should learn to clean and care for her own rifle or shotgun. She should be able to take it apart and fit the pieces together again. This gives her an acquaintance with the mechanism that is useful in the field. After a gunning trip near the water the piece should be oiled to prevent rusting.

"Woman is more or less of a dilettante in such sport," remarked the one who gave the above as the results of her experience. "She can learn to shoot well, but she balks at some of the features of killing game.

"It is the hardest thing in the world for a woman to pull the trigger upon a deer, for instance—at any rate, until she has done so several times. It seems to her like murder to shoot down the big, handsome thing in cold blood.

"Deer shooting is usually done from blinds, at what are called 'deer licks.' When the animal approaches these haunts and begins to lick the earth or sip the water, the hunter gets his or her chance.

"Then, too, a kind of stage fright seizes you when your first specimen of big game appears. You become excited, and, as a general thing, forget all about having a rifle.

"In gunning for birds the hunter frequently cripples one without killing it. The humane thing to do is to break its neck by a quick bite of the teeth, but not many women can bring themselves to the point of doing this.

"There is no reason why a woman should not become a good shot with a bird gun, and thoroughly enjoy the sport. The exercise of tramping the fields is certainly beneficial.

"Let her bear in mind, when she first goes on a hunt, to keep her wits and not be startled by the sudden rising of the birds as they spring upward for flight. And she must not shoot too quickly. If the birds get thirty yards or more away before she pulls the trigger, the shot will overtake them.

"Just how much she must aim in front of a bird that is flying across her path, or above or below it when it is rising or descending, must be learned by practice. In a little while she will be able to judge the point where shot and bird will meet.

"At a certain point of its flight the bird becomes almost stationary when flying directly from you, poised at the apex of some angle of its way; then is the time to pull the trigger.

"The matter of costume is one that should be carefully considered. The woman who is venturing into the northern woods after big game, for example, cannot wear the ordinary woolen outfit that would be possible in the quail fields.

"Boots are not satisfactory; they bother one in climbing fences or over fallen tree trunks. Heavy shoes should be worn, with leather leggings coming well up to the knees.

"It is important to wear buckskin or canvas trousers under the skirt, else one will suffer severely from brier wounds, and these are liable to become poisoned from contact with harmful vegetation.

"The trousers should not be cut like bloomers, but like a man's riding breeches, should fit tightly below the knee, covered there by the top of the leggins. Flannel or mohair will not prove satisfactory material for these trousers because such goods are too easily torn by brambles.

"In the fields such heavy trousers are not as necessary, and a longer skirt may be worn, extending, say, to three inches below the knee when hunt. Shorter skirts are needed in the woods, coming about to the lower edge of the knee cap. A corduroy skirt is excellent.

"I wear a coat short in back and front. It has five pockets; a large one on each side for game. Ammunition may be carried in the pockets or in a belt. It is best not to load oneself down with shells or cartridges. One seldom has occasion to use more than ten or a dozen rifle cartridges a day. The remainder of the supply should be left in camp.

"Color of the costume must be considered in planning a trip after deer. These animals recognize white at a great distance. It is best to dress in khaki, dark blue or dark brown

"When women become better acquainted with the pleasures of hunting, many more will be perfecting themselves in the use of shotgun and rifle."

THE CANNED FOOD ERA.

Fifty years ago gentlewomen prided themselves upon their good housekeeping. The care of house and children was their chief object in life. They took a pershonal interest in their servants and treated them as friends of the family. Many they had known from childhood and trained themselves; and so when the servants became wives and mothers, they were also good housekeepers. Thus the knowledge was handed on from mother to daughter, and middle-class and cottage homes were well kept and cared for. Nowadays girls are taught almost everything under the sun except housekeeping.

"You can pick it up by instinct," most girls will tell you. This is a great mistake. Housekeeping is by no means easy work. It is one of the most exacting of occupations, for directly you slacken your energies things begin to go wrong.

As a rule, a woman who has been used to the bustle of business does not take kindly to household affairs. She finds the life dull, and dislikes being what she calls "cooped up."

ENGLISH REVISION.

De Wolf Hopper has joined the movement led by Brander Mathews and Andrew Carnegie for the simplification of English. Mr. Hopper declares that this great and good work should not end in the adoption of phonetic spelling. "Why not simplify our grammar as well?" inquires Mr. Hopper, "Why, for example, use one pronoun to refer to a man, another to refer to a woman, and a third to refer to an object? I look forward to the time when it shall be perfectly proper to say that a herd of babies set up a plaintive snort, or that a flock of elephants growled in unison."

Betty Martin Tells About Constance Crawley

Constance Crawley lives in the twenty-six hundred block on Telegraph avenue just now, but do not for one minute delude yourself into the belief that her dwelling place is within the city limits of Oakland.

It isn't!

I thought so once, but learned better. I started off for the interview in blissful certainty that the house must be somewhere in the vicinity of Twenty-sixth street, only to learn that the numbering begins in Berkeley town. That classic burg, then, is Mrs. Crawley's home for the present, at least. Once she stopped in Oakland, but that's another story, if you care to read on.

I finally came upon two hatless young men swinging idly in a hammock under the trees; two more sitting on the porch rail, indolently swinging their silk-stockinged feet; opposite, a fair-haired child by the side of a woman in a low rocker; a rosy-cheeked, pleasant mannered young girl with rhinestone side-combs who took my card; another man, possibly a shade handsomer than the others, who stood aside with marked politeness as I entered the door and discovered Constance Crawley over in the corner, comfortably ensconced in a billow of soft cushions.

She half rose, resting her cheek on one hand and reaching the other, laden with its wealth of barbaric good-luck rings, to clasp my own. Curious habit, that of handshaking, isn't it?

"How do you do?" The long-lashed brown eyes swept me with a measuring glance. "I'm sorry not to be able to get up, but I sprained my ankle one day at the Metropole — not badly — but sprains are queer things, don't you know—and I'm not going to use my foot until Friday at the matinee. I can't go out, so my people come here to me. We're having a rehearsal now."

This was a long speech, made in a soft drawl and with a decidedly English accent. At its conclusion, Mrs. Crawley leaned among her cushions, and swept back her hair with that well-known stage gesture.

"Don't let me interrupt——" I began, mechanically noting the heavy links of dull gold in the chain about her slender throat.

"Oh, not at all, not at all. I can spare the time to talk to you and finish the rehearsal later. Do sit down."

"But I don't like to interrupt you——" This time I noted that she had on a black skirt and a white silk shirt waist, with a lace yoke, slightly decollete.

"Oh, really, I can spare the time. It's rather enjoyable, rehearsing this way—so different from the musty theaters. I rather like it, having the company around like this." Again the slender hand waved in the direction of the porch.

"Have you your own company with you?"

"Oh, no! I brought over my own company to Los Angeles and arrived just three days before the earthquake. The manager down there seemed to think that that invalidated his agreement with me, so there I was. I had to send two of my people back to England. And I've picked up one here and another there." It's rather enjoyable, this having one's private opinion confirmed. There has been all along a sort of under the rose impression that the company had been "picked up," but no one, so far, has ventured to say so, except Mrs. Crawley herself.

"That was rather a predicament."

"Rather! Just think of it. There I was, with these enormous expenses and no income, when finally it was suggested that I do these 'liter'ry' plays twice a week. The club women took it up and were quite enthusiastic about it. We had large audiences and the ladies down there are very charming. They gave me teas and receptions and all sorts of things. And then I came up here and have been doing these 'liter'ry' matinees while I'm waiting for my new theater over in San Francisco."

"I didn't know they were building one."

"Yes. The Colonial. Haven't you heard of it?"

"No. Where is it being built?"

"Just opposite the City Hall. I'm having the front of the house done in red lights, so's to give it atmosphere."

"In—in what did you say?" The term "red lights" has a peculiar sound and I wasn't sure that I'd heard her distinctly.

"Red lights," confirmed Mrs. Crawley, running both slender hands through her hair, and exposing a high forehead. "I've had several theaters done in that way. The electric lights are all enclosed in red globes. You know to people coming in from the outside—from the glare—it's effective—gives a sort of air—atmosphere, don't you think so?"

"At any rate, it'll be something new."

"Oh, how I l-o-v-e San Francisco," continued Mrs. Crawley, enthusiastically. "Do you know, I always regarded it as the only city in the world like Paris—New York not excepted. There is no other place like it. I love it! I've been over to several receptions and teas, and they tell me they're simply starving for something like my plays—it's been so long since they've had anything that way."

"Do you think enough of the old set remains for that? You know they've scattered so."

"Well, it looks like it. They had to turn five hundred people away."

"Turn them away? Then you've played over there already?" This was my surprise.

"I was booked to, in a tent, but, really, I couldn't. I suppose Mr. Howell thought as Bernhardt had played in a tent I could; but really I could not. He told me everything was simply perfect, and I believed him—maybe," she spoke reflectively and without an apparent trace of sarcasm—"maybe Mr. Howell thought it was perfect. I've found him straightforward in everything else."

"Is Mr. Howell a Western man?"

"He's a San Franciscan."

"That's why he thinks a tent's all right then."

"Anyway I'm to give two matinees a week at the Colonial."

"What are you to appear in?"

"Some that I've played over here, and 'Mr. and Mrs. Daventry,' 'Gioconda,' 'Juliet,' 'The Shrew,' and, oh, I do love to play 'Juliet!'" Here the two hands clasped themselves enthusiastically. "I like to get away from these boy parts. I don't think it's good to be always playing them. And I have so many boy costumes! Modjeska wanted me to play 'Hamlet'—here Mrs. Crawley smiled—but I like to play other things. I think 'Juliet' is the most charming creature."

"But if you're suited to the male impersonations?"

"Oh, I know—" the reply came with almost an American quickness, instead of the long drawn vowels and soft drawl—"but sometimes I like to do the other. Then—" here a sigh and a half laugh—"one's friends are always after one to go back."

So there you are. That's the story in a nutshell.

"And in San Francisco," continued she, taking up the thread again, "I'm going to play the 'Ballad Monger'—a most charming bit—just one scene, and it takes only about forty minutes to do it. Oh, but it's b-e-a-u-t-i-f-u-l. It's all in verse, a translation from the French. The curtain rises upon a parlor; a woman is seated, singing a love song. Outside is heard the rabble, singing, too. Suddenly the king enters. He inquires about the noise outside. Some one tells him it is the Ballad Monger. 'Bring him in,' commands the king. You know the Ballad Monger's verses all incite the people to rebellion against the king. After he enters the king orders him to sing these songs. He does so and becomes so enthused that he forgets who he's singing before. When he ends, the command is that he be guillionutined, but the sentence will be set aside if he can make the most beautiful woman in France fall in love with him within a stated time. After pronouncing sentence the king leaves the room. In it remains the Ballad Monger and the woman who had been singing. She is, of course, the most beautiful woman, and he wins her love. But haven't I got a cozy little place here?" Mrs. Crawley directed her gaze about the room, with its many home-like comforts.

"Indeed it is, and quite artistic."

"Not so much so as it will be a little later on. I haven't had time to do what I want to."

"I thought you were stopping at Cloyne Court?"

"I was for awhile, but I got tired of stuffy hotels. And then you know, I have Dooley—you've heard of him?"

"I—I believe so."

"He's a little monkey only so high—"the two hands measured in space about a foot, or perhaps nine inches—"whom I love above everything, and the hotel people don't treat him with the consideration I think he deserves. And he's so happy here, he has a yard, fenced in, all to himself, and five little kittens to play with, and he's perfectly content."

Fortunate Dooley! And out at the Ladies Relief Society's home lies a fat little boy of nine pounds, or thereabouts, waiting for a home with somebody to love him. May the gods discover for him as soft a berth as that upon which Dooley has fallen. I had heard of Dooley! Yes. Rumors had reached my ears regarding a certain obdurate hotel man who scorned Dooley's claims to consideration, even to the extent of denying him admission to his mistress's private apartments. There were whispers floating about—possibly mere vulgar rumors—of an unsuccessful attempt to smuggle Dooley within the sacred room. Other tales gained ground telling of discovery, and Dooley's rout, also the exit of the lady, who refused to be separated from her pet. Hotel man number two of Oakland is reputed to have been equally unfeeling, and even at Cloyne Court up in the hills of North Berkeley, the learned Professors and their wives are said to have regarded Dooley and his pranks with gentle disfavor. But all this I cannot vouch for. It came to me as gossip, and as such I pass it along, not deeming it part of the interview; that was the reason I didn't ask Mrs. Crawley about Dooley.

"Are you going to live here while you're playing in San Francisco?"

"Yes. All the time. They say I can get over to the theater in forty minutes. I'm keeping house here. I have my maid, and I'm going to get a Chinaman. And I can have musicales, and all sorts of nice times." Which remark indicates that Constance Crawley enjoys social life quite as much as the glitter of the footlights—or maybe it's the combination which is so fetching. "My friends say they're coming here to serenade me." Then she began to talk of San Francisco again.

There was no other city in the world like it. You know in New York anything goes that's been accepted in London. "Whatever London approves suits the New Yorker. Anyway, you can't tell so much about the people there—there's such a large Italian population. But in San Francisco its different. San Franciscans judge for themselves. They'll sit through a whole act—silent—with not a smile. Then if they like a thing they like it and they don't hesitate to condemn, either. It must be that big mountain chain that divides them—it individualizes them. Ah! They're delightful!"

"Do you think it will be that way now?"

"Yes. They tell me so!"

"But the city has changed. All those delightful associations are broken up. You know many of the people of wealth have gone abroad; some of them are never on this side the bay; and the Bohemians and artists are scattered to the four winds of Heaven."

"I know," said she "but the city looks much the same after one reaches Van Ness avenue. And there are ever so many charming friends of mine over there."

"Yes."

"What did you think of the audience?"

"Thank you, Mrs. Crawley, for not asking me what I thought of the performance. It was wonderful. I never have seen another to equal it."

"Wasn't it tremendous! Two thousand more people than the time that Bernhardt played here."

"Yes," thought I, "but you forget that exquisite symphony that was brought to your aid. The charm and novelty of the thing—the magic of the moonlight night and the betwitching harmonies of the times. Bernhardt had no such adventitious assistance. She came, heralded only by her great art; she spoke, moreover, in her native tongue, and in the garish light of the afternoon; at a time, too, when hearts were heavy with losses and disaster.

"We took in," continued Miss Crawley, proudly, "ten hundred pounds. And two years ago, when we were here, the highest receipts for one performance were nine hundred pounds."

What a tribute to our native generosity. That we Californians present lump sums of four and five thousand dollars to player-folk when they tickle our fancy!

"What playwrite is your favorite?" I enquired. But Miss Crawley was not to be drawn into a discussion on Ibsen or Maeterlink.

"I adore Shakespeare" she replied. "It is always safe to adore the Bard of Avon. His Juliet—and the Shrew—I love them both."

"And these other plays you've been giving, do you think they're appreciated?"

"Well, I don't know. Some-one said the other day in 'Hedda Gabbler,' that half the audience didn't understand what they were listening to. But if they didn't they're simply wonderful. They sit there like this—listening—" Mrs. Crawley leaned forward, with intense gaze. "You could hear a pin drop! English women fuss with their hair and pat their sleeves, or pull their laces; they get restless. But American women are wonderful—wonderful! They're ahead of the men."

"Do you think so?"

"Why, yes. "Don't you?"

"The women are so alert—their minds are so active—they're so advanced! The men are busy all the time with business. They hurry through luncheon, and talk business all the time. And in the evening if they're at a social gathering, I notice a tendency to gather in groups in a corner to discuss business matters. They don't seem to pay any attention to things of the—"

"Perhaps they haven't any?"

"Perhaps," came the reply, "it's their hearts."

I gave it up. To my prosaic mind the money-making habit's a pretty good one and the American man the salt of the earth, even if he is absorbed in business. He makes a pretty fair sort of husband, anyway.

"Now, an Englishman is always the head of the family He only works when he's forced to. And even then, you'll see him issue from luncheon with a little volume bound in vellum in his hands."

"Then your companions are in favor of—?"

"Ah," was the diplomatic reply, "I'm drawing no comparisons. I'm only stating things as they are. But American women certainly are a revelation!"

"After you finish in San Francisco what do you intend to do then?"

"Really, I don't know. I should like to have money enough—I don't care for money except to do with—to travel about with a congenial company—that is, a company as congenial as may be. I give my plays in different countries. I should like to spend a couple of months in my beloved London, and I'd like to play in Malta. I'd love to produce English plays in Malta. You know the Italians say that English is the language of the birds—and do you know what they say about German?"

I confessed my ignorance

"They say German is the language of the beasts. Folks tell me I shouldn't say this, but I do, anyhow!"

"A week's too short a time to stay any place. One can't do justice to one's self. But I wouldn't like to play any part longer than three months. Once I did for a whole year, stay in one place, and I thought I go mad You've no idea how monotonous it becomes."

"I must be going—your people will be getting restless"

"Yes, I suppose I'll have to begin again. You see I have two rehearsals every day. One before dinner and one in the evening. So dinner time's the only hour I have to talk. I'm going to dine tonight somewhere up in the hills."

"At Piedmont?"

"I believe it must be. But you see I don't have much time. I believe in rehearsal and rehearsal!"

"And your company?"

"They believe as I do," came the prompt reply.

Then began the struggle with my gloves. I was very thankful that I put them on before leaving, considering Constance Crawley's comment.

"I'll never forget what my mother used to say, 'A lady puts her gloves on in the house; a servant on the doorstep, and other folks anywhere.' Goodby, I'm pleased to have met you."

WATCHES AFFECTED BY OWNERS' HABITS

The most uncanny of all machines is the smallest and oddest—the watch. A jeweler might write the ideal story of watch personality. Notes for it continually appear in the technical journals of that trade.

Watches may be accurately tested and adjusted at a factory so that they will run alike in boiling water or frozen in the heart of an ice cake. Yet when they are sold and worn their mechanical movements are immediately affected by the individuality and habits of their wearers. A woman's watch is a joke to every one but a jeweler. To him it is a mystery. Irregular winding won't explain all the vagaries of a woman's watch and the cause must be sought in its fair owner's habits. Probably when a woman learns to eat her meals regularly and keep office hours her watch will run on time.

Men of irregular habits have trouble with watches, too, and one of the principal factors to be taken into account when a new watch is being adjusted to its wearers personality is the owner's occupation. Some men have work that calls for eccentric movements of the body and these often cause trouble with watches. Often a jeweler trying to adjust a new watch to such a wearer will give it to another person in the same occupation, when it goes all right. Personality enters into the equation in a mysterious way. Some men never have to have a watch adjusted, but can carry even a cheap dollar affair for years, and get from it better service than other men get from a costly Swiss movement. Motormen, street car conductors and workmen employed in the neighborhood of electrical machinery usually carry cheap dollar watches. For the finest watch may be subtly shocked at any moment and after that it is almost worthless. Nobody knows when the shock will come. It may occur without the wearer of the watch being conscious of it. Suddenly the mechanism runs wild or stops and is permanently out of business. The dollar watch, which is really a small clock mechanically, will also be ruined by electric shock, but the loss is nominal.

Jewelers tell of men who, when given a number of watches of different value movements and nationalities, never succeed in finding one that will run for them; any watch carried by these individuals stops. A man came into a jeweler's some time ago and handed over his watch, saying that three mechanics had labored over it without avail and that if this jeweler could not transform it into an effective time-piece he would throw it away. On examination the mechanism looked all right and when the watch was kept for two weeks by the jeweler it ran, to the second. But when the owner got it again it stopped within two days His wife carried it and it went again, but as soon as her husband took the timepiece it stopped. In conversation it was learned that this man had gone to Hot Springs, Arkansas, a few months before, where he took treatment for rheumatism. Since that, no watch he carried would go long. Timepieces that had given faithful service to others for years would stop when he borrowed them. These eccentricities are caused by vague influences, probably more mechanical than occult. Some jewelers attribute them to "personal magnetism" and others to "electricity in the atmosphere." They are so delicate, however, as to defy the subtlest analysis and investigation.

COLORS SOCIETY IS WEARING.

The society colors this season are numerous and conspicuous. Among them can be mentioned azealea pink and geranium red. There can also be mentioned khaki brown, which is undergoing a renaissance and is now being used a great deal for fall garments. To this list can be added Holland brown, which is very smart for the woman of the season. And there can also be mentioned straw, tan and ecru, all of which are immensely popular.

In the trousseau of one of the fashionable brides of the fall there will be one gown each of the following tints: One butter-colored dress of taffeta, with trimmings of white; one wood brown gown, with trimmings of tan; one pineapple pink cloth, with strappings of black; one all khaki gown There will also be costumes in straw, bottle green, emerald, rose, petty, ecru and tan. And thus one gets an idea of the variety of [illegible] [illegible] in the trousseau of a bride of the season.

THE PASSING SHOW

TO BOOK FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

Sydney M Hyman, the London manager of the Empire, Johannesburg, and the Tivoli, Cape Town, South Africa, has arrived in New York on his annual visit. He has come over for express purpose of booking headliners for his houses, and will stop at no salary in order to secure the acts that strike him favorably. The Americans who have visited South Africa have been loud in their praises of the delights of the trip and the treatment accorded them by the managers and the public, and Mr. Hyman's time while here will be spent in encouraging others to follow their example The chance of seeing a strange country, with all traveling expenses paid and a good salary in addition, is one that should not be overlooked Artists who are considering the matter are invited to communicate with Mr Hyman, care of Robert D. Girard, whose office is in room 716, Browning-King building 1265 Broadway, New York Performers would do well to give the name of the theater at which they may be playing, and the exact time at which they appear as Mr Hyman's time is limited, and he will have a great deal of ground to cover during his stay

NEW THEATER AT DANVILLE, ILL.

T W Barhydt and Jack Hoeffler of Terre Haute, Ind, are the owners of the beautiful new $60,000 vaudeville theater which is about completed and will be opened October 15 with high-class vaudeville, prices ranging from 10 to 35 cents The building is situated south of the Grand Opera House on North Vermillion street and covers a lot 100 feet wide and 200 feet long The front of the building is finished in white glazed brick and will be studded with 500 incandescent lights The auditorium will seat 1000 and the stage will have all the up-to-date improvements The acts will be booked by the Keith office and will come direct from the Majestic theater Chicago Fred W Hartman a young man of wide theatrical experience, is to be the resident manager, and Dayton Payne will be the musical director

FRED NIBLO RETURNS

Fred Niblo after a remarkable success at the Palace London has arrived in New York He and his wife Josephine Cohan opened at the new Albaugh theater in Baltimore managed by Irwin and Leuscher They will be able to play only twenty two weeks, which are already booked and will sail on February 3 for a trip through Spain prior to Mr Niblo's return engagement at the Palace that begins April 1 This will last for ten weeks, and on June 15 Mr and Mrs Niblo will start for South Africa to fill joint engagements in Johannesburg and Cape Town

ANOTHER BIG TEAM.

Thomas Q Seabroke and Pauline Hall have made arrangements to go into vaudeville as a team in a condensed version of one of the musical pieces in which Mr Seabrooke formerly starred Their tour will be booked by Robert Grau who is back in the agency business for good and announces that he will have several big surprises of the same kind to spring on the public before the season has progressed very far

TO FORM BIG ORGANIZATION.

Max Konorah Berol and his brother, William Berol, who are presenting an act with the Orpheum Show, have been carrying on negotiations since their arrival in New York that are of the greatest possible interest to all vaudeville performers Max Berol is president of the International Artists Lodge of Germany a very powerful organization, and William Berol represents the Variety Artists Federation of England Their object is to try to arrange an affiliation between the bodies they represent and the organizations on this side of the water A conference was held between the Messrs Berol and committees from the White Rats and the Comedy club The whole matter was carefully gone over but no definite conclusion was arrived at, the matter being of such magnitude that it will require several months of careful study before it can be brought to a satisfactory conclusion It is not likely that the Comedy club will join the movement but the indications are that the White Rats which are growing in strength every day, will come to some sort of an agreement that will bind the three big organizations for their mutual protection If the deal goes through the total membership will number over $10,000 Oswald Stoll, the famous English manager, sailed for New York and it is said that while there he will urge upon American managers the necessity of forming some sort of an alliance to oppose the proposed federation of artists An organization of European managers was recently formed for this purpose, and it is said that it takes in the proprietor of every variety theater of any importance in every city in Europe

THE FAYS IN COURT.

John T and Eva Fay appeared in the Supreme court before Justice Neuberger recently applying for an injunction to restrain Herbert Lambourne known on the stage as Chauncey Herbert and Louis Granat from using the name "The Fays," in connection with a specialty produced by the defendants called The Flamaturgists Counsel for the Fays told the court that the defendants had entered the employ of the plaintiffs for the purpose of learning their secrets, and had on July 16 broken into their apartments and removed several books that were used as the basis of the 'Flamaturgists' skit Moses H Grossman counsel for the defendants submitted lengthy affidavits from his clients in which the alleged methods of the Fays were gone into in minute detail Justice Neuberger says "A careful reading of the plaintiffs affidavits fails to disclose any facts that would warrant the intervention of a court of equity The motion for an injunction must therefore be denied"

THURSTON'S TOUR.

Howard Thurston in a letter received recently gives some interesting details of his tour The letter is as follows 'With a company of sixteen people including Winfield Blake, Maude Amber, Beatrice Foster and twelve stage assistants I left New York City for a tour of the world in April 1905 We have visited Honolulu the Fiji Islands, New Zealand Australia Tasmania the Philippine Islands China and Japan and are now returning to play a special engagement at the Taiping theater, Hongkong China The Taiping is managed and patronized by Chinese exclusively We have met with continued success at every stand, playing nine months in Australia, four weeks in Manila four weeks in Hongkong and six weeks in Shanghai to tremendous business Of the countries visited so far Australia has proven the most profitable There are great possibilities in Australia and New Zealand for good companies The people are especially fond of Americans and never fail to give a foreign company a 'bumper' house the opening night but they demand merit especially as all of George Edwardes London successes are produced by J C Williamson as well as many of the best American plays One never feels like a foreigner in the land of the Southern Cross There are only a few companies however, that succeed in the Orient owing to the great expense for travel and the small English-speaking population Our tour has been exceptionally successful as we appeal to the native as well as the European At Manila Hongkong, and Shanghai we played two extra weeks in each city for the natives only Japan was a great disappointment to us in every way Since the war the duties have reached a prohibitive point on everything used by foreigners and many of the Europeans are leaving Yokohama and Kobe are the only cities containing a foreign theater or hall, and there are not more than 1500 Europeans in either place A circus or any performance of merit not depending on language, will do well in China, as the Chinese are fond of amusement and will pay a high price for admission

WHY THE BAND DISBANDED.

Will M Cressy, whose beautiful summer home on Lake Sunapee, N H, is the scene of many enjoyable 'affairs" given to his friends and neighbors, was put to some inconvenience not long ago on account of a letter he received from the leader of the country band he had engaged to furnish the music for a picnic he had arranged. The letter ran as follows "Mr Cressy Dear Sir I am very sorry to have to inform you that I cannot furnish Music for your dances this season, as three out of five of my orchestra men will get intoxicated when you need them most we had a rehersal last Saturday eve One of them got a gallon jug of whisky got crazy it took a man and woman to take care of him another got full so he ran against my Barn and another one didn t appear at all to the rehersal so we have disbanded forever I have a friend in Springfield, N H who would like to furnish you good reliable Music" It is needless to say that Mr Cressy immediately communicated with the man in Springfield and his guests enjoyed "good reliable music' for the rest of the season

ASCOTT AND EDDIE'S LOSS.

The many friends of Mr and Mrs Ascough (Ascott and Eddie) will be pained to learn that their baby, Nina Elvira died at the home of her parents in Newark N. J, on September 7 She was a little over ten months old, and was idolized by her father and mother who are heartbroken over their affliction The interment was at Perth Amboy N. J.

CHARLES WARNER COMING OVER.

Charles Warner, the English actor, who appeared in New York in "Drink," at the Academy of Music some time ago has notified William Morris that he will sail for New York in time to open in vaudeville December 3 in the tragic one-man play, 'At the Telephone He will be able to remain only six weeks, and will play all of his time at the Hammerstein and Williams houses

"THE COUNTY FAIR."

Of all the varied entertainments that seek the shelter of Madison Square Garden in the course of a season perhaps none is so broad in its scope as Frank Melville's 'County Fair The first one ever held in this city was a great success, and the second, which is to run at the Garden from October 1 to October 20, promises to include twice as many features as its predecessor It will not be a theatrical imitation of a "County Fair," but the real thing, and the Garden will be transformed into a fair ground, with varicolored bunting flowers, fruits, vegetables live stock, side show fakirs, county constables and rustic lads and lassies brought in from the farmland One hundred pretty milkmaids will act as guides for the male visitors while as many sturdy young farmers will pilot the women A country newspaper edited by a real country journalist, will retail the personal news and gossip of the Fair, and two big bands will play in relays, so that there will be music all the time. In addition to the prize exhibitions of horticulture and farm products, including vegetables, fruit, grain, live stock, poultry, bees, etc., there will be a dog show, embracing bow-wows of every known breed with whippet races and exhibitions of sheep herding, driving, penning and a rescue drill by St Bernards In the hippodrome events there will be races of every sort, and even the chariot races will be genuine contests for valuable rewards, not prearranged exhibitions by circus performers. In the circus proper there are to be many sensational thrillers Those already engaged are Castellane and Velo, the St. Belmos, and Holdin and Wood. Negotiations are at the closing point with two of the biggest trained wild animal men in the world, and the decision between them will be reached when it is determined which one will have his beasts taught to perform the most sensational novelties, never before done. There will be fly-fishing contests and marksmanship competitions and a mountain climbing contest Athletic games will include running, jumping, shot-putting, comedy races and freak athletics The aquatic sports will include water polo, tub races and fancy swimming. As a crowning novelty Mr Melville has conceived a contest quite unique, for five hundred of the best manicure maids in New York Thousands of dollars are now being expended for prizes for the various events.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN HURT.

Oscar Hammerstein was painfully injured while inspecting his new Manhattan Opera House recently. While making his rounds he attempted to climb down a steel railway frame in which the steps have not been placed. Losing his footing, he fell on a pile of boxes and mortar thirty feet below, where he lay unconscious for some time before workmen discovered him. A doctor was summoned and he was taken to his apartments at the Victoria theater. His injuries were found to consist only of bruises and he was able to be out Sunday.

A NOVEL LAWSUIT.

Mrs. Castel-Bert, a costumer, has brought action for damages against Lew Fields and the producers of "About Town," on a point unique in theatrical lawsuits. The question of damages arises over the dance, "A French Tonic," in which the dresses are torn from the dancers. In the program an announcement appears that the fancy costumes used in the play are executed by Mrs. Castel-Bert, and the costumer objects to having it believed that she makes the dresses torn in this dance, though she desires credit for those she does furnish.

EDGAR HART MARRIED.

Edgar J. M. Hart, at one time stage-manager with the original Belasco production of "Zaza" and at present a member of the faculty at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, was married on the evening of September 11 to Marguerite Yeaman Sterling. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, in West Ninety-seventh street, New York. Mr. Hart, who is well known in metropolitan theatrical circles as a stage director, also ranks as an authority on the subject of make-up.

DEATH OF WILL CRANE.

Will Crane, of the Crane Brothers, the well-known vaudeville performers, who have appeared with the greatest success in a sketch called "The Mudtown Minstrels," died at Saranac Lake, N. Y., recently, of tuberculosis, at the age of thirty-seven years. He had been ailing for a long time, and at the end of last season went to the Adirondacks in the hope that a long sojourn there would result in restoring his health. The Crane Brothers made their debut many years ago in a sketch called "The Mudtown Rubes," assisted by a third man They toured the country season after season and being thrifty managed to acquire a competency, part of which they invested in Long Island real estate Their characterizations were slightly exaggerated but extremely amusing, and no one who has ever seen them will forget Will Crane's funny nasal squeak as he advanced to the footlights and made his "special announcement," which was always the signal for a prolonged laugh. The remains were interred at Derby, Conn.

LOOKING A LONG WAY AHEAD.

The Henderson family, of Coney Island, evidently wish to have their descendants reap the benefits of their present enterprise, even to the fifth add sixth generations, as recently papers were filed incorporating the Frederick B Henderson Company to carry on the restaurant and vaudeville theater business at the Island for a period of 250 years. The capital stock is $40,000, and the directors are F. B Henderson, Lottie B. Hoagland and Lulu N. Norwood.

SHUBERTS INCREASE CAPITAL.

The Shubert Theatrical Company of New York on September 10 filed in Albany a certificate of increase of capital from $300 000 to $600 000 The names of the stockholders signed to the certificate are Lee Shubert Jacob J Shubert, Max C Anderson and Joseph L. Rhinock.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE PROFESSION

Colonel Frank E. Willis, manager of the Electric theater at Riverview Park, Baltimore, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the theatrical professioin on September 11. His friends made up their minds to give the veteran a surprise and presented him with a handsome gold watch, suitably inscribed, as a souvenir of the anniversary.

SYDNEY AYRES IN A SKETCH.

Sydney Kingdon Ayres, who won popularity as the originator of the principal role in "Texas," Jane M. Feigl's play, has decided to try vaudeville for a while at least. He has written a strong one-act play called "The Cowboy King," that deals with life in Arizona.

M. B. RAYMOND'S TROUBLES.

Melville B. Raymond has been in trouble for the past few days. On September 8 Gorman's minstrels, which were under his management, stranded in Middletown, N Y. The company started with sixty-two people, but seventeen dropped out before it reached Middletown. Mayor Hornbeck, of Middletown, granted permission to the stranded minstrels to give a performance in the public square and take up a collection.

On Wednesday, September 12, Judge Hough, in the United States Court, issued an order restraining Raymond from interfering with Williams and Walker, the colored comedians, in the production of "Abyssinia," or in trying to collect money from them. The justice also issued a summons requiring Raymond to show cause why the order should not be made permanent. Williams and Walker, in their affidavit, alleged that Raymond had left them in a bad plight, and that they were forced to borrow money from the management of the Majestic theater in Brooklyn to pay salaries. They also alleged that they were forced to cancel bookings in two weeks of one-night stands and make hasty arrangements with Hurtig and Seamon to play the time at the Yorkville and Metropolis theaters It was also alleged that Raymond did not account for $1900 that belonged to the company.

On account of the absence of envelopes on two successive salary days, it is alleged, Rice and Prevost left Raymond's "Little Jack Horner" company and returned to vaudeville last week.

"The Seminary Girl," another of Raymond's enterprises, closed at Bridgeton, N. J., recently The scenery was attached by James W. Lanning, manager of the theater, and a hotel of Trenton, for cash advanced to the manager of the company.

ROBERT T. HAINES BANKRUPT.

Robert T Haines of Mt Vernon has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $7971 and no assets. Among the creditors are Walter C. Jordan, $1330; C J. S Miller, of Franklin, $1500; J. M. Bernardin, of Texarkana, Ark., $1000.

SHAW SUES FOR ROYALTIES.

George Bernard Shaw is suing the managers of the Vigszinhaz theater, at Budapest, for performing his "Devil's Disciple" without authority. He claims that his royalties would have amounted to 10 000 crowns.

IRVING PLACE THEATER.

The Irving Place theater is to be opened on October 15 in New York. Among the new members of the company will be Elsa Boettischer and Marianne Bratt, from the Kleines theater in Berlin, Grete Haas, from the National theater in Brunn, Marie Immisch, from the Stadt theater in Leipsic, Milly Reimann and Trude Voight, from the Raimund theater in Vienna; Gustav Goldbach, Frederick Holthaus, Willy Kaiser, and Carl Machold. The repertoire will include Hauptmann's "Und Pipa Tanzt" and "Rose Berndt," Max Drever's "Grandmama," Oscar Wilde's "Salome," Sudermann's "The Flower Boat," Fuda's "The Homely King," Bulmenthal's "The Glass House," Kurt Kratzl's "The Double Marriage," and Felix Philippi's "The Helper" Annie Dickens, the Baroness Hammerstein, is to give six performances about Christmas time during a brief visit to this country. She is a noted soubrette, who plays both in German and English, and is to appear in the only musical productions of the season at the Irving Place. The stage management will be in charge of Emil Reiter, from the Royal theater in Prague, Adolph Winds, from the Royal theater in Dresden, and Max Haensler. Heinrich Conried is still to remain in general control, and it is rumored that he will assume at least one role during the season.

RICHARD MANSFIELD'S PLANS.

Richard Mansfield arrived in New York recently to begin rehearsals of several plays he is to present this season. The most important of these is Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," which will require eleven scenes, a cast of fifty-two persons, two ballets and a choir. Other plays include "Rodion, the Student," "The Merchant of Venice," "Beau Brummel," "The Scarlet Letter," "A Parisian Romance," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "King Richard III," and "Ivan the Terrible." Ada Gilman, Adelaide Alexander, Cecil Magnus, Harold Mendelssohn are among the new members of the cast which will be required for "Peer Gynt." Arthur Forrest has returned from Vienna and Berlin to resume his place in Mr. Mansfield's company.

STUBBS-VAN DUSER.

Hildebrand (Harry) Oakes Stubbs and Susan Titus Van Duser were married at Peak's Island, Me., on September 10, at the summer home of the bride's parents. Both were members of the stock company playing at the Gem theater last summer. This season Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs will be with one of W. S. Harkins' stock companies touring the Canadian provinces and the West Indies, Mr. Stubbs as manager and comedian and his wife as leading woman.

WINCHELL SMITH'S LUCK.

Through the death of an aunt he has not seen since he was a child, Winchell Smith, manager of the Herald Square Tthater, has fallen heir to about $17,000. In a letter received last week from the executor, R. I. Parsons, of Gloversville, Smith was informed that he was one of six heirs to the $100,000 estate of Mrs. J. C. Nicholson, who died on August 24 in Appleton, Wis.

"OLD HEIDELBERG" IN COURT.

Judge Hough, in the United States Circuit, signed on September 18 an order restraining George Morehead from publishing or disposing of the play "Old Heidelberg." The order was obtained by Emanuel Lederer, the owner of the play. A play of the same name was produced in New York at the Princess theater two years ago, with Aubrey Boucicault in the leading part.

THE MANUFACTURE OF FALSE GEMS

The success with which are can copy nature in the manufacture of counterfeit gems is something remarkable. There are several processes used in the imitation of precious stones, one of them being the method of producing what are called "doublets." These are topazes on which a thin slice of diamond is laid. The topaz gives depth to the composition, and the diamond adds luster and the result is sold as a very satisfactory diamond.

Zircons are composed of silica and zirconia, and their value is comparatively trifling. Their luster is very deceptive, and a means has been discovered of extracting their color that leaves them diamonds, to all appearances, although their falseness proclaims itself under tests Precious stones are frequently dyed, and with such thoroughness that the stones may be broken without one's discovering any proof of the process.

The village of Oberstein, not far from the Rhine, devotes itself to the making of imitation jewelry and the dyeing of chalcedony and other stones. The onyx, carnelian, bloodstone, and agate may be enriched in color by immersion in the dye pot. The stones are placed in vessels containing the coloring matter and then subjected to a great heat for periods varying from a few hours to a fortnight or more.

In the case of chalcedony, which has bands of different degrees of density, certain bands take the color and others do not, the stone then has a further stewing in pots containing other dyes. Fluorspar is capable of great improvement in tint by being subjected to a heating process, and crucidolite is now treated to a successful method of obtaining a striking hue of blood red The cat's eye and emerald are the most easily imitated One family at Oberstein possesses the secret of converting crucidolite into cat's eye, which may also be made of argorite, some of the hornblendes, and even gypsum.

ATLANTIC BILLOWS.

The authorities at the Washington hydrographic bureau have endeavored to ascertain the size of the Atlantic waves. From careful observations they learn that in height the waves usually average about thirty feet, but in rough weather they attain from forty to forty-eight feet. In storms they are often from 500 to 600 feet long, and continue to move about ten or eleven seconds; while the longest yet known measured half a mile and did not exhaust itself for twenty-three seconds.

HIGH WATER MARK

A traveler passing through a small country town noticed a post on which was marked the height to which the river had risen during a recent flood.

'Do you mean to say,' he asked a native, 'that the river rose as high as that in 19—?'

'Oh, no,' replied the native, 'but the village children used to rub off the original mark, so the mayor ordered it to be put higher up, so as to be out of their reach.'

Prince Disinherited for Marrying AMERICAN HEIRESS

Prince Robert de Broglie and his Wife on Shipboard

Lawsuits and scandal galore confront the beautiful Princess de Broglie, who was married in Chicago the other day to Prince Robert de Broglie, son of one of the most aristocratic and wealthy families in France. The marriage, following an elopement and a trip around the world, caused the father of the young man, Prince Amedee de Broglie, to disinherit his son—cut him off without a dollar. In return, says the Detroit News-Tribune, Robert's wife intends to go on the stage as a singer and help her husband until a settlement can be made, some compromise effected that will give him an income from the family's estate in France.

It is a complicated story, with elopements and divorce suits in every chapter, covering many cities, from San Francisco to Paris and Milan, and concerning many persons, from Senator Jones of Nevada to the aristocrats of the famous chauteau de Chaumont on the Loire.

After their marriage in Chicago the Prince, by the request of his newly-wedded wife, went to San Francisco to see what he could save of her property surviving the earthquake, and she came to New York to watch developments of the prince's family in France.

In an interview with a Herald reporter she tells this remarkable story: "My mother, Sophia Freud, a Hungarian beauty, came to this country from Budapest, went to San Francisco, and when but a girl married Lyman Alexander, now of New Mexico. He was then a wealthy land owner of Sonoma, Napa county, Cal., where I was born—not exactly in the town itself, but on our great estate near there. There were five of us children, devotedly attached to our mother. Unfortunately her married life was unhappy, and when she was divorced from Mr. Alexander we went with our mother.

"Later she married Edward H. Clay, a son of Mrs. Clay, the second wife of Senator Jones, who, by the way, was deeply infatuated with her, for she was a handsome young widow. These marriages and divorces gave me an early insight into the tragedies and meaning of life. I resolved to strike out for myself. Friends called me the beauty of my family, and having a phenomenal voice for singing, I went abroad to study. From childhood it has been the passion of my life to become a great singer.

"The director of the opera in Paris put me in charge of Victor Capoul, who, as a rule, did not take pupils, but he accepted me because of my voice and natural gift for acting. He said I would make a great Carmen, and so I began my studies.

"Under Caqoul and Lucien Fugere, of the Opera Comique, I made rapid progress, and in a year or two was about to go before the public when Mr. Sidney Velt, a Prussian, fell in love with me and I married him. He was an importer, with a house in New York and one in Paris, and I thought I was a fortunate woman until I discovered it impossible to live with him. He was tyrannical, fault-finding and exacting beyond endurance. My only solace was music, and I resumed my lessons.

"Now comes an event which changed my whole life. One day at the studio some visitors were announced and I was introduced, but did not then know that the young man of the party was a prince. He was introduced to me simply as M. de Broglie. He was accompanied by his mother, his sister Marguerite and brother Jacques, who recently married the daughter of the Prince of Wagram.

"I was instantly smitten with the young man and apparently he was as deeply interested in me. On the following day the prince's Italian valet came with a present of beautiful flowers and then disclosed Robert's title. I was astonished and I invited him to call. His mother has repeatedly said it was a case of love at first sight and that we practically threw ourselves into each other's arms at the first visit.

"In a few days we began to know each other and came to an understanding. We agreed that we could not live apart. But what was I to do? I was unhappily married to the Prussian merchant, Sidney Velt, who posed as a Frenchman. There was but one chance for me, and that was to elope. So I ran away with the prince, knowing it would cause Mr. Velt to get a divorce. We took a trip around the world and the divorce followed, all of which is a matter of record, and an account of the affair was published at the time.

"The divorce left me free and we wanted to marry immediately. But the prince's father, furious, refused consent. Then we went to Italy and were secretly married by a priest near Milan. It made no difference, however, and the family still declined to recognize a marriage celebrated against the will of the parents and in violation of French custom and a civil contract. To satisfy my own family we were married again, American fashion, in Chicago."

In corroboration of the princess' story, it may be said that it is also a matter of record that the prince had previously married the Baroness Deslandes, who at the age of 17 had previously married Comte Fleury, the son of General Fleury. As the marriage was a family affair, brought about against her will, it was annulled in 1894 by the Pope. Later she married Prince Robert de Broglie, November 27, 1901, at Brockley, London. As this marriage was against the will of the father and not in accordance with the laws of France requiring a civil contract, and the young man, being not of age, it was annulled. Still later, suits were begun forbidding Mme. Deslandes from using the title princess. It was held by some, however, that while her marriage was not recognized in France it was perfectly legal in England and elsewhere because they were married by a clergyman in a church.

It may be interesting to state further that Sidney Velt, the New York and Paris merchant, was not satisfied with obtaining a divorce from Mme Broglie, but subsequently began a suit in New York before Judge Stover of the Supreme Court to set aside assignments to her of two Equitable Life Insurance policies on the tontine plan, worth when due $13,567 and $15,000 respectively.

So it will be seen that the princess has become accustomed to litigation. Indeed, she says she expects plenty more of it, and looks for the prince's family to do their worst. She considers her marriage certificate signed by Chicago officials a legal document that neither French courts nor the prince's father can upset. The document seems genuine.

A beautiful engraved scene representing a young couple beginning the voyage of life in a lovely valley surrounded by a water view heads the Chicago marriage certificate, which reads: "This certifies that Prince Robert de Broglie and Miss Estelle Alexander of New York and of Diamond, Cal., were united by me in holy matrimony on the 14th day of August, in the year of our Lord 1906, at Chicago, Ill. Signed, Joseph Arns, Justice of the Peace. Witness: A. Aubin." The princess says she will have a copy of this published in France and put on record.

It would take a book to contain the vivid descriptions which the princess gives of her life in France and particularly of what she knows of the prince's family. She says that their Chauteau de Chaumont, on the River Loire, where the family resides a part of the year, is one of the most beautiful, and historic establishments in Europe. The estate is a vast domain of magnificent forests and famous hunting grounds.

The wealth of the Broglies is boundless, she says, and only those who have lived in affluence can understand what Prince Robert sacrifices in marrying the woman of his choice and being cut off from every dollar of his prospective fortune.

She continues: "It is an old saying that when poverty comes in at the door love flies out of the window. I can add that love is but a summer sigh which steals softly over you. If you haven't a cent you'd better live in a tent, where there's no door for love to fly through.

"Prince Robert has always had a fondness for animals of all kinds. The trait is undoubtely inherited from his mother, who bought a wonderful little elephant and had it trained to order by Bostock in Paris at his menagerie. She paid 1000 francs a month for its lessons. It became the pet of the family and I have seen it throw its trunk around the body of the prince and hug him for pure joy.

"Robert's mother, Princess Amedee, had extraordinary entertainments at the chauteau wherein the elephant figured, to the great amusement of their royal guests. I must tell you of the wonderful banquet that she gave in honor of the King of Portugal, who was making them a visit. The grounds were in their finest condition and an entire village had been bought up and all the buildings removed to enlarge the area of the noble park. Now, this banquet was a wonder. Among the special dishes was one containing the tongues of three thousand rabbits killed on the estate simply to add lusciousness to the dish which the princess set before the King of Portugal.

"You know, the family is proud of its blood. The prince's grandfather, the old Duke de Broglie, was a famous man in French affairs. He served in the French cabinet and was a close friend of Marshal MacMahon. They are all distinguished and naturally there is anger that Robert, the favorite son, should have married an American singer. But we contend that it is a matter concerning us more than any one else, and if we are happy in our love why shouldn't we be allowed to pursue our ways in peace?

"Misfortunes never come singly The San Francisco earthquake destroyed a lot of my own family's property. However, my husband, who went out to look after affairs, has telegraphed me money and says that he hopes to save considerable from the wreck. I am not discouraged in regard to his prospects in France. He is a noble son and they have no right to rob him of everything. I trust a compromise will be arranged.

"We understand each other and are perfectly congenial. When we eloped and were married in Italy I set my American wits to work, sold $25,000 worth of jewels Robert had given me, went to Munich and began studying Wagner roles, determined to show the proud Broglies that I was a true American and could supply my husband with money, even if his family had cut him off without a franc. You see, I have fine gowns. They were made by the best artists in Paris, Felix's successor, and I think we shall get along.

"The picture of the prince is only a snapshot and was taken on the steamer Nieuw Amsterdam during our recent voyage to New York. He is slender and really was one of the most manly and handsome young men in Paris. He is a devoted automobilist and has made several important inventions. We used to ride about in his famous Fiat, the first one seen in France. It attracted much attention.

"You may say that my husband dresses luxuriously, and it is well known in Paris that his tailors are obliged to hunt the world over for the choicest and rarest buttons for his garments.

"He is finely educated, not only speaks several European languages, but his English is almost perfect. As an athlete he has few equals. His inventions of automobiles alone would give an ordinary man fame. He invented a special automobile for carrying freight. The motive power is vapor and produces the greatest horse power at the least expense of any machine in use. He had it patented in every country and was prevented from making a fortune only by the sudden death of Ernest Cronier, the famous sugar king, who committed suicide last year after losing 25,000,000 francs, belonging to the various members of the Broglie family.

"I have a certified copy of Robert's birth act, showing that he was born November 25, 1880, at 7 o'clock in the evening, in their home in Paris No. [illegible] Rue Solferino. His full name is Francois Marie Constant Amedee Robert, son of Henri Amedee, Prince de Broglie and Charlotte Constance. This birth act was declared in the presence of the old Duc de Broglie, grandfather of my husband—a man having one of the most brilliant minds in France.

"Robert and I propose to contest any action that his father may begin in the French courts, and to that end I have retained the services of a famous lawyer, Maitre Frederic Allan, avocat a cour, who was the lawyer of Clara Ward, to see that our marriage is legally recognized and our rights established.

"It may sound like advertising, but it is necessary for me to earn money for myself and husband, and I purpose to go on the stage as a singer in opera and let the father and his aristocratic family in Paris make the most of it. If they don't like it let them give Robert his share in the fortune. Capoul said I had a great voice and would become a rival of Calve. It is a mezzo-soprano and with it I have gifts for acting, so my teachers said—combining grand opera style with the vivacity and lightness required in opera comique."

And how does the American Princess de Broglie look? Here is how she described herself: "Tall and slender, five feet ten; magnificent figure; wonderful long hair of dark reddish chestnut color, falling to knees; eyes of midnight darkness, changing to emerald hues and shades of deep sea green, and at times are of a rich, dark brown; mouth and nose Grecian, and lips full, red and passionate."

Romance OF A Standard Oil King's Daughter

Now, let this be distinctly understood—Lieutenant Johannes Schlott of the Royal Navy of Norway, is not a real chauffeur.

True, he knows how to run an automobile. He is able to repair one at a pinch. But, now that he is to wed into the family of a Standard Oil magnate, it must be borne in mind, says the New York World, that he is on the reserve list of those brave men with the valor of the Vikings in their veins—the officers in the navy that will fight to the death for their king, Haakon VII.

Miss May Bedford, daughter of Edward T. Bedford, one of the directors and millionaire owners of the Standard Oil Company, and John D. Rockefeller's right-hand man, is to marry Lieutenant Johannes Schlott on October 13 next. The engagement has been officially announced by the father and mother of the bride-to-be.

And again, you are reminded, the bridegroom-to-be is not a chauffeur. For all that, he met his intended in the Blue Ribbon Garage, Bridgeport, Conn., where he was earning an honest living. Remember always that he is an officer in the Norwegian navy.

Some day Miss Bedford will inherit millions. Some day Lieutenant Schlott may be called upon to be an officer again to fight for his king. But just now neither fact concerns these two young people. They are too busy planning for their wedding. And the one fact that both want their friends to forget is that Lieutenant Schlott ever had to repair Miss Bedford's automobile—professionally.

FAMOUS AS A LEGAL FORTRESS.

It is all right to repair any lady's broken-down machine when you do it for chivalry. It is another story when you may make your living that way. But not so fast!

The Bedfords have a handsome home at No. 181 Clinton avenue, Brooklyn, and are leaders in society across the river. Their home is as much celebrated as a legal fortress as a house of hospitality. There Mr. Bedford entrenched himself last winter when Mr. Hadley was here with his subpenas from Missouri, on the lookout for Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Archbold, Mrs. Bedford and others high in the councils of the Standard Oil. It was there in Brooklyn, finally, that Palmedo, the famous subpena server, nabbed Mr. Bedford, just as he nabbed Mr. Rogers here in New York.

It was there, too, that Miss Bedford met Lieutenant Schlott. He had been brought to a musicale by one of their guests. No doubt of it, the young man was immensely good-looking. He was tall, broad-shouldered, dark, with a distinctive air of the service about him. He could speak well, despite his foreign accent, and his manners were charming. And so Miss Bedford asked him to call. He did. He was welcomed with unaffected hospitality, and he called again.

He was very frank indeed about his antecedents. He told Miss Bedford of his high connections in Norway and of his ten years' service in the Norwegian navy. And all of this was true, despite the fact that so many foreigners have told similar stories, only to be found out and branded the pretenders they have so often been.

The young man has had an honorable naval record for ten years and is now on the reserve list. This means that he may be called upon at any time to go again on service to fight a ship for his king and country. He came here on leave of absence, the guest of his brother, Christian Schlott, of Brooklyn.

The leave of absence was drawing to a close. The gallant lieutenant telegraphed home for an extension. He got it. Then the extension ran out. It was a case of going back home again or quitting the Norwegian navy.

He quit.

Miss Bedford soon found out the reason. It was because of love for her. And where is the girl who has once encouraged a man who will desert him just because he gives up his career for her?

Well, anyway, Miss Bedford is not of that class. The young man laid his heart at her feet and she accepted it. Then came the question of approaching Mr. Bedford. Now, it may be safely assumed that Standard Oil millionaires are not on the lookout for poor men as husbands of their daughters. Mr. Bedford had not broken this hard and fast rule when young Lieutenant Schlott appeared upon the scene.

"Hm-m-m!" he said, when he learned the truth.

Which, being translated by young people very much in love, means that there is a fighting chance.

Mr. Bedford wanted to know if the young man could support his daughter. Lieutenant Schlott proudly explained that there were many men in the navy of Norway who supported their wives.

"Hm-m-m!" said Mr. Bedford again.

MR. BEDFORD OBJECTS.

Then he said that he couldn't spare his daughter, that Norway was far away and that he wouldn't see her and that he couldn't bear the separation, and all that sort of thing. Lieutenant Schlott sighed and spoke up.

"I'll leave the navy of my king to make your daughter my wife, sir; can you ask more?"

Miss Bedford gasped with delight and looked up proudly into the eyes of her affianced. Mr. Bedford didn't look so pleased. He just said "Hm-m-m!"

But the upshot of it was that young Lieutenant Schlott went back to Norway three months ago and had his name put upon the reserve list of the Norwegian navy. Then he came back to this country.

"You see," he explained, "it is all right now. There is little likelihood of my country going to war. We had a slight difference of opinion with Sweden a little while ago, but that is all settled now. Had we gone to war at that time I should have been in command of a torpedo boat, because of my rank and my ten years' service in the navy.

"In Norway we begin at the bottom in the navy. A man has to serve two years as a common sailor before he can be advanced. Then the men who are in command can understand what the common sailors must bear, and the result is harmony aboard our ships. We are building no more ships. We don't believe we need any more. We are at peace with all the world."

But with all his naval training the young man had no resources. So he went to work in the Blue Ribbon Garage to learn the automobile business. It chanced that Mr. Bedford was a heavy stockholder in the concern and that Miss Bedford kept her automobile there. The Bedfords' country villa is near at hand at Green's Farms, a fashionable watering-place on Long Island sound, and it was quite natural that Miss Bedford should use the garage in which her father was interested and where the man she loved was working.

MYSTERY OF LIEUTENANT'S JOB.

None about the garage could understand why a man with an official position should go to work in an automobile shop, and Lieutenant Schlott didn't bother about any explanations. Finally all hands agreed that there was a mystery in the young man's life and that they had better not ask too many questions.

It never occurred to them when Miss Bedford asked for young Schlott to make the necessary repairs on her machine that there was anything out of the way. Nor did it seem peculiar to them that when the machine was in working order it was always necessary for Schlott to take it out to see that it ran properly. And least of all they never thought it strange that Miss Bedford's machine, a high-grade automobile, was breaking down a great deal more than the average automobile.

LOVE FINALLY WINS.

Finally one day a few weeks ago young Mr. Schlott was made secretary of the garage company. Right upon the heels of this came the announcement of his engagement to Miss Bedford. Then a whole lot of people who never had guessed a single thing before began saying "I told you so!"

In very plain English the young Norwegian lieutenant, after capturing the heart of the American girl, laid siege to her father's opposition. So successfully did he do it that he was able to level the enemy's works in the brief space of three months. Now the engagement is openly admitted by the Bedfords.

"Yes," said Mrs. Bedford with a smile, to a writer for the Sunday World, "my daughter and Lieutenant Schlott are engaged. The wedding will be at Elm Villa, our country home at Green's Farms. It will not be elaborate, because Lieutenant Schlott's father died recently, you know. Mr. Bedford has bought a home for them at Seaside Park, where they will make their permanent residence. It will be much better to have them there than for them to go back to far-away Norway to live. We couldn't bear that.

"Really, there was no opposition on our part to Lieutenant Schlott except that we disliked our daughter to go so far away to live. Lieutenant Schlott is a most estimable man and is highly connected in his own country."

And, remember again, that injunction about the chauffeur. Lieutenant Schlott has denied it himself in these very words:

"It is wrong to state that I was Miss Bedford's chauffeur. I was not. Of course, I repaired the car often when she came in to have it fixed up. And I often ran it out for her to see that it was all right. But we were engaged before I became secretary of the Blue Ribbon Company."

Miss Bedford is radiant these days now that the engagement is an acknowledged fact. She drives out every afternoon with her affianced, sometimes letting him run her automobile and sometimes running it herself.

JEWS RIOT; INFIDELS REVILE FAITH

Yom Kippur Marked by Disorders in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The solemn calm that has heretofore distinguished Yom Kippur on the East Side gave way today to rioting and disorder. Hundreds of Jews, socialistic organizations and scoffers at the religion of their fathers, gathered in their clubs, drew beer, sang songs and made merry. Bands of them paraded the streets eating ham sandwiches and shouting jeers and insults at the thousands of reverent, bearded men and bareheaded women passing to and from the synagogues.

While the day was young and the fast that is commanded from one sunset to another was not half over, the actions of the infidel Jews had goaded the orthodox element to frenzy. Here and there crowds of old men, weeping with sorrow and anger, would charge groups of young socialists, and with a strength born of frenzy, beat them without mercy. Sticks, stones and knives were used in the assaults. Blood flowed everywhere. This disorder spread until the region reaching from Delancey to Division streets and from Allen to Pitt was boiling with excitement. Policemen on post telephoned to their station houses that they were unable to handle the crowds and the reserves were turned out. Headquarters was notified and mounted men from the traffic squad were hurried to the East Side to patrol the streets.

The club house of the Socialistic Zionistic Bund, 257 East Broadway, was crowded with young men eating and drinking and singing offensive songs when about fifty old men made a rush for the doors. They were beaten back. Water and beer glasses were dropped upon them from upper windows. A police guard was stationed at the door.

Then the orthodox besiegers resorted to strategy. Scattering into small groups, they retired to stations distant from the club house, but were near enough to enable them to see all who came out. As one of the young men started down the street smoking a cigarette and making joking remarks to the shocked believers, the old men would trail him until there was no policeman in sight. They then would set upon him and beat him.

Feeble old men, long passed the scriptural allotment of life, were galvanized into warriors by the insults offered to their faith. In other parts of the city the day was passed decorously.

W. J. BIGGY IS INJURED IN RUNAWAY

Unable to control a spirited horse he was driving, W. J. Biggy of San Francisco was hurled from a buggy late yesterday afternoon and lies at the Providence Hospital with a severe laceration of the scalp, contusions on both shoulders and a badly sprained ankle. It will be two weeks before he will be able to leave his bed, if no complications arise.

Mr. Biggs came to Oakland on business and was driving in company with Mr. Smith, a business associate. The horse had given them considerable trouble and Mr. Biggs was watching him closely. But at Twelfth and Kirkham streets the animal took fright at a passing automobile and suddenly bolted. Before Mr. Biggy could bring the horse under control, he whirled the buggy onto two wheels and both men were thrown to the pavement.

Mr. Smith escaped with a severe shaking up. Mr. Biggy was rendered senseless and it was seen he was badly injured. Passersby carried him into a nearby drug store, where he revived and was carried to the hospital. Dr. O. D. Hamlin attended to his injuries and does not apprehend serious results. The horse continued for a block and was caught after partially wrecking the buggy.

Mr. Biggy is well known on both sides of the bay, being now a candidate for railroad commissioner, and exaggerated reports of the accident occasioned grave concern.

JOHN MARCOVICH OF OAKLAND USES AN AUTO TO CARRY BRIDE

Separates From First Wife, Then Coes to Santa Cruz With New Love and There Weds.

Eloping in an automibile guided by Cupid in the person of Louis A. Morris, a well-known merchant of this city, John Marcovich, one of the proprietors of the Gas Kitchen, and an intimate frind of Jim Jeffries, the prize-fighter, left Oakland at 6 o'clock yesterday morning with Miss Jennie Brown, also a resident here, and proceeding to the court house at Santa Cruz, received a marriage license and were wedded by Justice of the Peace Tom Craghill in the County Clerk's office at half past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Marcovich received a final decree of divorce from her husband on the grounds of desertion last Monday. In her complaint she intimated that there was another woman, who proved to be, according to local observation, Miss Emma Short, a trained nurse.

DEVOTED TO GIRL.

Miss Short and her admirer separated about four months ago and then the friends of the popular restaurant keeper began to notice that he was paying marked devotion to Miss Brown, whom he met at Harbin Springs several weeks ago.

Miss Brown frequently visited the Gas Kitchen, but even the partner of Marcovich, Tony Clecak, did not know that Marcovich was again a victim of the little god of love.

SECRET IS REVEALED.

Louis A. Morris and his wife were taken into the confidence of the prospective bridegroom and he telephoned to Harry Miller, County Clerk of Santa Cruz county, Friday afternoon arranging everything for the nuptials yesterday.

Promptly at 6 o'clock yesterday morning Louis Morris, who is the brother of L. A. Morris, proprietor of the Parlor Cigar Store, 1057 Broadway, accompanied by his wife, met John Marcovich and his bride-to-be in his forty-horse power Mitchell machine and the start to San Jose began at once.

TRAVEL IN AUTO.

Over hill and dale the auto raced with the pair of lovers until they finally landed at the little town of Santa Cruz, where the County Clerk, Harry Miller, already prepared, was in waiting.

It required but a few minutes to issue the license and then Justice of the Peace Tom Craghill required little time to perform the ceremony. Mrs. Morris acted as the bride's attendant and Morris was best man. The happy couple then repaired to the St. George hotel, where they were the subjects of many joyful felicitations. Later they went to Del Monte.

FIRST MARRIAGE.

Marcovich was married the first time at Napa on July 31, 1904. They separated in March, 1905, because of incompatibility of temperament, although the plaintiff alleged desertion.

The husband then went to live at the Elks' Club, of which he was a member, but left it after a residence of several months for another home.

YOUTH GORED BY COW; RESCUED BY MOTHER

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 29.—Elmo Lapier, 13 years old, living with his parents at 187 Rush street, was attacked and seriously injured by a cow yesterday. One of the maddened animal's horns gored the boy's neck, inflicting a gaping wound which bled profusely. Mrs. Lapier, the lad's mother, rescued her son from further injury by beating the critter away with a club. The cow was feeding in Mrs. Lapier's back yard and became tangled in the stake rope. The youth went to free the bovine. The cow turned on the lad and pinioned him against the fence.

FLORIDA TOWN NEARLY SUBMERGED BY FLOOD

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 29.—Via Flomaton by courier—Flood followed hurricane, wind and rain this morning and the city tonight is nearly submerged. Seven and a half inches of rain fell in a little over three hours and the main streets of the city were turned into veritable rivers by this tremendous downpour. In some instances the water is shoulder deep. First-floor cellars and many residences were deluged. Business is at a standstill. Debris of every description is floating through the streets, being the mute messengers of the terrible West Indian hurricane of last Thursday.

Unique and quaint methods are being devised to go from one part of the city to another. Small boats, bathing suits, rafts and like methods are being used. From the latest reports of casualties obtainable the list of dead in this vicinity numbers at least thirty. The damage will total at the lowest estimate $8,000,000 as a result of the recent storm and flood.

MILL EMPLOYES AND OWNERS IN DEADLOCK

Both Friday and Saturday night, the committee of five, appointed to represent the Millmen's union No. 550, met in closed council with the mill owners of Alameda county. In each case, the representatives were unable to reach an agreement.

The millmen have demanded a minimum wage scale of $4.50 a day, instead of $3.50, this amounts to an average increase of 25 per cent. The millowners insist that owing to the unsatisfactory condition of business, and to the general inefficiency of their employes, as well as the inferior quality of lumber on the market, they are unable to meet the demands of the men. They have expressed a willingness to grant an average raise of 12½ per cent.

Both sides refuse to make further concessions. The millmen rely on the support of the Building Trades council, and will strike Monday if their demands are not acceded to. The owners believe that they might more reasonably close down the mills for a time.

At neither conference have the men been able to agree. A third meeting will be held this afternoon, at the millmen's headquarters, over Pierce Hardware company's store. Every effort will be made to reach an amicable settlement.

'TAKE BABES; I WANT A GOOD TIME'

Prison Cell for Mother Who Wanted to Celebrate.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Marion Greely, of Seaside, Rockaway Beach, a comely woman, 36 years old, with her two children, Catherine, aged 6, and Lillian, aged 2, were in the West Side police court today under peculiar circumstances.

Sergeant Brenner was on watch as the woman entered. He imagined he was to hear a story of desertion and was asking himself how her husband could be so foolish to leave such a pretty wife and such pretty babes, when Mrs. Greely said:

"I want to leave these children here. They are a source of emparrasment to me. I came to New York today to have a good time, but I can't have it with these children. I don't want to leave them on the steamer because they are good children and I was afraid some harm might come to them; so I thought I would give them to the city. I havn't been out for a good time since Catherine was born, six years ago. I am going to have one now and I can't have children holding me down to prosaic every-day life."

Brenner called a policeman and told Mrs. Greely that she would have to go to a cell. He sent the children to the rooms of the children's society, where they were cared for.

To Magistrate Mayo in the West Side court, she said that her husband worked in Washington and sends her plenty of money. She represented that she was tired of her children. The magistrate concluded that she must be insane, and although she volunteered to take the little ones home, committed her to the care of the charity organization society.

MRS. MELVIN AND SENATOR RECOVERING

Encouraging reports continue to come from the bedsides of the three victims of Wednesday's automobile accident. Most encouraging is the improvement of Mrs. Henry A. Melvin, who with her husband is at the Providence hospital. Yesterday afternoon when Dr. O. D. Hamlin, a personal friend, called and he asked her if she knew him, she replied, "Certainly I do, Dr. Hamlin." Mrs. Melvin does not, however, refer to the accident or apparently know that she is in a hospital. Judge Melvin continues slowly to gain in strength and his condition gives his many friends much satisfaction.

Senator Lukens did not appear so well yesterday forenoon and there was considerable concern, but later in the day he rallied steadily and last night he appeared in better condition than at any time since the accident.

RADIANT AND YOUNGER THAN EVER, LANGTRY ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

So old Sir Henry is ill? I am sorry to hear it. Of course I should be Lady De Bath and would have no option in saying whether or not I would "assume" the title—Statement by Lily Langtry.

LILY LANGTRY.

Smiles Leaves Famous Actress' Face Only When Told of Freddy Gebhard's Secret Marriage.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—It looked as if a part of Broadway's Rialto had just arrived from an ocean voyage when the steamship Philadelphia touched at her pier today. The first woman to step on shore was Lily Langtry, wife of Hugo de Bath, and she was followed by a crowd of actors and actresses, most of whom have come to appear in new plays to be given this season.

The "Jersey Lily" was radiant and apparently younger than ever. She was all smiles and brimful of good nature until somebody asked her if she had any comment to make on the news of Frederick Gebhard's marriage, which was kept a secret until a few days ago. Then for the first time her smile faded and a glance of indignation gleamed from the eyes of the famous actress.

"No, of course, I have no comment to make," she said. "Why is it that Americans persist in digging up old affairs? The memory of that little incident should be allowed to die out. I have made other friends since that time."

Then her cheerfulness returned again. "Of course, you know I am going into vaudeville and shall open at the Fifth avenue theater next Monday night," she went on. "It is called 'Between the Nightfall and the Light.' But the best part of it is that when I first appeared in America, I opened at the same theater. It will be like old times. My play then was 'As in a Looking Glass.'"

Mrs. Langtry was told that while she was on the ocean, her horse, Aurina, had won the Prince Edward Stakes of $10,000 in Manchester. This set her beaming again, and she replied:

"I owe all that to Billy Donohue, my trainer. You can't get away from the fact that American horsetrainers are far away the best."

Mrs. Langtry was informed that Sir Henry de Bath was reported to be very ill and she asked whether in the event of her husband's succeeding to the title, she would assume the name of Lady de Bath.

"So old Sir Henry is ill?" she said. "I am sorry to hear it. Of course I should be Lady de Bath and would have no option in saying whether or not I would 'assume' the title."

"Would you use it as a stage name?"

"Most certainly I would not. My stage name I like. I made it myself what it is and I am proud of it. I like it too well to ever dream of changing it."

CUPID BREAKS BARS OF SAN FRANCISCO JAIL

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Cupid is a curious trickster. He chooses queer places for playgrounds. There is the county jail, for instance. Most romantic of places, that grim old county pail, yet the mischievous god nearly a year ago broke into its iron-clad interior; and there began the courtship of one of San Francisco's prettiest young women.

Miss Margaret Griswold fell in love with Dr. Herbert N. Thornburg, the divorced husband of her dearest friend. That was before the handsome doctor, formerly an army surgeon stationed in Manila got into legal difficulties. But, says a friend in this city in possession of the facts, the two did not become affianced lovers until prison doors had separated them. That they are mutually infatuated has been apparent to all the attaches at the jail.

Mrs. Thornburgh died, bequeathing a few tokens of her affection to the pretty Margaret, who received them from the ex-husband. This was the beginning of an acquaintance that has cost the young woman many tears of mortification at her sweetheart's ignominious plight and the consequent uncertainty of their marriage.

Thornourgh, it is said, has wealthy relatives in the East. His mother came here in his behalf when he was first arrested and has kept him provided with money since her return home.

A charge of forgery was made against Thornburg about a year and a half ago by C. A. Baxter. The bail at that time was fixed at $1000 bonds or $300 cash. The case was dismissed yesterday, but a new charge of forgery by the same complainant caused Thornburgh's immediate rearrest. Judge Mogan reduced his bail to $100 and the doctor was given his liberty at 3 o'clock.

Yesterday Thornburgh's sweetheart called at police headquarters and asked that the gold watch he had been wearing be returned to her, as it was her property. She was told that she must furnish her name and her address if the watch were given to her. She stated that she was living at 1521 Railroad avenue, Alameda. The consent of the prisoner being obtained, the timepiece was returned to her and she left the building.

Miss Griswold was separated several years ago from her husband, with permission to resume her maiden name. She was residing in San Francisco the the time of the fire and lost her possessions. She is a brunet of the dashing type, with sparkling black eyes, and her friends have expressed surprise that she should have become infatuated with a man in jail when so many suitors outside its dreary doors would have gladly paid matrimonial court to her. In reversing the conventional order of such things, she has even supplied Thornburgh with dainties for his solitary menu, and has paid him such visits as the prison regulations have permitted.

MAN PLEADS FOR LOVE; IS GREETED BY SCORN

SAN JOSE, Sept. 29.—Traveling 2000 miles in the vain hope of effecting a reconciliation with his pretty young wife, who deserted him in New Orleans eight months ago, Frank Johnston, a machinist, who says he is the son of wealthy parents, has arrived in San Jose, only to find his love scorned and his proffers of peace treated with disdain.

Bessie Johnston, the unhappy bride of twelve months, refuses to have anything to do with her husband. With the determination of ridding herself from the man whom she declares deceived her, the unhappy woman traveled almost across the continent to find a refuge in the care of her father, who is a well to do contractor of San Jose. Since her arrival last January she has tried by every means within her power to keep her place of refuge a secret from her husband.

MAN DYING; MYSTERY IN SHOT WOUND

A. Leslie Found in Pool of Blood by Children.

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—An element of deep mystery surrounds the shooting tonight of Samuel Alexander Leslie, a business man of San Francisco, at his residence, 2421 Telegraph avenue. Whether Leslie tried to end his life or was accidentally shot while endeavoring to clean his revolver is a question which will probably never be solved, as the wounded man is now lying in a dying condition at the receiving hospital.

The bullet entered Leslie's right temple and fractured the outer plate of the skull. The leaden missile was then embedded in the wall of the small laundry room at the rear of the residence, which was the scene of the accident.

It was at six o'clock this evening when neighbors heard a pistol shot in the direction of the Leslie residence. Then the screams of children were heard, and on investigation the tots were found hovering over the prostrate form of their father, who was found lying in a pool of blood.

As was his usual custom, Leslie came from San Francisco this evening to pass Sunday with his family. When he arrived home he found that his wife and one of the children had gone to Oakland, while Ernet, a blind child eleven years of age, and Mona, aged 6, were at home. The children are unable to give a connected account of the shooting and do not remember whether he threatened to take his life.

"EVERYTHING GONE."

The children heard him mutter however, "What's the use, everything's gone." Then Leslie secured the pistol, a 38-caliber, and went to the laundry, followed by the children. A shot rang out and Leslie dropped to the floor semi-unconscious.

Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard, of 2425 Telegraph avenue, were first to respond to the screams of the children. When Mr. Leonard found that Leslie had been wounded, he rushed to the office of Dr. George F. Reinhart nearby. Dr. Reinhardt in turn summoned an ambulance and Leslie was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital.

When Mrs. Leslie reached home and found that her husband had wounded himself she became hysterical and immediately left for the hospital. She was insistent that her husband must have wounded himself while cleaning his revolver, as he had no reason to end his life. She said that she was afraid to stay alone in the house when her husband was absent in San Francisco, and that she had asked him last Thursday to put a revolver that was in the house, in order.

"My husband never could have made an attempt on his life," said Mrs. Leslie. "The last time he was over from San Francisco I asked him to clean a pistol that we had in the house, and he must have wounded himself cleaning it."

LESLIE WAS ILL.

The fact leaked out tonight that for some time Leslie had been in ill health and has been under the care of a surgeon for some time for an injury that he has sustained to one of his limbs by letting a trunk fall on it,

Before the fire, Leslie was a prosperous wood and coal merchant on Seventh street, in San Francisco. In the conflagration he not only lost nearly all his earthly possession, but all his

PRETTY GIRL INJURED IN RUNAWAY

BERKELEY, Sept. 130.—Miss Alice McNamara, a pretty trained nurse from San Francisco, had a narrow escape for her life this evening in a runaway on Shattuck avenue, in front of the city hall. Miss McNamara was driving with a gentleman from San Francisco when the horse took fright at an on-coming local train. The man, whose name could not be ascertained, tried hard to stop the fractious animal, but it was uncontrollable, and threw both the young people to the ground.

Passers-by ran to the assistance of the pair, whom they found had escaped with but few bruises. Miss McNamara endeavored to keep her name a secret, but a passer-by who knew her divulged it.

STOPS A RUNAWAY.

Al Tobin, a local expressman, proved himself a hero today by stopping a runaway in almost the identical place where the runaway occurred tonight. a runaway horse, attached to a light wagon, came tearing down the street, Tobin ran in front of the animal and, throwing his coat over the horse's head, succeeded in stopping it before it had done any damage.

DICK VICTORY HIS LAST ONE

Supporters of Ohio Senator Believe That Burton Will Win Next Contest.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—It turns out, according to advices from Ohio, that Senator Dick's victory in the recent Republican convention, was a Pyrrhic one, and that his supporters and opponents alike regard it as his last one. Congressman Burton, who made the fight against the two senators, and was on the face of the outcome badly beaten, comes up smiling to announce that it would be continued in the next campaign and that one-third of the last convention which voted with his last time will be a good majority the next time.

It is declared that Foraker practically controls the new State committeen, but that Burton had almost as many votes in it as he had, while Dick has a meager minority, although he was re-elected chairman. Burton has been declared by his friends to be convinced as a result of assurances received since the convention that he will win in the next fight, and that he can easily defeat Dick for the Senate, which is his object.

DRAGGED BY A TROLLEY CAR

William Kelly Caught Between Two Cars and Seriously Injured.

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—With his foot caught in the steps, William Kelly of 2239 Bancroft way, Berkeley, was dragged and rolled by a car for twenty feet at Eighth street and Broadway, in Oakland, tonight. Mr. Kelly, who is at least 60 years of age, was about to board from the middle of the street a Grove-street car that was standing on the tracks, when he was swept off his feet by a car on the opposite track, which was passing at a good rate of speed. Kelly was absolutely helpless, as the space between the tracks on Broadway does not permit a man to stand upright with a car on either side. When he was picked up from the street Kelly found that he had suffered no external injuries of consequence. It is believed, however, that he may have sustained serious internal injuries in the region of the chest, as he was scarcely able to breathe for some time after the accident. Kelly was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where his chest was swathed in bandages. He was later taken to his home in Berkeley by friends.

KILLS MAN TO SAVE PARENTS

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy Uses Shotgun and Sheriff Refuses Arrest.

FORT COLLINS, Colo., Sept. 29.—To save the lives of his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams, the latter of whom had been assaulted with an axe, Sherman Williams, aged 16 years, shot and instantly killed Joel Clark, a wealthy land owner near Wellington. So justifiable did the killing of Clark appear that Sheriff McCreary refused to arrest the lad. Clark had attempted to run Williams off his ranch with an ax, and finally knocked him down with the broad side of the blade. Sherman Williams, the son, seized a shotgun, and taking aim, fired at Clark, the charge tearing away a large part of his skull.

WHISKERS.

In the columns of the "The Lady" we find a plea for the revival of the fashion of wearing whiskers. It is a little curious, perhaps, that such hirsute schemes cannot be left to the taste and fancy of the individual, but the modes do rule them as surely as they determine in what style a woman shall arrange her hair. Once upon a time the clean-shaven man used to be told that he looked like a groom; to tell him so at the present day would be, by implication, to insult Mr. Chamberlain, Winston Churchill and the Bishop of London.—London Graphic.

ROOSEVELT AT GUN PRACTICE

Passes Busy Day With North Atlantic Squadron and Praises Good Work.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Sept. 29.—Sitting at a table on the gun deck of the battleship Missouri off Barnstable, surrounded by the crew, President Roosevelt ate his dinner of roast pork, sweet potatoes and green corn today with as good an appetite and as much relish as any jackie in the fleet.

It was a grand day for the President, a great day for the fleet and especially a great day for the Missouri and her men. Not only was the President the guest of the battleship, but her gun crews in target practice made wonderfully good marks, every gun pointer who took part being personally complimented by the President, who grasped his hand; and, as a climax, the commander-in-chief of the army and navy posed on the Missouri's deck for a photograph, surrounded by these same pointers.

All the morning the President had been the most interested on the Missouri. Nothing connected with the target practice was overlooked by him, and from the time he first went into the great forward turret to watch the dummy drill until the last shot was fired and the Missouri had returned to her position, he had not been still for two consecutive minutes.

Spurred on by his presence, the gun crews did their best and their work drew many expressions of approval from the guest of honor. He was all over the ship when the target practice was on, using a pair of strong marine glasses to watch the effect of each shot.

"By George, that was a beauty," he exclaimed, as one of the immense projectiles from a 12-inch gun tore through the canvas target and ricochetted out to sea, sending column after column of water and foam spouting forty to fifty feet into the air. While the crews were using the 6-inch guns, he stood close behind them, but when they opened with the 12-inch he retired to the after-bridge, watching the shots from there.

The work of the crew was excellent. Three rounds were fired from the 6-inch guns, eight shots to a round, and every shot was a hit. The percentage of the three crews were 9.10, 9.22 and 9.40. The champion crew was in charge of Midshipman Douglas Howard and the gun pointer was Seaman J. H. Salesses.

POLICE TAKE TWO YOUTHS

San Jose Boys Break Curfew Law and Steal Second-Hand Sacks.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 29.—The police captured two youthful prisoners last night in the persons of William Bennett and Budd Riley. The boys are 11 and 14 years old and the formal charge made against them is violating the curfew ordinance. The lads are also alleged to have taken a number of second-hand sacks from Fike's woodyard on Santa Clara and Chief Carroll will have a talk with them before they are finally allowed their liberty.

POLICE GET TEDDY JUNIOR

Accused by Boston Officials of Guilt in Student Attack on Patrolman.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—Theodore Roosevelt Jr. went before Judge Sullivan of the Municipal Court bench in private session today to tell what he knew of the trouble that occurred Thursday night on the common between police of the La Grande-street station and Harvard students.

No warrant was issued for the boy's arrest and he came over from Cambridge of his own free will and went to the office of the superintendent of police, accompanied by John Forbes Perkins, young man said to be a roommate young ma nsaid to be a roommate of young Roosevelt. The interview with the superintendent and Captain Cain lasted perhaps fifteen minutes.

It was 11 o'clock when young Roosevelt, with Coxswain Blagden of the Harvard crew, Attorney Francis C. Bangs, Mr. Perkins and Captain Cain and Patrolman Gray entered the judge's court. They had been smuggled in to avoid the crowd of curious persons watching the Pemberton Square.

A man who knows the facts said that the action of the police in endeavoring to secure a warrant for young Roosevelt was merely to scare him into giving the name of the student alleged to have tripped Reserve Officer Frayer on the common. Frayer's nose was broken by the fall.

"I am absolutely innocent. No warrant had been issued for my arrest, and none will be. This affair is exaggerated and it is a great mistake," said young Roosevelt as he left the judge's lobby.

Judge Sullivan decided there was not sufficient evidence on which to warrant Roosevelt's arrest. Superintendent O'Meara of the police department last night declared that young Roosevelt had a hand in the assault on Policeman Frayer, and, although he was let go at the station when arrested, declared he would arrest him again today on a warrant. It was this threat that sent the student to the court today.

CONGRESS MAY BE ASSEMBLED

Rumor That Roosevelt May Order Session to Deal With Cuban Trouble.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE, W. R. Hearst service, over longest leased wire in the world.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—It is persistently rumored here tonight that President Roosevelt will call an extra session of Congress immediately following the November election, for the purpose of dealing with the Cuban question.

One Democratic Congressman was found who said he had it "mighty straight the session will be called before the middle of November."

While the present prophets do not admit the truth of the rumor, they say they can readily realize that an extra session will be called if the Cubans give too much trouble to the United States. This probably would be true if a party of Cubans undertook to oppose the Americans in guerrilla warfare. The appearance of truth is lent to the rumor by the fact that a short session of Congress is always a busy one, and the President, if he wanted to have Cuba annexed, would think it wise to have the matter settled before the rush of the regular session work was on.

SAVES HORSE FROM SUICIDE

Berkeley Young Man Refuses to Be Called a Hero for Aiding a Chinaman.

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—A horse was saved from suicide this morning by George Stutt, a popular young man about town, who now refuses to be called a hero. As the animal was about to dash into the bay from the en dof the West Berkeley wharf, dragging behind a Chinese vegetable wagon, Stutt seized it by the bit and forced it back upon its haunches.

The Oriental owner hastened to the scene and was profuse with his thanks, but Stutt was of the opinion that his services had been worth a five spot and suggested it to the Chinese, who replied in the classic language of Confucius: "You come around Filday."

REGULARS ARE ORDERED OUT

President Will Send 5,000 Troops to Cuba Without Hour's Delay.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—At 10:45 o'clock tonight Acting Secretary of War Oliver received a message from President Roosevelt ordering out the regulars selected for the Cuban campaign. The War department immediately, and this time without the possibility of a recall, wired the respective commanders that they should, without delay, start their forces for Newport News.

The word came after many hours of nerve-racking waiting on the part of the high officials of the department. First the request of Secretary Taft, then the order to set the troops in motion, then the rushing of the messages of modification after the thought that the sending of the army out of the United States should be explicitly indorsed by the President, gave the War department officials the first severe chill of the Cuban campaign—then the long wait.

Men who have faced death at the cannon's mouth without a tremor and have never been known to falter since their first case of hazing at West Point, discovered much to their chagrin that they had nerves.

The attendance of the President at fleet target practice off the Massachusetts coast was the cause of the trouble. The wireless system for some unexplainable reason failed to reach the President. It was while he was en route to Oyster Bay that he was informed of the predicament and hastened to afford relief. The department would not make public the text of the message. It contented itself with the public announcement that the President had indorsed the action of the department, and that he had ordered that the portion of the troops being held in readiness should be hurried to the rendezvous without a moment's delay.

Tomorrow's sun will see the majority, if not all, of the 5000 regular troops selected to invade Cuba swing out of Newport News.

DEFENDER OF WIFE IN JAIL

Resents Alleged Insult to His Family and Engages in Street Fight.

Because Rosabino Fenoni, an Italian, insulted his daughters and followed it up with an insult to his wife, Norman Ross went in search of the man last night, and meeting him at Nineteenth street and Telegraph avenue, admonished Fenoni, who took exception to Ross' statements and gave him a severe beating. The two men engaged in a tussle and were arrested for disturbing the peace by fighting.

It is alleged that Fenoni offered insults to Ross' daughters on several occasions. The indignant father heard of another insult on the part of the Italian last night, and in company with his wife, went out to look for the fellow. The two met and while they were having a wordy war, it is said that Fenoni insulted Mrs. Ross, who was standing nearby. Ross became incensed and endeavored to deliver a beating to the Italian, who grappled with him and scratched him about the face with his fingernails. The two men were then separated by a police office and taken to the station.

BET $10,000; LEFT AT POST

Millianoire Buys Horse for $35,000 and Then Wagers Enough to Even.

GRAVESEND, Sept. 29.—Hugh Grant Brown, the multi-millionaire Wall street operator, took a chance in connection with the Prospect Handicap this afternoon which made the post gamblers look for the colt Sewell fifteen minutes before the horses were saddled for the post. Then he bet enough on his horse to win him out. Brown wagered just $10,000 at an average price of 16 to 5. As a climax to the millionaire's speculation, Sewell was left at the post. Brown stood up in the clubhouse promenade and smiled as he saw the $35,000 youngster trail behind.

IS LASHED BY A WOMAN

Illinois Man Whipped in Street for Annoying Author's Wife.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—S. M. Littrell, district superintendent in Bellville, Ill., for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, was horsewhipped in the Belleville public square today by a woman who accused him of unpleasant attentions to her and her husband. He was met on the street by the woman and was led to the spot where her husband was hiding with a whip, and there thrashed until his face bled and was black and blue. Littrell's assailants were A. C. Martin, a former insurance solicitor in his employ, and Mrs. Martin.

All the parties in the sensational occurrence were arrested. At the police station Mrs. Martin said that Littrell had called at her home and followed her on the street, asking her to be his friend, until she could endure his attentions no longer and told her husband about it. Mr. and Mrs. Martin were taken before Police Magistrate Evans, who had witnessed the whipping, and entered pleas of guilty. Each was fined $3 and costs.

TRAIN DROPS INTO RIVER

Plunges Through Draw Near Memphis and Mail Clerk is Missing.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 29.—Part of Louisville and Nashville train No. 2 went through the draw on the bridge over the Cumberland River about 8 o'clock tonight, carrying down eight train men and mail clerks, seven being rescued. Engineer Frank Porter, Bowling Green, Ky., is missing. Only the engine, baggage and mail cars left the track, the long line of coaches and sleepers holding their position. The draw had been opened a few minutes before the train was due to allow a steamboat to pass. Owing to heavy trains and the long trestle that has to be crossed before the bridge is reached, the train was going at slow speed. Otherwise all would have gone into the river.

SAYS HE HIT HER IN FACE

Husband Sued for Divorce Restrained From Transferring Property.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Archibald Campbell, who is said to be related to King Edward of England, has been made the defendant in a suit for divorce brought by Margaret Campbell on the ground of cruelty. Campbell is a locomotive engineer in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company and was married in San Rafael August 15, 1900.

According to the complaint on the 25th of this month a woman called at the Campbell home at 3745 Twenty-third street, and rang for admittance. As Mrs. Campbell was about to go to the door she declares her husband shouted that if the caller was let in he would lock the plaintiff out of the house. Mrs. Campbell admitted her friend. The complaint does not state that the husband carried out the alleged threat. On another occasion the plaintiff asserts that the defendant struck her a blow in the face.

Judge Graham signed a restraining order directing the defendant not to dispose of any of his property or to interfere with his wife or his stepson.

Suits for divorce were filed yesterday by M. E. against W. A. Johnston, cruelty; Ida against August Pyritz, desertion; Ettie against Wallace M. Meyer, failure to provide.

GIRL BRIDE TRADED FOR TEAM AND WAGON

DES MOINES, Sept. 29.—Because she maintained she was traded to Henry Troopfer by her parents for a team of horses and a wagon, fourteen-year-old Anna Troopfer has commenced proceedings in the District Court to annul the marriage.

She states that she was married a year ago last September and says that her mother, to induce her to marry Troopfer, told her she would not have to live with him until she was older. But she asserts her husband took her to a hotel where he lived with her three months and then became so cruel she was compelled to leave him.

She sought protection of the Iowa Humane Society and was given a home.

MURDERER IS WILD MANIAC

Man Who Said He Assassinated Steunenberg May Never Testify in Court.

DENVER, Sept. 29.—Harry Orchard, the self-confessed murderer of Governor Frank Steunenberg, upon whose testimony the State of Idaho is depending to convict Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, the officials of the Western Federation of Miners, now confined in that State, is now a raving maniac. Advices which have reached Denver contain the information that Orchard's mind has given away under the terrible strain to which he has been subject for almost a year.

It is reported that Orchard is confined in the hospital ward of the Idaho penitentiary at Boise, and that the most radical measures are necessary to guard him. According to Orchard's statement, it was he, with the assistance of Jack Simpkins, who set the bomb by which Governor Steunenberg met his death at Caldwell, December 30, last.

Shortly after this answer, Orchard made what purported to be a confession in which he implicated the officers of the Western Federation of Miners. In addition to the Steunenberg murder, he confessed to a number of other crimes, which, he declared, were planned by the three men, Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, who were kidnaped from Colorado.

The Orchard confession was secured by James McPartland, superintendent of the Pinkerton agency. In all the months of his confinement Orchard has not been allowed to meet any one from the outside or any of the attorneys for the Western Federation of Miners. He has been kept in practically solitary confinement, and the long siege of seclusion, together with the weight of the crimes he confessed, have broken down his reason.

Shortly after Orchard's confession, the prosecution gave out that Steve Adams had likewise confessed, his statements corroborating in every detail the alleged confession of Orchard.

The surprise sprung by the defense several weeks ago, when Steve Adams repudiated his former confession, declaring it had been forced from him by threats and intimidation, was the immediate cause of Orchard's mind giving way, it is said.

The condition of Orchard will materially change the plans both of the prosecution and the defense. It will be impossible for Orchard to go on the witness stand and in that event the prosecution will attempt to introduce his confession and his evidence given before the grand jury which returned indictments against Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone.

TO BE TRIED FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Sept. 29.—Miss Edna Irvine, the pretty and impetuous daughter of State Treasurer Irvine, must face the charge of attempted murder in the district court. Justice Thomas rendered his decision in the preliminary trial in her case today.

Miss Irvine some weeks ago shot and seriously wounded George Knighton, foreman of the big Pratt-Leiter ranch at Cleremont, who, she alleges, insulted her.

Miss Irvine almost collapsed when Judge Thomas rendered his decision. Her bond was placed at $1000, which she promptly furnished.

On the morning of the shooting she said he administered a mild rebuke to her. In retaliation she secured a revolver and shot Knighton while his back was turned.

FIVE YEARS FOR WETZEL

Youth Convicted of Four Prior Crimes Gets Limit for Petty Larceny.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Samuel P. Wetzel, the 19-near-old son of Dr. S. P. Wetzel, was yesterday sentenced to serve five years in San Quentin prison for petty larceny. Judge Lawlor, who imposed the sentence, gave the young man the maximum term because he had been convicted on two charges of burglary before. Wetzel's attorney, James F. Brennan, made a strong plea for probation, as did also the prisoner himself and his Wetzel had been allowed his liberty on the two burglary convictions and had served two terms in the county jail for petty larceny, he thought it would be misplaced clemency to parole him again.

Mrs. Wetzel, the mother of the young criminal, sat in the courtroom while sentence was being pronounced, her face hidden in her hands and her frame shaking with sobs.

LOST WATCH; CRIED THIEF

San Jose Woman Left Timepiece in Store, Where Police Found It.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 29.—Chief of Police Thomas W. Carroll distinguished himself by a clever bit of detective work yesterday. Mrs. Nat Weinberg, residing at 1020 Locust street, reported that a stranger whom she had permitted to use her telephone, had stolen her valuable gold watch and chain from a bureau drawer. Chief Carroll visited the woman's house and made a careful search of the premises. When the woman described how the timepiece was taken, the chief at once declared that no burglar had taken it. He then asked Mrs. Weinberg where she had been shopping last. She told him. The store was visited, and the watch was found in the dressing-room where she had left it.

FOR GANS AND SMITH, $15,000

Millionaire Buys Horse for and the Latter Wires Ac- Enough to Get Even.

DENVER, Sept. 29.—By a telegram received today by Johnnie Corbett, manager for Rube Smith, the Manhattan, Nevada, Athletic Club offered a purse of $15,000 for a finish fight between Smith and Joe Gans, the colored lightweight champion. The telegram was signed by A. L. Corey and reads as follows:

"Fifteen thousand for Smith and Gans, finish fight. Will you sign?"

MOSCOW, Sept. 29.—Four young men, who attempted to rob a mirror store here last Thursday and who were condemned to death by a drumhead court-martial, were shot today.

HAZING VICTIM IS NEAR DEATH

Pennsylvania Freshman Was Hurled Down Stairs and His Skull Fractured.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—Brutally hazed by upper classmen on the night of his first college day, William Forrester of Milwaukee, a freshman of the University of Pennsylvania, is lying in the University hospital in a critical condition. The attack on Forrester occurred in the dormitories while he was attempting to tear down from the wall a proclamation put up by the upper classmen, instructing the first year students how to conduct themselves in the university precincts. In the attack he was hurled down a flight of stairs, sustaining a fractured skull, while a fist blow on his right eye may cost him its sight. An investigation probably will be made by the faculty of the college on Monday, as all forms of hazing have been strictly forbidden.

EIGHT WOMEN DIE IN WRECK

New York Flyer Dashes Into Long Branch Local—55 Are Injured.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—Eight women were killed on the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Eddington, thirty miles north of Philadelphia, when the 7:30 New York Flyer this morning dashed into the rear of the Long Branch and New York Express. Fifty-five passengers, men, women and children were mangled by the terrible grinding together of the coaches. Of the wounded, fifteen, most women, will either die or be crippled for life. Only two of the dead have as yet been identified. These are Mrs. Mary O'Malley of Philadelphia, and Mrs. William H. Connell of Trenton.

MUST CONCEDE, SAYS LIPTON

New York Yacht Club Will Have t oChange Rules or Lose Race.

By DUNCA NCURRY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Thomas Lipton was a passenger on the White Star liner Celtic, which arrived today. When asked about a possible challenge for the America's cup, he said:

"I would challenge tomorrow provided I could get the New York Yacht Club to accept one under their new rule, which provides for a more seaworthy and wholesome type of boat. I cannot challenge under their old rules for the reason that I can find no designer in England who would build a boat under those conditions.

"Of course, any challenge would have to come through my club. I am here to meet some of my American friends, and will call at the New York Yacht Club on Monday or Tuesday, when I will try to find out what their wishes are on the subject, and incidentally, ascertain where I'm at.

"There is not very much time left to challenge for a race next year, as, if I come, I want to come with a boat that will have a chance to lift the cup.

"I have been in consultation with Fife and Hylan, but neither of them would consider an offer to design a boat for the reason that every year it is getting more risky to cross the Atlantic with boats carrying such tremendous overhangs. It is not that we can't built a boat, but the danger of trying to cross the Atlantic in one of these flimsy shells which endanger the lives of their crew and everyone else."

Green and Gold Combination

The metal bed pictured above is enameled a rich green color, and decorated in gold—this combination of colors is exceptionally pleasing—the effect is exceedingly striking.

It is one of our new Fall designs—and at Breuner's price cannot be duplicated elsewhere. Solidly constructed. Note the curved rail on either head or foot end—these add to the appearance—besides strengthening the bed, giving it that stability, so often found wanting in some beds now on the market. Full double size. Price, $6.85.

SHE WENT TO GAY PICNICS

Wife of Patrolman Also Spent His Salary and He Wants a Divorce.

Mrs. Minnie Crossman's practice of leaving her husband Police Officer E J Crossman, and remaining away from home for days at a time caused him to file a suit for divorce in the Superior Court on the grounds of extreme cruelty Four times his wife left him, the first occasion being in August, 1904 when she told Crossman that she was going to visit friends who were living on a ranch in Santa Clara, but instead of going there she spent the three weeks of her absence at San Jose

In December, 1904, while her husband was asleep, Mrs Crossman stole out of the house and remained away two days November 18 1905, she left her home and did not return until 1 o clock in the morning of the following day On both occasions Crossman declares he had no knowledge of her whereabouts November 21 two days later she again disappeared, temporarily

Crossman states that for the last two years his wife would attend Sunday picnics at public resorts where dancing, drinking and carousing were engaged in and that on these times she would represent herself as an unmarried woman He would turn over all his salary to her every month but instead of spending it on the household she would use it for her own pleasure, meanwhile contracting large grocery bills The couple was married in this city on July 16, 1900

PROMINENT MAN INVESTS HEAVILY

CHARLES B LESTRETO MAKES HIS RESIDENCE HERE

That Oakland is coming to the front is in evidence every day The substantial business men of San Francisco who had not discovered, before the earthquake and fire the many attractions of this city, both for residence and business have had some opportunity in the past few months to look over the ground for themselves and the result is that the keen, thoughtful and unprejudiced investor has modestly and shrewdly come over to Oakland and planted an anchor to windward' and located his permanent abode here

Mr Lestreto has been for many years a resident and prominent business man in San Francisco While he has not deserted that city in a business way he has made Oakland his permanent abode and has not only purchased a beautiful residence on Hill Side avenue but also a large tract of land adjoining the same and will hereafter be recognized as one of our most substantial and influential citizens In all social relations both he and his estimable wife will be gladly welcomed to the Athens of the Pacific The TRIBUNE cordially extends to them its most sincere wishes for their future happiness

WE ARE OFFERING A

SPECIAL FOR EVERY DAY THIS WEEK.

Our sample room has been so crowded when we offered all our specials on one day that we have hit upon the plan to offer a different special each day of the week. We have only 25 each of these specials, so select your day and come early. Watch our specials from now till Christmas if you are looking for something good.

Remember we are manufacturer's agents and we sell direct from the factories, thus saving you the MIDDLE MAN'S PROFIT. Every lady buying from us is impressed with the fact that we also save her money when we sell from our sample room and make no effort to display, for she knows we keep our expenses down to save for her. She can tell you, though, that her furniture is just as effective and as highly finished when it reaches her home and it gives satisfaction, for it is new and not worn out by constant shifting about on a display floor.

There is $100 on deposit with The Tribune to be given to any charitable institution if we do not do as we agree. This shows that we mean business, doesn't it? And that we are sure we are giving our customers HONEST FURNITURE.

REMEMBER ONE SPECIAL FOR EACH DAY OF THE WEEK, and you can have them for $1 down and $1 a week. We like to make friends.

FREE! FREE! FREE!

To advertise our store and Culligan Range, we will give to each purchaser one of our iron Frying Pans.

Mrs Katie McLaughlin has filed her answer to the complaint brought against her by C R Hagquist and his wife Jakabin, who claimed that she agreed to sell them a house and lot on Thirty-eighth street, near Telegraph avenue, August 2 for $1700, but when they presented the money refused to sell James McLaughlin, Katie's husband is also made a defendant and in their answer they deny that Katie was the owner of the property on the date named or that she entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs to sell it She declares that her husband owns the premises that she is illiterate, and that the plaintiffs by 'fraud, misrepresentation and undue influence,' procured her signature to a "document pertaining to the sale and purchase of the property described in their complaint She declares that neither she nor her husband knew the contents of said document

COYOTE MAKES CALL AT COURTHOUSE

Consternation was caused yesterday among courthouse officials particularly the girls, by the appearance on the steps of the Hall of Records of an animal, which upon close inspection proved to be a half-breed coyote The coyote hed evidently escaped from its keeper and did not take kindly to the attention it attracted because it suddenly left its place of vantage and disappeared in the direction of Washington street, followed by a crowd of boys.

ARRESTED FOR HURLING ROCK AT TRAIN

VALLEJO, Sept. 29—Peter Cristini is under arrest here for having thrown a rock at the Sacramento local, which leaves Vallejo about 5 o'clock in the evening He was taken into custody by the train crew last evening. Cristini is now out on probation for a charge of petty larceny, which was placed against him several months ago The railroad company has announced its intention of sending special prosecutors to this city to attend to Cristini's case.

OAKLAND TRIBUNE
W. E. DARGIE, PRESIDENT.

Verdict in the Tilden Case.

Of all the killings in San Francisco during the days immediately following the disaster of April 18, the most reprehensible was the slaying of Heber C. Tilden. Yet the acquittal of the parties responsible for his death was a natural and logical sequence to the conditions prevailing at the time. While the shooting of Mr. Tilden was a wholly unjustifiable atrocity, is was without malice or premeditation and was prompted by no bad motive.

He was slain by excited individuals who thought they were doing right, and who had a confused sense of their responsibility and authority. As a fact, they were without any legal authority whatever, but were undoubtedly doing patrol service from a sense of public duty. They were foolish and hasty to an extraordinary degree, but certainly had no criminal intent. While their blameworthiness is universally admitted, it was mitigated by the extraordinary conditions prevailing at the time, and the circumstances rendered it morally impossible to get a jury that would consign the slayers to prison as felons.

All the other killings were perpetrated by men in uniform and acting in a sense by authority. It is lamentable that none of them was strictly justifiable, but the facts in each case were never clearly ascertained, and in no instance was there any appearance of malice. Excitement operating on weak judgment appears to have caused all the homicides, and at this time when reaction has brought calmness of mind it is difficult to judge fairly the degree of turpitude involved in acts culpable in themselves but lacking in the element of criminal intent.

The Mayor had issued an order to shoot looters and rioters—an order that was justifiable under the circumstances, but without legal sanction, strictly speaking, but which was supported by public opinion as necessary in the exigency presented; and this order gave the color of authority to acts in themselves illegal The consequences, deplorable as they were in some instances, rest therefore upon a condition rather than individual responsibility. A soldier in the ranks cannot inquire into the authority of his superior nor question the legality of an order he is commanded to execute; and when the execution of a general order is left to the discretion of men of little experience and excitable natures sad mistakes are sure to occur. The wonder is that so few of them were made in San Francisco.

After all, it is extremely doubtful if either public policy or the ends of justice would be served by convicting and imprisoning the men who committed the unjustifiable homicides during the stress San Francisco was under. Punishment in those cases might deter others in like situations from acting promptly and decisively in some future exigency summoning men to uphold the supreme law of self preservation in communities thrown by sudden stress or calamity into chaos. The letter of the law was violated by every official in San Francisco, from the Mayor down, but the violations were in the interests of order and public security, hence the fatal blunders committed are not within the category of crimes within the meaning of the law.

Taft Will Govern Cuba.

However regrettable it may be that our government has been compelled to take charge of the administration in Cuba, there is an assurance of a speedy return to peace and order in the island. Secretary Taft will take prompt and decisive measures to stop the guerrilla fighting and destruction of property in the provinces, which is the most necessary thing to be done at present. The warfare heretofore carried on is of the kind peculiar to Spanish-American revolutions; roving bands moving without any concert of action, looting, burning and laying waste the country, driving the peaceable and industrious inhabitants to the cities. These bands are under the leadership of chieftains, each of whom is a law unto himself, whose principal aim is to advance their political ambition regardless of the consequences to their country. These leaders are profuse in their profession of patriotism and love of country, but they will not make a single secrifice or abate a jot of their pretensions to bring about peace and submission to the orderly processes of law. Secretary Taft is just the man to stamp out that sort of nonsense. The President could not have selected a man better fitted for the delicate and disagreeable task we have undertaken in Cuba than William H. Taft. Let us hope that it will not be bloody or protracted.

Former Judge Noyes of Riverside is doing his best to raise a political stink. While on the bench he created considerable judicial stink.

The Los Angeles Herald nominates Hoke Smith of Georgia to be Bryan's running mate in 1908. In that case the Democratic platform should read. "Government ownership of railroads, and to h—ll with the nigger."

The Situation in New York.

It has probably not escaped the attention of William Jennings Bryan that the Democrats who are denouncing Hearst are the men who bolted his nomination for the Presidency in 1896 and 1900. Belmont, Ryan, Jerome and all that crowd opposed Bryan with all their might each time he was a candidate. The New York Times, New York World, New York Evening Post and Brooklyn Eagle could no more stomach the Nebraska statesman than they can Hearst. They found an ideal candidate in Alton B. Parker, but Parker was the worst-beaten man that ever ran for President. The majority against him in his own State—New York—was phenomenal. Hearst will probably be defeated, but it is quite certain that no other Democrat is able to poll the vote he can. The fact is, that the Democracy of the Empire State is split into two factions as far apart in aims and purposes as the poles. A negative, colorless man might get the nominal support of both factions, but could poll the full strength of neither and would satisfy nobody. The bolters are prominent by reason of their wealth and position, but they are numerically insignificant. Hearst has behind him the real voting masses of the party, and his candidacy will have the effect of bringing about a new alignment that will more nearly define the line between opposing policies and principles than has heretofore been drawn.

When Bryan takes the stump in New York in favor of Hearst what will the Democrats who read Hearst out of the party at Sacramento say then, poor things?

As this is Sunday and a political campaign is in progress, it is not amiss to remind the politcians of a certan commandment which forbids bearing false witness

Gillett Grows on the People.

Wherever he goes Mr. Gillett is met by large crowds who greet him with cordial enthusiasm—a convincing proof that he is making a favorable impression on the voters. At Vallejo and Martinez the audiences assembled to hear him speak were larger than was expected. Mr. Gillett's dignified manner, his sensible talks and his convincing way of presenting the real issues before the people at this time are having their natural effect on the thinking public. He indulges in neither rhodomontade nor abuse, and resorts to no hysterical appeals to passion and prejudice; in short, addresses himself in an earnest way and with sensible arguments to the intelligent understanding. He shows why the Republican party should be successful in this election, how necessary it is to the general welfare that the policies for which President Roosevelt and the majority in Congress stand shall be endorsed and upheld. He does not claim that his election is indispensible to the salvation of the country, but points to the history of the past as the promise of the future. His facts and common-sense reasoning take all the sound and fury out of the hysteria and fireworks which precede him, and set people to thinking in the plain old-fashioned way. The Republican candidate is a man who grows on the people the more he reveals himself and his way of looking at things, and will therefore arouse deeper interest in the popular mind as the campaign proceeds. The sober judgment of the State is bound to gravitate to him as the needle to the pole.

At a recent election in Seattle a proposition that the city own and operate the street railways was defeated by a vote of 5,762 for, to 7,198 against. It is not singular that the proposition should have been defeated, but it is surprising that is received so many votes. It was a cumbrous scheme, and was opposed by a number of municipal ownership advocates on the ground that it was unscientific and inexpedient. As a business proposition it was open to grave criticism on grounds other than objection to the policy of public ownership. The strength of the vote for the proposition is therefore a significant indication of the drift of popular sentiment. The tendency exhibited is not due so much to a conviction that public ownership is the wisest policy as it is to reprobation of the character of the service rendered by public-service corporations and the general attitude assumed by them in dealing with the public.

THE HUMBLE AMERICAN MAN.

(The delegation of Kentucky girls sent across the ocean by Colonel Watterson of Kentucky at the same time The Bee sent a group of California girls abroad, has returned with a poor opinion of foreign masculinity and a correspondingly high opinion of the American man.)

Ere they went across the ocean they had got a sort of notion
That our men would hardly please a taste fastidious.
They would talk of the Italic, the Germanic and the Gallic
And Britannic with comparison invidious.
But they've been
And they've seen;
They have gone from Beersheba to Dan.
Yet of all, far and wide, that they've seen, they decide
That they like the American man.

They would hate to have to marry Carlo, Max, Alphonse or 'Arry—
Who in turn have been a trifle hypercritical—
They've inspected them by methods analytical,
And they say
That as they
Would the blase boulevardiers scan
Each would make up her mind she's left better behind;
She preferred the American man.

Well, it's just what we expected; we have never been affected
By their criticism; we didn't care a particle
For a due appreciation of the output of our nation
We were sure of when they'd seen the foreign article.
They have learned
When they spurned.
Which was probably Watterson's plan
Waning faith to restore—anyway, it's a score
For the humble American man.

SOCIETY

One of the most beautiful marriage ceremonies ever witnessed at Coronado took place yesterday at that charming resort at Christ Episcopal Church. Mr. John A. McNear of Oakland and Mrs. Willa Mosely Grundwald of that place, formerly of St. Petersburg and Paris, were wedded in the presence of only the members of the family of both bride and groom and a few intimate friends. The Rev. Charles A. Spalding, rector of the church, performed the ceremony, which was the quaint and impressive old ring service of the early days of the Episcopal church. Mr. Hugh Allan, the gifted young organist, played artistically the most exquisite music, which, together with the mass of palms, ferns and rare plants and flowers with which the beautiful little church was decorated, formed a most entrancing whole for both ear and eye, for this charming but simple nuptials.

The bride was gowned in a very smart Paris frock of pastel blue crepe de chine, with hat to correspond, which was extremely becoming, and set off her dark beauty with striking effect.

Mrs. H. K. Drouillard, who was matron of honor, looked charming in an elaborate white gown of English embroidery, and Valenciennes lace, with black picture hat.

Mr. Seward McNear, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

After the church service an elaborate wedding breakfast was served at high noon at the home of the bride on Adella avenue and Tenth street, at which only the immediate relations of the two families were present. Toasts were in order and a merry hour was spent before leaving for the half-after-1 o'clock train for the North. Mr. and Mrs. McNear were accompanied to the station by a number of friends, who wished them God-speed on their honeymoon trip, which will be to the City of Mexico. After a month spent in that fascinating place, being especially attractive at this time of the year, they will return to Coronado for a brief stay before coming to Oakland, where they will reside.

The bride lived in San Diego some years ago, where she was a great belle, and one of the most beautiful of the charming coterie of society girls, for which San Diego was noted at that time. Mrs. Veva S. Beane, mother of Mrs. McNear, and wife of Colonel E. J. Beane, has many old-time friends in the North, as has her daughter, as well as in San Diego. Mrs. McNear retains her interest in her Coronado home, where she has been residing since her return from abroad a year ago. Mr. McNear is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. McNear of Oakland, and is well known in this city, where he has extensive holdings in the business in which his father and brothers are associated with him. The members of the two families from Oakland and Los Angeles were present at the wedding. The following is a list of the guests: Colonel and Mrs. E. J. Beane, Los Angeles; Mrs. G. W. McNear, Miss McNear, Mr. and Mrs. Seward McNear, Miss Ruth Adams, Oakland; Mrs. Sands Forman, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brander, San Francisco; Captain Hunt, U. S. A.; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Doolittle, Mr. Clarence Sprigg, San Diego; Mrs. W. H. Bailhache, Miss Bailhache, Mrs. Mary Kirby and Mr. Lewis Kirby, Coronado.

Mrs. J. Stoll entertained recently at an enjoyable card party. The prizes were carried off by Miss Suncle, Miss Schneider, Messrs. Held and Howell.

ELABORATE DINNER.

The Morris, Scudder and Ruskin clubs held a joint dinner Friday evening at the Piedmont clubhouse. The tables were in the smaller dining room, covers being laid for about thirty guests. T. P. D. Gray presided in a happy manner, welcoming the members to this reunion and also to the activities of the coming year. After music, regrets were announced from Jack London, George Sterling and others who were unable to be present, also a telegram of greeting from N. O. Nelson, the philanthropist of St. Louis.

During the discussion of the dinner there were reports of the work of the several organizations. Mrs. Mary L. Clifford spoke for the William Morris Club of San Francisco, Mrs. David L. Lyon for the Vida Scudder Club of Oakland and Professor Frederick Irons Bamford for the Ruskin Club. After a round table on "Retrospect and Prospect," an original poem written by George Sterling, was read by Professor Bamford. The paper of the evening by Mrs. E. E. Greenman, dealing with some phases of psychology with special application, was listened to with great interest and received with commendation.

In the company were Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Mr. Carl Hoffman, Rev. J. Stitt Wilson of Berkeley, Professor Frederick Irons Bamford, Mr. and Mrs. Halvor Hauch of Alameda, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Denison, Mrs. E. E. Greenman, Miss Carrie Wheelan, Miss Tuttle, Miss Frontin, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. D. Gray, Miss Wilbur, Mrs. Mary L. Clifford, Mrs. Glauch, Mrs. Scott of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. D. WINTER LECTURES.

Among the most interesting lectures of the winter will be the University Extension lectures given by Professor Henry Morse Stephens on alternate Wednesday afternoons at the Chabot Observatory. The attractive general subject is the "Napoleonic Period in Europe," and the interesting series has already begun. These lectures are under the auspices of the Teachers' Club.

Another course of winter lectures is announced by a number of young people who have organized and secured the services of William Norman Guthrie, lecturer on general literature in the University of Chicago. The subject announced is "Poetry and Life," a study of modern poet-prophets.

There are to be twelve lectures and the second of the series will be given at 484 Prospect avenue next Monday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon on "Shelley, the Idealist."

Miss Caroline Hawley and the Misses de Fremery are the promoters of the movement and the course is to be given under the direction of A. Mackay Sutherland, who has the management of Professor Guthrie's engagements in California.

⁂

In the lemonade booth will be Miss Elsie Everson, Florence O'Neil, Allie Bennetts, Jessie Smith, Isabel Ruch, Agnes Ehrenberg, Harriett Ehrenberg, Margarite Ogden, Josephine Moller, Mabel Moller, Ora Root, Charlotte Beach, Grace Downey.

The Ebell Club announces the October meeting for next Tuesday afternoon at the Home Club. At 2 o'clock the business meeting will be held and an election of delegates to the Alameda District California Federation of Women's Clubs held in Stockton.

At 3 o'clock there is to be a musical program and an informal reception, open to all friends. No cards of admission are necessary for this occasion. The decorations are in charge of Mrs. H. C. Capwell, assisted by Mrs. George B. M. Gray.

The program of music is to be under the direction of Mrs. B. H. Langley and is announced as follows:

Sonata in A (for violin and piano), Handel; andante, allegro, adagio, allegretto moderato—Miss Hyde, Miss Olive Hyde. Songs: (a) "Farewell," Franz; (b) "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," Old English; (c) "My Song Is of the Sturdy North," Ed. German—William Edwin Chamberlain, accompanied by Mrs. W. E. Chamberlain. Piano solo (to be announced)—Miss Clara D. Rauhut. Adagio from Concerto No. 1, Bruch—Miss Hyde, Miss Olive Hyde.

Mrs. Langley will be assisted in receiving during the afternoon by the following club members:

AN ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. J. W. Root of San Francisco has announced the engagement of his grandniece, Miss Ruth Lucinda Root, to Alfred Leslie Root of this city.

Miss Root is a charming New York girl, but has made her home for several years past with her uncle and aunt. The groom-to-be is a son of Mrs. A. W. Root of Oak street, and is manager of the family interests near Modesto. The wedding will take place in December.

⁂

Sylvanus Cobb Farnham and his charming bride are spending their honeymoon at Del Monte.

There are more Easterners at the hotel now than people from about the bay, and a number of our English cousins happen to be there this week. I suppose no globe-trotter comes to the West without spending at least a few days at Del Monte, and taking the Seventeen-Mile Drive, which latter is one of the most characteristic in the world. Woods and beaches of one country usually very much suggest the woods and shores of other lands, but nowhere else can one see such gnarled skeletons of cypresses contorted into shapes so weird and startling; and here alone is sand of the whiteness of snow.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Walsh returned to Oakland after the Reliability Test Run, but took another spin down this week.

Several automobile parties came up from the South. Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Buck have been motoring about that region and arrived here a few days ago from San Diego. Their son, Frank H. Buck Jr., who is living in Berkeley now, came down to the hotel to be with them before they returned to their home in Vacaville.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Newhall brought in their automobile from Los Angeles Mrs. M. W. Longstreet, who is one of the old F. F. V.'s now settled in the South, Miss Utley, Alfred H. Wilcox and Major Gerald L. Rathbone.

Albert Searle, city editor of the Los Angeles Express, is here with his wife and son.

J. M. Culp, the president of the Southern railway, came up in his private car, and with him his wife and daughter, and their guests, C. V. Edwards of Anchorage, Kentucky, and Ralph Shropshire of Washington, D. C.

J. Downey Harvey came down from the city in his machine and brought Charles Carpy, A. D. Schindler and J. B. Rogers.

Last Saturday the Phinney boys came again in their automobile from Stanford to see their mother. The quartet were J. E. Farnum, E. K. Farnum, W. C. Phinney and A. A. Phinney.

Miss Chesebrough and Miss Kalkman of Oakland were here with Miss Eleanor Sa[illegible] of Baltimore and Miss M. L. Senrie of Napa.

A party of Berkeley people were down last week. Among them were C. B. Noyes, R. H. Smilie, Mrs. R. Smilie and Miss Florence Smilie.

G. H. Richardson of Oakland and F. W. Rounthwaite of Piedmont were recent arrrivals.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hickmann of Alameda came down for a few days.

Lansing Kellogg and his bride, who was Ethyl Hager, after a week's stay in the town of Monterey, came over to Del Monte, where they will spend the rest of their honeymoon.

Capt. C. H. McKinstry was here on a visit to Mrs. McKinstry, who has been down for some time. She keeps the automobile here and fully enjoys the lovely drives along the sea.

Mrs. William Kohl has been here this last week.

R. M. Tobin was down over Sunday.

George Armsby brought with him this week his brother, J. K. Armsby of Chicago. Their mother, Mrs. J. K. Armsby, who has been at the hotel for some time, will remain a month or so longer.

Timothy Hopkins made another visit to Mrs. Hopkins and Miss Lydia.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Howell are here.

Mrs. J. B. Owens, Miss Burneston Owens and Anson Herrick came last week. Mrs. Owens and her daughter have returned to San Francisco, but Mr. Herrick is still here.

F. H. Gassoway was down for a few days.

Professor Frederick Irons Bamford made a short stay at Del Monte, after a few weeks spent at El Carmelo, Pacific Grove and Carmel-by-the-Sea.

After the Methodist Conference Pacific Grove is a little more quiet. Last Wednesday eight extra coaches were put on the morning train to accommodate those who were leaving. A goodly number of people are still there, nevertheless. Many have put their children in the schools and will remain throughout the winter, during which season much more sunshine is enjoyed than in the summer months. The first rain of the season fell Sunday morning—just enough of a shower to lay the dust. Afterwards and ever since the air has been like an elixir.

Colonel and Mrs. W. R. Smedberg made another visit to their daughter, Mrs. G. W. McIver, at Hotel El Carmelo. Mrs. McIver hopes to have the new home at the Monterey Post ready by the time Major McIver arrives from the East.

There is much entertaining both at the Presidio and the Grove this week in honor of Admiral Farenholt, who is visiting Admiral and Mrs. Trilley. Mrs. Captain Adams, a charming young Southern matron, gives a dinner to him tomorrow.

Mrs. General Girard is visiting her sister, Mrs. Bush, always so popular in army circles.

Mrs. Clinton Day and Miss Carol Day have returned to Berkeley. They were visiting Mrs. Irving Stringham, who is now making preparations to move up to Berkeley after a prolonged stay in Pacific Grove.

Some Oaklanders who have been here this last week are M. E. Brown, S. Statenberg, Miss Cole and Miss Lillie Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, Mrs. Herman Bendel, Louis Met, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Linscott of Berkeley, and Mrs. W. Getch of Alameda.

H. E. Greene came down from Oakland to join Mr. and Mrs. H. E. R. Green and Fred Greene. They all returned to their home a few days ago.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mrs. Frank Moffitt, who is at the Hotel Metropole, leaves this week for an extended tour in the East, where she will spend the Christmas holidays. Mrs. Moffitt will pay a visit to Canada, and famous resorts on the Atlantic Coast, but her principal quest for pleasure will be devoted to meeting her son, who has just entered Harvard. Mrs. Moffitt declares that she is not going to forsake Oakland, which will be a source of delight to her many friends in this city.

E. R. Heid has returned after a three weeks' visit at Monte Rio.

Mrs. C. H. Rice and her daughter, Miss Octavia, have returned after a four weeks' outing in Mendocino county.

MISS LETITIA BARRY, who will assist at the fete to be given by the Ladies' Relief Society.

MISS MOLLIE MATHES, who will assist at the fete to be given by the Ladies' Relief Society.

MISS MARGARET FRANCK, who will assist at the fete to be given by the Ladies' Relief Society.

TOOK HER SISTER FOR A BURGLAR

ORIENT, L. I., Sept. 28.—Mrs. Mary Shaw and her mother, Mrs. Martha Brown, today are entertaining a "burglar" they caught during the early morning hours.

Mrs. Shaw's sister, Mrs. Edward Howe, of Brooklyn, planned to surprise her mother and sister by appearing at breakfast. Arriving in Orient at 3 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Howe walked to the old homestead, climbed up the grape arbor and entered the room she had occupied before her marriage. She made noise enough to awaken her sister, who sprang out of bed and ran to the room. She sprang at the "burglar."

"Is that you, May?" came a sleepy voice from the pillow, and then there was recognition and mutual embrace.

FALLS FOUR STORIES; GETS UP LAUGHING

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 29.—John Brennison, a carpenter, was at work today on the top of a four-story building when he slipped and fell to the ground. He landed squarely on his feet, picked up his cap and started back for the roof. Horrified fellow workmen who believed the man must be injured internally restrained him and sent for a doctor.

"You can't do anything for me but offer congratulations," said Brennison when the physician appeared. When the doctor insisted upon making an examination, Brennison struck him in the face.

"I don't mind a little tumble, but I am afraid of a sawbones," he explained. Then Brennison resumed work.

SLIDES 100 FEET THROUGH FLAMES

PITTSTON, Pa., Sept. 29.—Jacob Caril, employed as a laborer in No. 6 shaft of the Erie Coal Company, was in danger of death twice yesterday morning, first by an explosion of gas, an dthen by a thrilling slide of more than 100 feet through the flames to a place of safety.

Young Caril had climbed a steep incline inside. His father called to him to be careful of gas, and as he did so there was an explosion. A large quantity of gas had been set off, and flames surged all around him.

He was pitched down the incline that he had just ascended, more than 100 feet. He was badly injured.

THIEF FAVORS FINE HOUSES

Has Robbed Three Lake Merritt Residences and Knows His Business.

A bold burglar well dressed and who seems to understand his business is now operating among the residences in that portion of the city west of Lake Merritt where many fine residences are located Thus far he has eluded capture The police have a good description of the thief and it is believed that he will be apprehended and placed behind prison bars in the near future

Thus far the burglar has entered three residences those of George Faulkner on Webster street G E Lukens 1362 Jackson street and C R Hatch 13 2 Harrison street In the Faulkner and Hatch homes the burglar was surprised at work and the description obtained of him in both instances tallies almost exactly

While he was looting the Hatch residence Friday night he encountered the head of the house and his son who were playing cards in an upstairs room The bold thief was surprised for only a moment but he recovered his nerve and made the two men submit to being searched and relieved of their valuables at the point of a revolver which he flourished

In making his command the burglar asserted that he was the person who held up T A Smith in the Faulkner residence and he stated that he had been compelled to rob homes because of losses he sustained in the San Francisco fire

When he entered the Faulkner and Hatch residences the thief wore a light suit of clothes with a mask over the lower portion of his face In both instances he made good his escape before his victims could recover their equilibrium

The fellow is a smart young man with black eyes and black hair He orders his victims about and always manages to leave an avenue of escape

HIS PET DOG FOLLOWED HIM

And So Chinese Youth Is Arrested on Charge of Cruelty to Animals

For allowing his pet dog to follow him when he rode into Oakland from Berkeley, Gin Ki a Chinese youth was arrested yesterday afternoon upon the complaint of G Minetti of 118 Eighth street who claims that he is a humane officer

Those who have dogs had better carry them hereafter or Minetti will have them placed in jail He stated yesterday that he believed the Chinese boy was guilty of cruelty to animals for allowing his little fox terrier to follow him such a long distance Gin was released on $10 bail

SECOND ALARM ONLY A JOKE

Firemen Make Two Trips in Brief Time to Tenth and Broadway.

After witnessing the turning out of the fire department in response to a still alarm sent in for a small blaze in the Victor restaurant about 9 15 o'clock last night some person thought it a good joke to see the fire laddies rush out again, and a second alarm was turned in from the same vicinity The fire wagons hurried to Tenth and Broadway, where the Victor restaurant is located, but found that the alarm was a false one.

The fire in the Victor restaurant was caused by the catching fire of a pan of grease in the kitchen of the place The blaze threatened to be a lively one but was extinguished before the department arrived The grease was allowed to burn out and no damage resulted

UNION LABOR CONVENTION

Candidates for Office Gather in Hamilton Hall and Make Speeches.

The Union Labor party opened its county campaign in Hamilton Hall last night, with music and song and speeches from candidates on the county ticket.

The rally was opened by Chairman Ormsby, who introduced P. S. Gillett, the chairman of the evening.

The first speaker was G. W. Bacon, candidate for County Auditor. C. R. Elder, candidate for the Assembly, was scheduled for second place. As he was not present, H. G. Walker, candidate for Superior Judge, spoke next and was followed by J. L. Donovan, for Tax Collector.

Other candidates present, and addressing the meeting, were: T. O. Crawford, who has held the office of County Superintendent of Schools for several terms; T. E. Henderson, Coroner; C. D. Rogers, Treasurer, J. M. Kelley, Supervisor, Third District; A. K. Grim, Recorder; C. W. Petry, State Senator, Sixteenth District; M. H. Lane, Constable; G. Samuels, Police Judge; R. Wiand, Public Administrator; J. W. Gillogly, County Clerk; H. S. Aldrich, Police Judge; C. H. Spinks, Surveyor, and C. E. Thomas, Assessor.

Between the speeches of the various candidates selections were rendered by a band of twelve pieces and the Union Labor Quartet.

FIND TRAITOR IN THE PARTY

Los Angeles Democrats Uncover Plot to Give Post to Opponents.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—The Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee this afternoon passed a resolution indorsing A. C. Black, candidate for railroad commissioner from the Third district. This indorsement was brought about by the enaction of R. T. Goings, the candidate put in the field by the Democratic convention at Sacramento. Goings failed to file his certificates of nomination in time to get his name on the ticket. This, local Democrats believe, was done for the sole purpose of presenting the office to Theodore Summerland, Republican president of the Los Angeles city council, and protector of the railroads, street and steam, in all matters which come before that body. Hence the indorsement of Black, whom the Democrats admit is the best man for the place.

OFFICES HE HAD DECLINED

Gompers Makes Statement to Show When He Became A Citizen.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—In the October number of Federationists, the official monthly organ of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his account of the Maine campaign against the re-election of Congressman Charles T. Littlefield, gives a complete list of the appointments and nominations to public office that he had declined since 1872, when he became a full-fledged citizen of the United States. Mr. Gompers said:

"One of the favorite species of attacks on me was to charge that I was neither a citizen nor a voter. Prejudices of all sorts were appealed to in order to destroy confidence in the cause I represented.

"My answer to such attacks was substantially that in 1872, just after I had attained my majority, I cast my first vote for General U. S. Grant for President; that John Sherman, when Secretary of the Treasury, tendered me an appointment as statistician in the Treasury department; that the Bureau of Labor Statistics of New York offered me a position in that bureau; that the Republican party of my district in New York City nominated me for State Senator in the New York legislature; that a wing of the Democratic party also nominated me as Senator at the same election, both of these nominations being tantamount to an election, and I declined.

"The Republican party in my district next year sent a committee to me offering me the nomination for Congress, saying that they would surely nominate me if I would accept, but that they did not wish to be placed in the position they had been the year before when they nominated me and I had declined.

"Governor Hill of New York tendered me the appointment of the commissioner of the board of mediation, conciliation and arbitration. President McKinley offered me an appointment upon the industrial commission and requested others to wait upon me and urge me to accept it. I declined all these nominations and offers of appointment.

"They were simply referred to, not in any spirit of vanity, but to ask Mr. Littlefield and his henchmen whether all these things could have been possibly tendered to me if I were neither a citizen nor a voter."

ARRESTED AS BICYCLE THEIF

was arrested here last night as one of the bicycle thieves who have been operating in Oakland lately. He had in his possession a new wheel, number 22942, which he was trying to sell to a Japanese for $15. At the police station Tripp claimed that he is a bootblack, living in San Francisco, but was unable to give any numbers or address.

WIFE OF A GOVERNOR HURT IN RUNAWAY

DENVER, Sept. 29.—While en route to a reception this afternoon horses attached to a carriage in which Mrs. Jesse F. McDonald, wife of the Governor of Colorado, and Mrs. Samuel Perry were riding became frightened at an automobile, ran away and threw the women out. Mrs. McDonald received a ghastly cut over the right eye, which may involve a fracture of the skull, and her right arm was dislocated.

FALLS TO SIDEWALK AND BREAKS LEG

While turning the corner at Seventh and Washington streets about 8 o'clock last night, John Mureg, a cabinetmaker, living in West Berkeley, slipped and fell to the sidewalk, sustaining a fracture of the right leg. Mureg was picked up by passers-by and taken to the receiving hospital. His injuries were attended to there, it being found necessary to put the broken limb in splints. Mureg now occupies a cot at the hospital, as his injury was such that he could not be removed to his home.

OLD MAN TRAMPLED BY MADDENED BULL

ELKTON, Md., Sept. 29.—John E. Alexander of Elkton, narrowly escaped being killed by a bull. He went to Meredith's meadow, about a half mile north of the town, to milk his cow. Soon after he went into the field the bull made toward Alexander, who is past seventy years of age.

He attempted to drive off the animal with a club, but without success. He was knocked down and trampled, but no bones were broken.

ONLY A TEMPORARY CRAZE.

Returning Pilgrims From the "Other Side" Lapse Into "United States" Again.

Recurrent peril, threatening our American speech, becomes imminent about this time of year. For there now returns from "the other side" the traveler, rather more likely to be feminine, who, swollen with the pride of her first ocean voyage, having stuffed her trunks to bursting with dutiable articles, gets even with a meddlesome government by smuggling in a warranted British accent for herself and family. Upon her avid tongue such useful little words as "were" and "been" "suffer a sea-change into something rich and strange," approximating respectively the verb of garmenture and the popular name of a common vegetable. One even encounters accents which distort "clerk" into "clark." But the maltreatment is, happily, in most cases only temporary. First, the family, despite pained and patient correction, fall from grace. Presently the enthusiast herself gives signs of lapsing. She imperceptibly graduates into the convalescent state of George Ade's rising social light, who every Saturday "took a bawth in the bawthtub." And long before the sewing circle has heard the last of her views of the Eiffel tower and the intricacies of continental currency the healthful home atmosphere of Pontiac, Mich., or Topeka, Kas., has done its work and the returned exile's common speech is again according to Noah Webster, unabridged.—Collier's Weekly.

A Modern Miracle Healer

He Cures All Chronic Diseases and Corrects all Evil Habits Without the Use of Drugs or Medicines

He Teaches the Highest Development of Body, Mind and Soul

Bad Habits Corrected, Evil Influences, Obstacles and Troubles Overcome, and Other Wonderful Things Accomplished for the Good of Humanity by This Gifted Man.

Professor Alexander Delmar, D. Ps.

THE ORIENTAL SEER

The Only Yogi Mediator of Secret Influence in America

The wonderful powers of Professor Delmar, the well-known occult scientist of this city, which enable him to cure hopeless invalids when drugs and other means have failed, has aroused widespread wonder in all circles, physicians and chemists being as much in the dark for an explanation of this gifted man's power over disease as the public in general.

He does not only cure all manner of disease in old and young, but he goes still further than this. By his treatment and instructions he leads people away from evil tendencies, corrects bad habits, and reclaims the fallen. Under his treatment the weak take on new courage and strength, and they gain complete control over their tastes, appetites and passions. Drunkards, gamblers, blasphemers, kleptomaniacs, the lustful and unfaithful, and wilful and obstinate children speedily change their habits, seek better company, and make good and useful men and women, faithful husbands and wives.

WITH HIS SECRET POWERS

Professor Delmar has in the past wrought wonders in results for his patrons. His record of success is marvelous. Hundreds who are enjoying perfect health, successful in business, happy in their homes, ar are attaining success, thank him for the blessings they enjoy.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Come and learn how to deal with occult laws, how to create harmony and a healthy atmosphere; the secret of "mind over matter." How to be successful in business, speculation, law, love, marriage, in fact, everything is made clear to you.

Read the Testimony of Well-Known People From Near and Far

San Francisco, Cal., September 7, 1906.

Dear Professor Delmar:

I really feel it a duty I owe to suffering humanity to make known what you have done for me. For a number of years I have suffered from catarrh of the throat, stomach and bowels. I coughed day and night and was in constant pain. I tried many kinds of medical treatment without benefit. I had given up all hope when, by chance, I learned of an acquaintance of mine whom you had cured after the doctors had given her up to die. Only just eight weeks ago I called on Professor Delmar for the first time, and today I am a well woman. I can hardly understand it myself; my friends are amazed; our family physician puzzled. I wish I could go out and proclaim the virtues of your treatment from the housetops. I give you full liberty to use this letter as you please. I know if my recommendation should influence any one to come to you it can only result in good. Most sincerely yours,

MRS. L. C. K.

San Jose, Cal., August 16, 1906.

Dear Professor: Have not taken a grain of the nasty stuff since your last treatment, and have no desire whatsoever to do so. I know I am cured for good. My nerves are steady, appetite good and I can say that I am a man once more, thanks to your wonderful work. The enclosed check is the balance I owe you as per agreement. I still owe you a debt of gratitude, which I am afraid I can never repay.

A. C. S.

Oakland, Cal., September 11, 1906.

My Dear Professor: Herewith I send you a money order for the amount I owe you. And I assure you I send it with a glad heart and a free will. You have done all and more than you promised to do for me. Since he came back to me he is like a changed man. He does not touch a drop of liquor, he is kind to the children and shows me all the respect and affection I could wish for. Every night I remember you thankfully in my prayers.

Yours in gratitude,

MRS. E. G. S.

The above are only a few of hundreds of testimonials Professor Delmar has in the past received.

The original letters from these well-known people can be seen at Professor Delmar's office. The writers of the above letters have for the sake of aiding suffering humanity given full permission to give their address, so any one who wishes to talk or write to them about their case may do so.

Professor Delmar's Guarantee

Professor Delmar's past record for upright and honorable dealings is well known to the citizens of San Francisco, Oakland and surrounding counties. Prior to his recent visit to India he practiced his profession between these two cities for more than five years, and since his return he has experienced the satisfaction of hearing grateful words of praise from scores of his old patrons, who have called to acknowledge the merits of his work and thank him for the many benefits they have received. No matter what your sickness, troubles or desires may be, call on Professor Delmar, the foremost Occult Scientist in America. He will give you a thorough clairvoyant examination; if nothing can be done for you he will frankly tell you so and not take a penny of your money. But remember there is no failure in any case he takes under treatment. Charges reduced to $1.00. Daily from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Wednesday and Saturday evenings 7 to 9; Sundays 1 to 4 p. m.

SEEKS MEN TO BUST TRUSTS

Garfield Orders Special Civil Service Examination for November.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Bureau of Corporation is scouring the country for young men to help in the work of busting trusts, ferreting out rebaters and to assist generally in the application of the railroad and other trust laws. To this end, Commissioner of Corporations James A. Garfield has asked the Civil Service Commission to adopt examinations to be held in various cities throughout the country November 1. Mr. Garfield is anxious to secure the best men available for the work and explains what he wants as follows:

"The examination that is to be held is in the nature of an experiment. We may use anywhere from twenty to one hundred men, depending on the amount of the work to be done and the diversified section it is to be done in. There will be a number of classifications and my purpose is to put men to the kind of work they are best fitted for.

"While a college education is quite an advantage in the examination, it is not a necessary qualification, and those having the widest experience in commercial life will be given preference over those just out of college."

Mr. Garfield says it is his intention to greatly enlarge the work of the Bureau of Corporations in its investigation of the organization, conduct and management of the business of corporations, stock companies and corporate commercial companies doing an interstate or foreign business, and that he needs the services of good men in such work.

CAFE WILL BE TRUE BOHEMIA

Charles Newman's College Inn Will Appeal to Good Eaters.

Charles Newman, known the country over as the Pacific Coast's leading boniface, bon vivant and popular caterer who, like many others, was forced to leave San Francisco by the late calamity, is now permanently located in Oakland and his advent here will be glad tidings to the public, especially tha who seek good things to soothe the "inner man," and for which Cha Newman is famous in satisfying con noisseurs. The College Inn, as Newman's beautiful place will known at 1011 Broadway, is one of handsomest and best appointed pla of its kind on the coast. SLOT MACHINE LICENSE $40

Council Favors $10 a Quarter Tax to Increase the City's Revenue.

In all probability an ordinance will be introduced into the city council next Monday night fixing the license on all nickel-in-the-slot machines at $10 a quarter or $40 a year Since the question was broached some time ago members of the council have had the matter under consideration They are unanimous in the opinion that a tax should be placed on the machines believing that this would be one way to increase the revenue of the city which needs enlargement to a considerable degree Some of the members of the council would have the license fixed at $15, others at $20 or $30 but it is understood that the majority favor the $10 license

Cigar dealers it is claimed, will be satisfied with such a license and there will be but little opposition In the event of the ordinance being passed, the city revenue would be increased several thousand dollars

U. C. JUNIORS ARE DEFEATED

U C Juniors were defeated by the Freshmen yesterday afternoon in a well-played game of Rugby by a score of 3 to 0 The team work of the Juniors was much the better, both in passing and running the ball, but every time a Junior runner drew near the good he was downed by Webster, the little full

Webster, the Freshmen full was the most reliable man on the field He took many difficult tackles and threw his man each time

The only touchdown was made by High, another of the Freshmen players who may be relied upon when the team goes up against the Stanford Freshmen

The ball had been kicked off in the second half by the Freshmen and the Juniors returned the kick The Freshmen kicked back into the territory of the Juniors who tried again to make a return kick but failed The ball remained in the Junior territory until nearly half the time was gone The Freshmen worked up to a few yards of the goal, then sent High through the opposing line

The Freshmen missed a difficult goal kick by a narrow margin, and the ball was kicked into the field again by the Juniors

For some time the play remained in the Juniors field, but in the last minutes of the game a long kick, followed by good team work and long runs, carried the pigskin to striking distance No attempts at a goal were made although several times the ball was carried past man after man, to be stopped at last by Webster At the close of the game the Juniors were within ten yards of the goal preparing for a kick that would probably have proved successful

Throughout the game the Freshmen showed poor team work A great improvement must be made before the California team be chosen to meet the Stanford Freshies

An idea for a Christmas present for your husband or for your wife—

In Cincinnati, Ohio, there is a colony of hand-craftsmen called "The Shop of the Crafters." They make, from selected church oak, all kinds of odd and artistic furniture.

Professor Horti, who gained such praise for his work at the St. Louis Exposition, devotes his entire time to the designing of their various unique and clever pieces, Oscar Onken, the famous Dutch craftsman, supervising the mechanical departments.

So scarce are the genuine "Shop of the Crafters" articles that to possess even an inexpensive little bookcase is rare good fortune.

Most of their cushions are of genuine Spanish roan skin, leather laced. The finishes vary slightly, the dull waxed effects predominating, such as Fumed, Flemish, Early English and Austrian shades.

We Are Permitted

by these people to take orders, for a limited time, for special articles to be made to order, if not in stock, and shipped to arrive here a week before Xmas, in a special car now being made up.

If you want something of the kind (see list of articles below) something that no one else is ever likely to be able to procure, something really fine, then come in here tomorrow and talk with us.

We have quite a stock of their sample articles upon our floor and a complete set of pictures of EVERYTHING they make, so you may order easily.

on made-to-order articles, or upon specially ordered articles, will be 10 per cent cash at time order is given, the balance to be paid at a few dollars per month after the goods arrive and are delivered. We agree to return the 10 per cent if goods are not satisfactory.

The Articles Made By These People

We can furnish completely any room. We illustrate above an Austrian Dining Room designed by them. Here is a list of most of the things they make:

POLICE AFTER THE PEDDLERS

Horde From San Francisco Sell Wares Within the Fire Limits.

The authorities are now having trouble with peddlers, who persist in selling wares about the streets of the business section. The city ordinance provides that peddlers cannot sell their goods within the fire limits of the city and as a consequence many of these street-curb merchants are running up against the law. At the time of the earthquake, many peddlers came from San Francisco, and they are now starting up in business here. Chief of Police Wilson states that the city ordinance will be enforced and the store merchants protected.

ALAMEDA CARS TO CITY HALL

Brood-Gauge Tracks Have Been Laid and Wires Placed Underground.

Alameda cars are now running up Washington street to the city hall. At the same time that the tracks were laid the Home Telephone company placed its underground wires in the street. The work of bituminizing the street will now be done jointly by the telephone company and the Traction company, and within a few weeks the thoroughfare will again be in a passable condition. In order to allow cars to run on Washington street, employes of the telephone company worked all Friday night and completed the work.

MANY WOULD BE POLICEMEN

Numerous Applications for the Twenty-five New Positions in October.

By the latter part of October or the early part of November the twenty-five new policemen will be appointed to the regular force and Chief of Police Wilson will have more men to cope with the petty crime which is rampant in this city. The ordinance providing for the new policemen is now in print, and will have to run twenty days. The mayor will then approve the measure, and it will take effect. At the present time there are several applicants for positions who will have to take the examinations. There are several men who have already taken the examinations, but the report of the police commissioners as to their standing has not been filed as yet.

ROUND. 13
"MY LUCKY NUMBER" SAYS HYLAND.

BERGER-O'BRIEN TACTICS ARE DISGUSTING SPORTS

By EDDIE SMITH.

The question now on tap is Will 'Fighting' Dick Hyland make good as a championship candidate and who will be his next opponent. As an amateur Dick was all that could be asked for, for he fought any and all amateurs that came his way and made good in every effort. His advent into the professional ranks however was none too brilliant. His first contest was with Frankie Neal who beat him with a clean knock-out in San Francisco. He was then matched to box Billy Snailham at Sacramento and he again lost. This settled it so far as Hyland was concerned on the coast for to lose to Snailham who was never anything better than a third-rater, was more than the fans could stand.

Dick had hard going after that and Biddy Bishop in his usual cunning way arranged a match with "Fighting" Dick and Larry Long at Grass Valley, Hyland's home town in which Long was to lose to the home boy on a foul. McClintic was a trifle anxious as to whether or not Bishop would have Long do as he had agreed and to prevent being double-crossed insisted on being custodian of the gate receipts and all of Bishop's jewelry. Long however did as he was told and lost to Hyland on a foul. Soon after Hyland went East and from then on he has been successful and his rise has been rapid. It will be wise however for betters who contemplate backing Hyland to await such time as they see him tangle with some clever man before they wager too much of their money on him. He showed up well with Hanlon and outclassed Cute at every stage of the game, but as Hanlon has never been considered even fairly clever, this cannot be taken for much. He outfought Eddie in every round and proved himself a much improved man and great credit is due him.

Just how he will show with the clever boys will be guess-work until he meets one, but his footwork is faulty and he is none too fast with his hands. He also seems a trifle slow with his brain and for this reason overlooked many good openings in his fight Friday night.

Hyland will have one drawback in his coming to the front, for, like Batling Nelson he is handicapped with a very bad manager who will cause no end of trouble if given a chance and he, like Nolan, lacks enough brains to realize this fact. The fact is, 'Red' Sammy has no end of trouble in writing his own name and keeping himself straight, let alone anyone else.

JEFF FEARFUL OF LOSING TITLE; NOT ANXIOUS TO ENTER THE RING

* * *

QUESTION OF JEFFRIES.

Whether or not Jim Jeffries, the retired champion, will again enter the ring is beginning to be a very much overworked and shopworn subject. However, there are several phases of the subject that have been overlooked and may prove interesting to the sporting fraternity. In the first place, Jeff has not the slightest desire again to enter the ring, he cares little or nothing for the notoriety that comes with the championship, and as to the monetary end of the business it is his last consideration. He has not the slightest conception of the value of a dollar and as a champion he was the hardest man to make money with that ever reached the top of the ladder, and it was only through the persistency of his astute manager, Billy Delaney, that he earned as much as he did.

EDDIE SMITH.

Not long before he retired he said to me with a disgusted air that he was sick of the game and that he was tired of the continual glare of the public. One of his remarks was to the effect that every time he went on the street, on a street car or to the theater he was eyed up and down and gazed at as if he was a prize pig at a county fair, by a lot of suckers. Although he feels this way about being champion, it is nevertheless a fact that the big fellow is somewhat afraid of being beaten if he again enters the ring. This is rather a broad assertion to make about the champion, but it is a fact just the same.

One often hears the remark that if a formidable opponent would crop up Jeff would forsake the farm and again enter the ring. This idea is almost absurd in that there never lived a champion that was anxious or even willing to meet a fighter that he felt had an even chance to beat him. After Jeff become champion he was no exception to the rule and in almost all his fights after he won the title from Fitzsimmons, he was tricked into a match by his manager and fight promoters, even in his match with Monroe, who proved his easiest game. He was tricked into fighting the miner by someone unknown to him giving to the New York papers a story to the effect that Jeff would fight the winner of the Sharkey-Monroe contest that was to be decided in Philadelphia a few nights later. When the news was printed in the papers the next morning Jeff was wild, and if he had known who gave out the news there would have been trouble.

Adding to this handicap is the fact that his wife seriously objects to his entering the ring again, and according to information received from the big fellow's friends, she is the boss, it will be seen that it will be no easy matter to get the retired champion back in the game. It is only his best friends, however, that are advising him again to fight and clean up the nice sum of money that awaits him on his return to the ring. Certainly they would not advise him to enter the ring again if they thought that any of the present so-called champions had a chance to beat him.

O'BRIEN-BERGER MATCH.

The actions of Sam Berger and Jack O'Brien are making their match grow more disgusting to the fight fans every day and if they do not come to terms in a very short time the public will regard them as a pair of newspaper fighters.

SPORTS ANXIOUS TO SEE HYLAND MEET A GOOD ONE

Two weeks ago O'Brien was on the ground and to all the sporting writers gave out the information that he was there to meet Berger and that most any terms would be acceptable to him. A short time ago he received the information that Berger was to leave Chicago for San Francisco and that he would personally attend to the details of making the match.

O'Brien then got it into his head that he was wanted in Los Angeles and he immediately packed his trunk and left for the southern metropolis. Before leaving, however, he visited Coffroth and assured James that he would be gone only a few days and that he would be back by the time Berger arrived. Sam has now been on the ground for almost a week but as yet Jack has failed to put in an appearance and Jack Cribbens, who says he is O'Brien's representative, seems to be unable to do anything without first telegraphing the fighter.

Two weeks ago the fight was as to who would handle the contest and then Graney and Coffroth were each laying their strings for the attraction, each trying to out-do the other in the matter of bidding for the match. Now, however, it has been practically settled that Coffroth will get it, and a new barrier springs up in that O'Brien is at Los Angeles and has practically agreed to fight two men before Tom McCary's club. The matter now stands just as it did two weeks ago, only with the reversal of conditions. At that time O'Brien was on the ground and telling everyone that he was willing to sign up at any reasonable terms that Berger would agree to and some thought that Sam was stalling and had little idea of fighting the Quaker. Now Sam is on the ground and repeats just what O'Brien said and Jack is in the south and appears to be stalling. Meantime, the fans are becoming more disgusted and if something is not done very soon to give them a high-class attraction, they will cease to patronize the game and the fighters will loose what has proven to be the mecca of pugilism.

ENTRIES FOR BIKE RACES

Speedy Riders Will Be Seen Next Sunday on the Alameda Track

Entries for the bicycle races to be held in Alameda this afternoon have been received as follows:

ONE MILE POINT RACE

F L McLaughlin B C W, William Steinman B C W, W deMara B C W, W Mills C C C, G W Williams N C W, T Black O W

TWO MILE HANDICAP

C E Schiller N C W, Percy Lawrence N C A, A Johnson C C A, A Daggitt B C W, F I McLaughlin B C W, John Coghlin G C W, J Green C C W, Tom Mullins G C W, H Herbstriett G C W, William Cteinman B C W, J Nugent G C W, George Wagoner B C W, H McPherson B C W, D Cushman B C W, W de Mara B C W, George Lee C C A, W Mills C C C, G W Williams, N C W, Jerry Coghlan G C W

THIRTY-MILE RELAY

Prizes for the above events have been donated as follows: For the thirty mile relay a silver trophy by J W Leavitt & Co. For the other races a medal by W F Lee, pair of Palmer tires by F F Merry, $5 merchandise order by one of the old timers who still has the sport at heart, E L Dow of the Bay City Wheelmen, a pair of Palmer tires by Chick & Reese of Oakland and several other prizes which have not yet been handed in.

Considerable speculation has been had as to which club will win the trophy. The Bay City Wheelmen are partial towards silver trophies and thinks that this trophy would be a valuable addition to their already large collection. The New Century Wheelmen say "Now, watch us ride for it," while the Central City Wheelmen say "We are young but watch us finish at the tape." As most of the good riders of the other clubs are graduates from the younger element there may be a surprising score for some of the older riders. The Oakland Wheelmen have yet to be heard from except to say that they will let their riding speak for itself on the track. The races will begin at 1:30 p m as the relay race will consume an hour and a half. Mr Mohring and all the other officials heretofore appointed have promised to be there and it will look like old times. No admission fee is to be charged and it is hoped that the public will show enough interest in the sport to turn out in goodly numbers.

BOSTON SORE AT HERRERA

Papers Score Mexican for His Actions in the Fight With Kid Goodman.

The following letter from a well-known sporting man from the coast may prove interesting. With the letter are clippings from Boston papers in which they severely censure Aurelio Herrera for not being at weight for his fight with Kid Goodman and his utter indifference as to whether the spectators saw a fight. The articles also criticise the decision severely, saying that Herrera would be lucky if he got a draw. Herrera is fast killing himself with the club managers and unless he changes his tactics will soon find all the clubs closed to him.

Boston Mass Sept 10 1906

Eddie Smith Sporting Editor, Tribune

A few lines in regard to the boxing situation in Boston. Herrera was very lucky in his fight here with Kid Goodman. The Kid outpointed him for twelve rounds, was the aggressor and forced all the fighting. He landed about three to one. Herrera had a little the best of the last three rounds and was in hopes of getting a draw. He was very much surprised to get the verdict. Flaherty gave a poor decision last Tuesday also in the Burke-Hugo Kelly fight giving it to Kelly because he claimed Burke went to his knees to take the count without being hit which was wrong as everyone saw him get a punch in the stomach. But the referee thought Kelly was winning easy at the time.

Harry Foley and Joe Thomas are in Philadelphia. They may fight Mellody here again in a few weeks. Joe is certainly a wonder winning both his fights here in the easiest of style. Al Kaufmann made a very poor showing here. Both Bob Deady and Harry Foley, who had charge of him, were very much disgusted with his work. Joe got $1700 for beating Mellody. They drew a $4500 house.

I have seen all the fights held here within the last five months. I saw the Britt-McGovern fight at New York, and Terry was far from being a dead one that night and had a shade the best of it, though Jimmy was in poor condition.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES FULTON SHEPARD.

INTEREST IN VALLEJO BOUT

Palm Club Has Posted $1000 For the Ward-Landers Battle.

VALLEJO, Sept 29.—No ring battle in Vallejo since the days when Tom Sharkey was the popular local idol has attracted so much attention as the coming fight between Fred Ward of this city and Fred Landers of San Francisco, which will be held in Farragut theater Thursday, October 11. The Palm club has posted $1000 as a purse, and the boxers have increased their side bet from $500 to $750. The sale of seats is large as there are now over $300 worth of coupons to be reserved and the list is not yet opened.

SUCCESS IS ASSURED OF RACING AT EMERYVILLE

By LEE DEMIER.

President Thomas Williams of the New California Jockey Club arrived in New York the other day. To the Gotham reporters he made known the racing situation around San Francisco. He said: "The meeting for the season of 1906-1907 will begin Saturday, November 17, at Emeryville, and I firmly believe we shall have the best season in all respects ever held on the coast.

"The people of San Francisco have recovered from the dismay caused by the earthquake and the destruction of the main portion of our city and are full of hope and confidence in the future. In the course of the long work of rebuilding, a large portion of our people find themselves provided with abundant leisure and are eager to be furnished with amusements with which to pass away the time. It may seem surprising, but I am confident more people will attend the Emeryville races than have done so heretofore. When it was known that the California Jockey Club intended to give its usual season of racing, there was an impression that purses and stakes would be reduced. Quite to the contrary, we will in no respect curtail our offerings to horsemen. Our stakes are identical with those of last season and the large number of overnight $1000 or over handicaps that proved so attractive and successful last winter, will be continued liberally, dependent, as a matter of course, on our having enough good horses on hand to fill them well and provide good entertainment for a sport-loving people. Horsemen will find our tracks and equipment in first-class condition in every respect and accommodations will be ample for themselves and their horses. Just at present hotel facilities in San Francisco are necessarily limited, but construction is being hurried rapidly and there will be little to complain of in that respect by the time racing begins. We already have a big contingent of horses ready that have raced at Seattle and other coast tracks during the summer and I hope to be able to attract horses of good class from New York and the central West. I have a stable of fourteen youngsters myself, seven of which are now two-year-olds. There may be one or two good ones among them."

* * *

The New York races are right up to their general good form and picking winners has been comparatively easy. The size of the overnight purses and the very frequent stakes offered stimulate horsemen to a wonderful degree. Of course, the purses offered on Western and Pacific circuits are much less, but then the cost of living is as high as it is about the Metropolitan center.

* * *

The perennial question of which is the best two-year-old of the season is a much-discussed topic among the lovers of horseflesh. The unanimous opinion is that Salvidere carries off the laurel wreath. In the recent Junior champion stakes run off at Gravesend, he defeated such cracks as DeMund and Water Pearl, which stamps him as the real thing. This victory coming in immediate succession to previous ones only confirms his baby reputation as the unbeatable baby of the bunch.

* * *

The old question of the penalty to be meted out to a horse which fouls in a race is being again threshed out by the New York Jockey Club. It is proposed to punish the jockey and not the horse. No hard and fast rule can be laid down regarding this matter, as circumstances alter cases. If a horse, against the jockey's manifest good handling, bears in and impedes another, whether through exhaustion or otherwise, and causes his contendor to lose a race, the horse should be certainly disqualified. But should a jockel deliberately fall over in front of or bump the other, not only should the horse be set back but the boy set down for a time or fined. Then there is the proposition as to whether the horse should be placed by the judges or rated last in the race, as a penalty. Now, if the foul was caused by the jockey, the horse should be placed in the money if he wins, but if it is caused by his own volition, he should go last and give the backers of the fourth race the benefit of their choice's true running. The public bets on the horse, not the boy, and if their choice is at fault they should have no objection to his being placed last any more than their betting on a bad actor who eventually gets left at the post. There are many sides to the question and when you are losing good money through a disqualification, it is apt to warp your judgment—well, rather!

* * *

Although the Douglas Park track in Kentucky cost close to half a million, there is a shadow of doubt as to its continuance. The Latonia, Louisville and Churchill Downs courses, operating under a perpetual charter granted by the State, the charter of the Douglas Park is not of that order, hence the injunction against its operation is now in the courts and not yet decided.

* * *

Reports for the first week's racing at Spokane indicate that they have been very successful, both in attendance and class of horses. While it has been a mixed meeting, it has been free from scandal and a clean up-to-date game. The betting has been healthy and good prices prevailed. Next week there will be six running races daily. A great mank horses that took part at Seattle are quartered at Spokane, and every owner is out for the money, sending his charges to the post fit and ready to run to the best of their ability. The bookies at Sausalito are having a heavy play on these races and the public is beating them regularly.

* * *

It looks very much as if Oakland will be the "Mecca" of the sporting men this winter. To walk down Broadway of an evening is like going along Ellis and Powell streets of San Francisco in the former days. All you hear is horse gossip and everyone is anxiously awaiting the opening of Emeryville.

* * *

"Doc" Rowell has shipped his string

of useful performers from Louisville to Emeryville. He has among his many horses such celebrated mudders as Corrigan, Rubric, Plausible and Sir Russell. The doctor had a very successful season in the east, stopping off at Louisville and taking a number of purses with his good two-year-old Plausible, a youngster he bought while at Saratoga and who will be heard from at the local track. Another addition to this stable is Sir Russell, who ran second to Hector at practically left at the post. He was one Louisville last Thursday, after being practically left at the post. He was one of the foremost sprinters in the east, beating such fast ones as Linnwood, Sanford and Neva Lee and others at Saratoga. Corrigan, the one-time idol of Oakland and "Frisco" race-goers, has been making good in the east, having won in New York, Saratoga and Louisville. He won his last start at Louisville at the good odds of 10 to 1.

* * *

The Hamilton meeting is now in progress and some erstwhile New York horses, such at Broadcloth, Pretentious, Lord of the Forest and others, are picking up some stakes.

* * *

Nealon and F. W. Barr will undoubtedly be the best three-year-olds at Emeryville this winter. The latter won four straight races at The Meadows this summer, and the former broke a track record at Sheepshead, running a mile and a quarter in 2.05 3-5 over the turf course.

* * *

"Long" Tom Cook, who trains all of E. J. Baldwin's horses this side of the Tehachapi, writes that he has a youngster on the southern ranch that he expects to win the next year's suburban with.

* * *

Jockey Frank Graham is back from a visit to his mother in Southern California. He says he will ride at 98 pounds this winter.

* * *

Billy Magrane has a promising two-year-old filly by Bannockburn-Amelia May.

* * *

* * *

Jocky Tommy Sandy, the crack little lightweight who has been doing the bulk of saddle work for the Rowel stable, is expected home next week.

* * *

A carload of horses were shipped from Emeryville to Hanford to take part in the meeting which takes place next week.

* * *

Paul J. Rainey, the owner of Horace E., DeMund and Heaslip, before sailing for England the other day, said that he is not going abroad to buy horses. The American thoroughbred, he says, is good enough for him. He went for a month's shooting in Scotland.

* * *

There are about 350 horses at Emeryville at present.

* * *

The horsemen returning from the North are complaining of the high rate of tariff that they have to pay shipping their charges over the Southern Pacific railroad.

* * *

Max Blumenthal and Eddie Burk, two of the foremost bookmakers on the big New York tracks, have dropped out of the game. It is said that within the last four months the various plunging clique of "insiders" have taken at least $1,000,000 of the bookmakers' money.

* * *

Bertrand Freishon, who was killed at Gravesend the other day, was a native of New Orleans. He was apprenticed to Roger Minton, trainer of the Hayman stable, and was regarded as one of the most promising of beginners. Freishon is the first jockey to be killed this year.

The winter meeting of the Los Angeles Jockey Club will open at Ascot Park Thanksgiving day, Thursday, November 29. It is the present intention that the meeting shall close at the end of ninety racing days, which will be March 18. The club announces sixteen stakes to close November 1, to which a total of $25,500 is added. In addition to these stakes it is announced that $275,000 will be distributed in purses during the meeting.

* * *

Eastern racing critics of good judgment consider that the best tool in Barney Schreiber's stable nowadays is his jockey, Dugan. He has ridden Nealon in his recent victories with good judgment and skill and shows force in his finishes. Recently when Nealon beat Running Water for the September stakes at Sheepshead Bay, Dugan's good judgment was sharply used on the far turn where it is declared that he caught Miller napping and obtained the rail position for Nealon by a quick and clever piece of riding.

* * *

Bookmaker Billy Humphrey is a fresh arrival from New York. He said he had a fairly good season playing there from the ground.

* * *

Jockey Dave Nicol was nearly drowned at Toronto the other day. With a party of friends, among them Tommy Ryan, Lorne Adams, Jockey Treubel and Frank Garrett, he drove in an automobile to the Humber in the afternoon and while there went out paddling in a punt. The boat, an old leaky craft, sank and Nicol was pulled out in an exhausted condition. He was taken to a hotel and it was nearly half an hour before he was considered out of danger.

* * *

From New York comes the news that Mrs. E. R. Thomas, wife of the young multi-millionaire horse owner, made an auspicious entry into the turf world last week as an owner. Her 3-year-old filly, Nemesis, won by a head in a driving finish in smart company. It was Mrs. Thomas' first attempt to race horses in her own name, and the result proved very gratifying to her.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Announcement was made today of the death of La Tosca, a famous racing mare, at General Sanford's Hurricana farm at Amsterdam, N. Y. La Tosca was the dam of such good racing horses as Chuctanunda, Caughnawaga and Mohawk II.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 29.—Jockey Willie Obert, who was indefinitely suspended at Latonia by Judge M. N. McFarlan for a weird ride on Doc Berry's Coruscate when the chestnut mare was trimmed by Savoir Faire, has made a clean breast of the whole affair in a confession last night to Judge McFarlan, who is now in Memphis. Obert's confession implicates one of the most prominent bookmakers in the West, and while no name has been mentioned here it is generally understood that a Louisville man is the jockey's evil genius. In the confession to Judge McFarlan Obert said he was given $100 by the bookmaker to "skidoo" from Louisville in order to let the matter quiet down and that he afterwards made a demand for $500 from the "bookie" and got it. It is thought here that Obert's confession may save him from permanent suspension, while the bookmaker may be ruled off for life.

ANGELS WIN BY A HOMER

Oakland Drops Exciting Game in the South by a Single Tally.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Los Angeles 7, Oakland 6. The score wouldn't indicate it, but there was more enthusiasm at Chutes park today than has been witnessed at a ball game in this city for a year. The eighth inning opened 3 to 0 in favor of the Angels. With two men on bases, Van Haltren put one over the fence, tying the score. Two more were added before the Oaklanders were sent to the field. The first two Angels up were out. Then Graham passed two and Cravath came to bat amid cheers. With two strikes and three balls Graham put one squarely over the plate. Cravath's bat met it and the ball soared high over the center field fence. The Angels were again in the lead and the grandstand and bleachers went wild with enthusiasm.

PUG OBEYED THE BETTORS

Ward Got Up and Then Lay Down When Spectators Hooted at Him.

In the preliminary to the Hyland-Hanlon contest when Gordon pushed Ward to the floor and that individual bumped his head and decided to take a nap, he fell near the side of the ring where two well-known sports were sitting. One had a bet on Ward and the other a bet on Gordon, not very much, however. The instant that Ward hit the floor the man betting on him called, "Get up you sucker," and Ward, true to orders, started to get up. Immediately the other called, "Lay down you fool," and the obedient "Mister" Ward laid down again to peaceful slumber, which caused a good laugh on that side of the house.

W. W. NAUGHTON WRITES OF O'BRIEN, BERGER, JEFFRIES, HYLAND AND HANLON

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—"There is only one Market street and its name is Fillmore," said Sam Berger while telling the Dreamland fight crowd on Friday night how glad he was to get back to San Francisco.

It is said that in the case in point Berger considers an equal division of the purse would be the correct thing and that O'Brien does not agree with him. Jack thinks that the conditions mentioned in the temporary articles of agreement signed in Chicago should prevail—that is, 75 per cent winner and 25 loser. If Berger is determined upon a less lopsided apportionment of the spoils, however, O'Brien will insist that one clause of the contract read as follows:

O'Brien to receive 60 per cent of the fighters' share of the proceeds, win, lose or draw, and the remaining 40 per cent to be paid to Berger.

While there has been no particular attempt to make a secret of the cause of disagreement between the two pugilists, the idea has gained ground that the real bone of contention is the clause governing hitting in clinches and breakaways.

In asking for an even cut of the prize money, Berger is only observing the rule laid down for the guidance of latter-day glove men, to-wit, "Do the best you can for yourself."

Considering that it was O'Brien who was so anxious to arrange the match the wonder is that Sam didn't hold out for as big a slice of the plunder as Nolan demanded for Nelson at Goldfield.

If all the hints that are thrown out are based on facts O'Brien seems to have outgeneraled Berger. It is whispered that when the "seventy-five, twenty-five" articles were signed in Chicago there was an understanding that when a more binding agreement was entered into provision would be made for dividing the purse equally and that such understanding so far as O'Brien was concerned was merely a ruse.

The Philadelphian figured that Berger, after beginning negotiations for a match, could not afford to draw out again on the score that he was being refused an even split of the money. This part of the story is given for what it is worth, but it is worthy of note that O'Brien is keeping himself aloof at Los Angeles and has given stony-hearted Jack Cribbins power of attorney to act for him here.

Cribbins, with managerial astuteness, says he doesn't know what was said or promised in Chicago. He only knows that O'Brien has instructed him to sign up with Berger in accordance with the "seventy-five, twenty-five" articles or else with the proviso that O'Brien receive sixty per cent "win, lose or draw."

How small the militant heavies are made to appear when big Jim Jeffries sanctions one of those periodical reports to the effect that he is to reenter the ring.

At such times the idea of championship battles between other stalwarts seems farcical and the average sporting man gets to wondering how long it would take Jeffries to dispose of the entire heavyweight force at a single standing.

Incidentally the latest rumor Jeffries was a party to was the unkindest cut of all. In denying that he countenanced the announcement that he was about to embark in the wallop business again the Alfalfa King hasn't a leg to stand upon. He may have been talked into the declaration of intention, but he made it nevertheless, and for that matter, according to Billy Delaney, it was a case of "Barkis is willin.'" Jeffries, says the veteran trainer, is in the fighting mood and if left to his own resources will be back in the game with both fists presently.

* * *

Who, of all the big fellows, is best fitted to tackle Jeffries?

This question has been put and put again during the past week, and has not as yet been answered satisfactorily.

The heavies, such as they are, are given to talking instead of fighting, and it appears to me that it will be quite a while before the king pin of the present batch stands forth.

Each of the champion candidates derives great satisfaction from basking in the belief that he is the best of the lot without putting his talents to the test. Tommy Burns, who vilified O'Brien and seemed to be just spoiling for a crack at the traveled Philadelphian, has lost sight of his quarry and has become embroiled with one Flynn.

Eh What?

Didn't know Flynn?

Flynn of Pueblo?

Why, stranger, it was Flynn who, while training at Los Angeles, punched a fellow named Scott so hard that Scott was driven insane. Some people have tried to make it appear that Scott wasn't thoroughly strong mentally before the bout, but that is a mean attempt to deprive Flynn of some of the glory that is coming to him.

Anyhow, Tommy Burns and Flynn are to hook up at Los Angeles next Tuesday night, while Jack O'Brien is to attempt the task of outing two incompetents in one night later. It is up to Jack to place both his victims in the hands of the insanity commissioners, or the winner of the Flynn-Burns go will have it on him in prestige.

What I started to say is that Burns and O'Brien do not appear to be breaking their necks to get together, and with considerations of filthy lucre keeping O'Brien and Berger apart it really looks as though there is no one at this end of the line anxious to qualify for the honor of meeting Jeffries when the retired champion issues the defi that most of the wise sports think inevitable.

Between you and I and the gatepost there is just one contingency that would cause the O'Briens, Bergers and Burns to look very small pertaters, and that is for Jeffries to embellish his unexpected announcement, "I am back in the ring," with the added line, "And the color bar is down."

That would bring a Jim Jeffries-Jack Johnson match to the front as the biggest attraction on the heavyweight boards.

The Friday night event at Dreamland showed that Eddie Hanlon is out of the running, and it is to be hoped the game little lad will give ring pursuits the go-by and adopt some other means of gaining a living. Luckily for Eddie his record is above reproach, and as he is possessed of a sunny disposition his popularity is such that he will have hosts of friends to help him along in whatever line of endeavor he maps out for himself.

Hyland, the youngster who downed Hanlon, has the world before him. When his critics are prone to discover flaws in his style, but it is for Hyland himself to keep in mind that he is a natural fighter, that schools of boxing are things of a bygone age and that the only safe style is the style that wins.

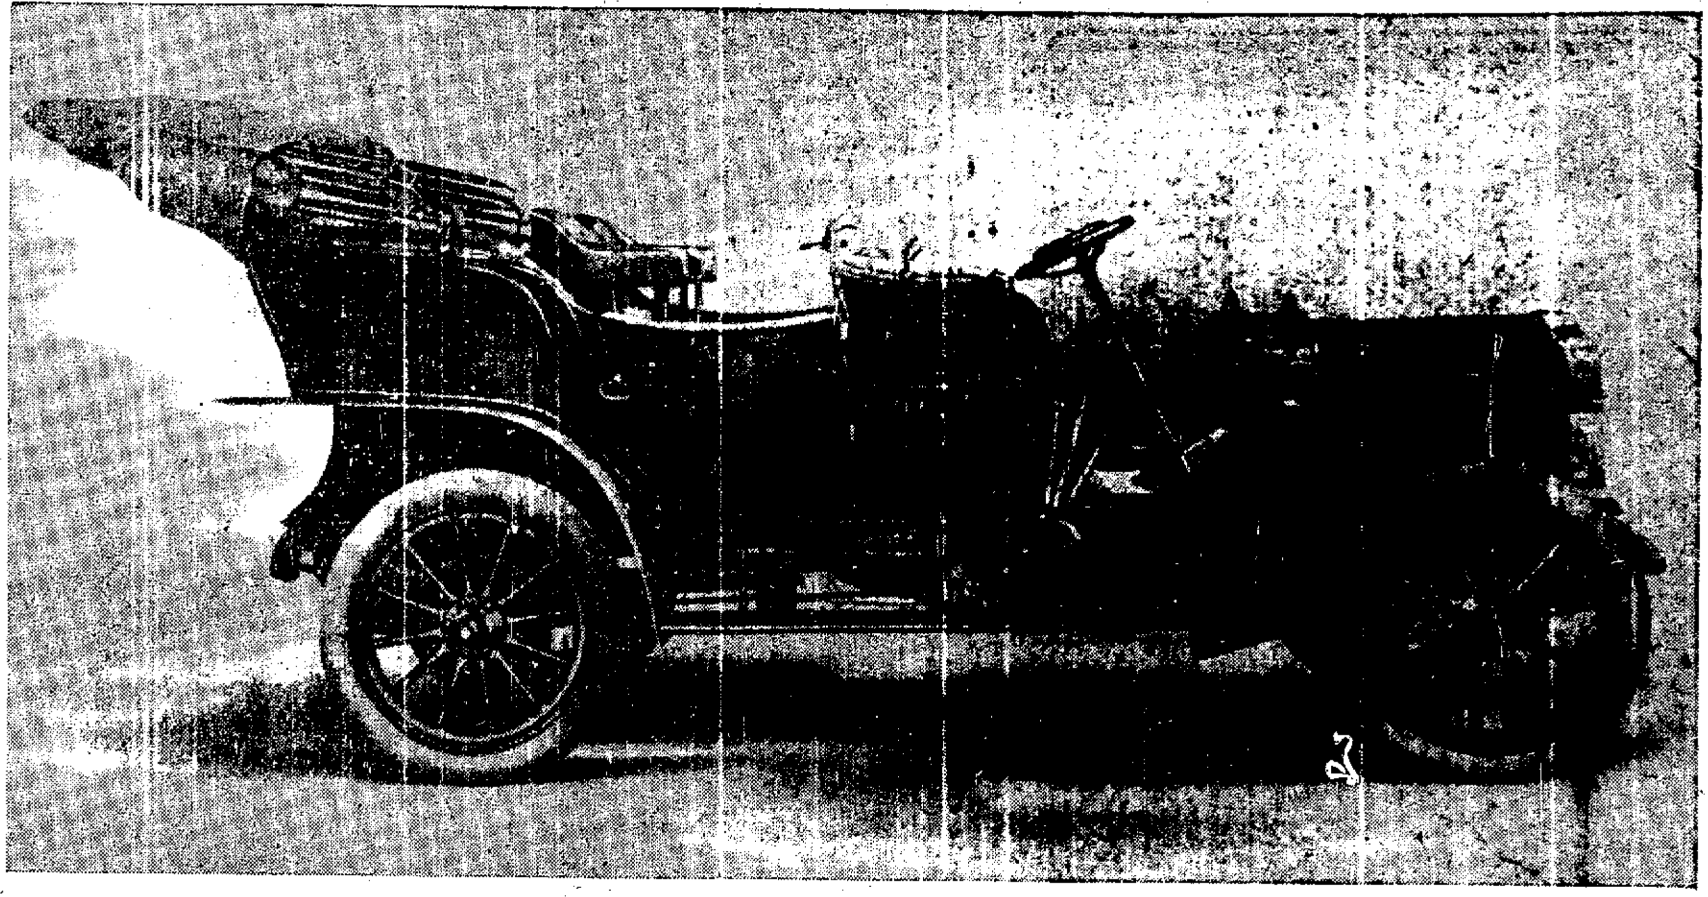
It would be as reasonable to expect a brindle bull terrier to point and retrieve with the care and delicacy of a bird dog as expect Hyland to acquire style. Poetry of motion is something he must not strive for, but rather seek to shoulder his way to the front as Battling Nelson has done.

THE WHITE STEAM CAR

Simplicity of Control

"As easily controlled as a steamer," has passed into a proverb. Every change of speed in our car is accomplished by a mere touch of the throttle wheel. Do you realize what this means? It means that in any emergency where quick action is required only one motion is necessary and this is performed instinctively. When you want to stop you merely close the throttle and apply the brake. There is no clutch to bother with or to stick; there are no gears to shift. Thoughtful buyers are recognizing this and are buying White Cars for family touring because they are

Absolutely Safe



The White Company offers two cars for 1907. The one shown above is the 30-horsepower car with Pullman body and seats for seven passengers. A five passenger car will be furnished on the same chassis. A 20-horsepower car will also be offered. We have literature for you on both cars.

A GOOD SECOND-HAND CAR

We sell second-hand cars on the same liberal guaranty which accompanies our new ones, and put them in perfect running order at our own expense before delivery.

We have a reputation for fair dealing which we intend to keep. We don't unload any worn-out cars, but give exceptional value for the money.

Economy of Operation

We can convince you that the White Car uses less fuel in proportion to power, speed and carrying capacity than any other car built. Isn't that a point to consider?

The White Car is propelled by a steady, smoothly flowing stream of steam. It has no vibration and consequently the only wear upon it is occasioned by the road traveled and by the ordinary wear and tear incident to all machinery. The White's facility of control insures no more strain upon the car when traveling rough roads than when traveling smooth ones. Consider the bearing of this upon

HIGH JINKS ARE PLANNED

Nile Club Members to Pass Sunday in October on Breed's Island.

The Nile Club will hold the greatest jinks in its history Saturday and Sunday, October 6 and 7. The members will leave for Santa Cruz Saturday morning, passing the night in the redwoods, where an appropriate play will be presented.

The main part of the excursion will be passed on Arthur Breed's Island, near Brookdale, and the return to Oakland will be made Sunday evening.

The talent includes the club orchestra of twenty pieces, a brass band and all the stand-bys in the theatrical line. Over 100 will attend the jinks.

Appropriate greetings and notices have been sent out by C. J. Heeseman, "Pharaoh, heaven-descended son of Ra, friend of the Great Gods," and a large number of the members will attend, each being privileged to bring a guest.

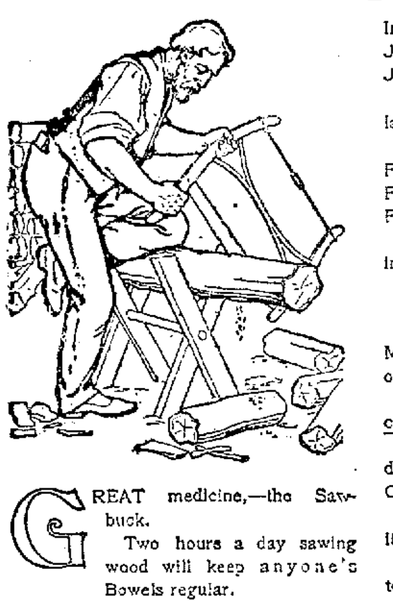
The following notice has been sent out, owing to the confused condition since April 18:

"The directors request all members of the Nile Club who have changed their address since April 18 to notify the secretary immediately."

FILES AGREEMENT TO BUY LAND

E. D. Hinkle filed an agreement between himself and Mrs. Margaret Ball in the Country Recorder's office this morning, whereby he agrees to buy the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Clay streets for $62,340. Hinkle paid $1,000 for the option. The property is 100 feet deep.

Grandfather's Cure for Constipation



GREAT medicine,—the Sawbuck.

Two hours a day sawing wood will keep anyone's Bowels regular.

No need of pills, Cathartics, Castor Oil nor "Physic," if you'll only work the Sawbuck regularly.

* * *

But, if you will take your Exercise in an Easy Chair, there's only one way to do that, and make a Success of it.

Because,—there's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowels and its name is "CASCARETS."

They don't flush out your Bowels and Intestines with a costly waste of Digestive Juice, as Salts, Castor Oil, Calomel, Jalap, or Aperient Waters, always do.

No,—Cascarets strengthen and stimulate the Bowel Muscles instead.

These are the Muscles that line the Food passages and that tighten up when Food touches them, thus driving that Food on to its finish.

They are the Muscles that turn Food into Strength through Nutrition.

* * *

Well,—a Cascaret acts on your Bowel Muscles as if you had just Sawed a cord of wood, or walked ten miles.

That's why Cascarets are safe to take continuously in health; and out of health.

Because they move the Food Naturally, digesting it without waste of tomorrow's Gastric Juice.

They thus work all the Nutrition out of it before it decays.

The thin, flat, Ten Cent box is made to fit your Vest Pocket, or "My Lady's" Purse.

Carry it constantly with you and take a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need one.

Gillett Speaks Before Large Crowd at Martinez on His Labor Attitude.

RICHMOND, Sept. 29.—Fully two hundred Republicans, headed by the Richmond band, went to Martinez last evening to hear Congressman Gillett. Many from San Pablo, Pinole, and Rodeo, joined the Richmond delegation. Arriving at Martinez the visitors marched to the Bay View Park Pavilion. Chairman A. B. McKenzie of the County Central Committee introduced Fred P. Wood of Alamo, as chairman of the meeting. Dr. P. C. Campbell of Richmond, candidate for the Assembly, and S. F. Hall of Oakland, candidate for Judge of the Appellate Court, were in turn introduced, each making a brief address. Mr. Gillett denied charges which have been made against him and explained his attitude on the labor question.

George Roth, brother of John and Peter Roth of this city, who went to Alaska last spring to operate a placer mining claim he owns in the Tanana district on the Yukon river, has returned and will pass the winter at his home in Tulare county. He will visit here a few days, however, with relatives before going home.

HURT ATTEMPTING TO BOARD MOVING CAR

James H. Nelson, bookkeeper, thirty years of age, living at 828 Chester street, has decided to be more careful in the future when boarding a trolley car, particularly in Alameda. He was visiting that town last night, and having stated for home attempted to catch a rapidly moving car bound for this city. He caught the stanchion, but it jerked him on his head. He received a contusion of the scalp, which was treated by Dr. Irwin at the Receiving Hospital.

Oakland, August 11, 1905.
Wishart's Drug Store, Oakland, Cal.—Gentlemen:

Much gratified by the beneficial results and great relief obtained, I congratulate myself for having acted upon your suggestion to give Fruitola and Traxo a trial for a most stubborn case of indigestion. I realized more speedy and permanent benefit from their use than from all other medicines I have ever taken, which, in the past few years, have been numerous. I most earnestly and conscientiously recommend their use to all sufferers from dyspepsia and indigestion. Yours truly,

IS SENT TO AN ASYLUM

Frank Langdon So Violent His Wife Could Not Care for Him at Home.

Frank Sheldon Langdon, a former switchman employed by the Southern Pacific Railroad, was committed to the insane asylum at Stockton yesterday morning after an examination into his sanity by Drs. Shirk and Todd. Langdon sustained an injury to his head about two years ago by being thrown from a boxcar, as the result of a collision in the Espee freight yards in San Francisco. In July, 1905, he developed symptoms of lunacy while in the Southern Pacific hospital, where he remained for a year. On the occasion which showed that he was insane Langdon escaped from his nurse and entering the elevator started to run it up and down the shaft at a furious rate in the belief that he was switching.

At the end of the year the physicians told his wife, Mary C. Langdon, that the rules of the hospital did not permit a patient to remain there longer than twelve months and that he would have to be provided for elsewhere. Dr. Ainsworth recommended his commitment to Agnews.

Mrs. Langdon, through love for her husband, took him to the home of his sister, Mrs. F. I. Taylor, at Fruitvale, and attempted to care for him there, but she was obliged to send him to the county infirmary because of his hallucinations. Thrice he escaped from the infirmary without the crutches that were necessary for him to move around and on each occasion he would be brought to his wife's home. Both women were present this morning when Judge T. W. Harris held court in the receiving hospital, where Langdon was lying helpless on a cot in the insane ward.

Mrs. Langdon testified that her husband believed that snakes were always in his room and bed and that he made the members of the family hunt for them at night with lamps. He would frequently imagine that he had gone to the races and had returned home worth millions. Then his dementia took the form of being surrounded by enemies and he would lock the house up at night. On one occasion he attacked his own daughter and succeeded in knocking his wife down and beating her.

RUNAWAY YOUTHS TO RETURN TO ACADEMY

Two youths, Phillip Cloutman of 2150 Santa Clara avenue, Alameda, and Frank Dakin of Madera, both students at the St. Joseph's Academy, Berkeley, were arrested Friday night in this city on suspicion of being runaways. The two lads claim that they became tired of school and decided to go out into the world and make their fortunes. Their plans were nipped in the bud by a local police officer, however, and they are to be sent back to their books.

James Freeland, said by the authorities to be an escape from Whittier Reform School, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Policeman Cockerton at Eighth and Washington streets and locked up in the city prison, awaiting an investigation. He will probably be returned to the reform school.

GOTHAM'S THEATRICAL GOSSIP, PRESENT AND FUTURE

Big Houses Are Still Boarded and There Is Scarcely a Carriage in the Avenue, but Society Prepares for Season.

By HENRY KIRK

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Summer is over by the calendar, but the heat still continues. The past few days have been almost unbearable. I don't know what the thermometer says, it doesn't matter, as it is the humidity that does the deed. Imagine everything sticking to you, the earth, the air, the sky, doorknobs and things like that. You fell like a very damp sponge and you rush madly into drug shops for phosphates, and ten minutes later go up about ten degrees. This day began with a dull sky, and until noon, there was scarcely a breath of air. Then it rained, a gorgeous relief. Now, at 2 o'clock, the rain is about over and it is almost as unbearable as before the shower. This is my first summer experience in New York. I have had only six fine weeks of it, but quite enough. It is impossible to imagine just what this humidity means unless you have lived it. It is almost maddening. People do go mad, kill themselves, and all that, and little babies die in their mother's arms. That's what they do every summer down in the Ghetto and in the west side. People lie out on the roof at night and fall into the street. But it is not pleasant to think of what does happen in congested New York in the "good old summer time," and when you reverse the idea to the winter, they are shivering and freezing, so it's merely a matter of choice—"Some like it hot, some like it cold." It's an awful climate. In the suffocating streets where the horses struggle on under straw hats, in a few weeks one can see the same beasts slip and slide and fall on the ice. And in the parks where the benches are filled with melting humans, huge piles of snow will soon be found.

The season has not yet begun. The big houses are still boarded, and there is scarcely a carriage in the avenue. The shops are dormant, and the clubs only half alive. It is too hot to do or think anything. There is no special sensation just now. Mrs. Astor's illness called for big type this morning. It will be odd not to see her at the opening of the opera. Mrs. Astor's entrance was always something to be looked for, an almost royal affair, every other box full. Opera on, suddenly a commotion. The door of the Astor box thrown open, and enter madame in all her glory, diamonds and dignity. Then everyone else settles back, the season has been inaugurated. But Mrs. Astor may rally. I hope so. Politics hold the fort with those interested in such things. There are a lot of interests mixed up, Hearst, McClellan, Murphy, Tammany, Jerome and all the rest. But it gets beyond me, especially when you have nothing but the papers to guide you. Harry Thaw is still in the Tombs and almost forgotten. Nan Patterson was infinitely more to the front. What a lot of gush and rant there was about that case. Nothing else is happening of special interest. The hotels are full, they always are in New York, but the people in them are mostly from out of town.

The theaters are well under way, and have had a most unusual number of failures. "The Judge and the Jury," which you know rather well, in Los Angeles, anyway, came to Wallack's and had an odd experience. I didn't see it, but it had an unfortunate run, for which I have heard a dozen reasons. The acting was blamed, the stage management and the press by half was not friendly. Anyway, it is gone, but at least the author may be glad in a Broadway production, failure or not. Hilda Spong began her star career in a bit called "Lady Jim," another fall down. The story was trivial, and not of sufficient strength to hold for the three acts. It was well written and seemed more like a lot of agreeable people in someone's drawingroom talking of ordinary affairs. W. H. Crane's piece, "The Price of Money," dragged a great deal. It is by Alfred Sutro, who wrote "Walls of Jericho," in which James J. Hackett, continues this season. "The Price of Money" teaches something, I forget what, but I know it was of no special interest to me until the last act. I am sure I don't know if all these personal impressions are of interest to anyone. I should stop and consider the idea before indulging to all this extent. However, I can give only what was given to me. Olnie Oliver is with Crane and, as always, does splendid work. I think she is one of the most intelligent women on the American stage. She gives to everything she does a splendid sureness, a solid insight into the character itself. She reminds me in many days of Alice Richardson, a new Portia, one of the most brilliant women I have ever known.

What is next in the list? Let me see. "The two Mr. Weatherleys," at the Madison Square. This piece introduced William Hawtrey, a brother of Charles Hawtray, "The Message From Mars" man. Mr. Hawtrey made a distinct personal success, but the play ran only two weeks. Hall McAllister was featured, and had some mighty good notices. The next venture at the Madison Square will be Carlotta Nielson in a new play. A few seasons ago Miss Nielson was unknown. She made a hit in "Hedda Gabler" with Mrs. Fiske. Then she was with Faversham, and after that went featuring with Henry Dixey. This is an instance of how they make stars in New York; no reflection upon Miss Nielson, as she is really a good actress, and answers the description more than many others who are enjoying it to the detriment of dramatic art.

Alice Jeffreys, the English actress, has had another unsuccessful opening. This time in the "Dear Unfair Sex." I cannot understand the reason, as I thought the piece very amusing. Miss Jeffreys, herself, is a woman of unusual distinction and charm. Her comedy is exquisite, her voice, her every movement altogether captivating. She has been unusually unfortunate in the playline. Her other pieces both falling short. In October she and Crane go out in a production of "She Stoops to Conquer," Miss Jeffreys as Kate Hardcastle, and Crane as the old Squire.

Eleanor Robson has a great opportunity ahead at the Liberty, where she opens a thirty week season, October 8. She will open in "Nurse Marjorie," by Israel Zangwill, and may it be better than his past dramatic efforts. Other of Miss Robson's plays are "The Lady of Dreams," adopted by L. N. Parker, from Rostand's "La Princese Lointaine,s" one of the mot beautiful plays ever written; "Agatha" by Mrs. Humphrey Ward, and "The Girl Who Has Everything," by Clyde Fitch, and here, one might say, Miss Robson herself has about everything. It isn't long since she went on as a maid with the Frawleys at the California theater. Now she has a New York theater entirely to herself, and a season and all those plays by all these distinguished people. There will also be given an arrangement of Jerome K. Jerome's "Susan in search of a Husband," "Unleavened Bread," from the Robert Grant Story, and a new one by Alfred Sutro.

Mentioning Clyde Fitch, it might still be said that he is our most successful playwright. I can thing of no one to compete with him. Augustus Thomas is doing little, George Ade, even less. Charles Klein has made a sensation with "The Lion and the Mouse," but that is merely one play. Mr. Fitch's version of "The House of Mirth," had a most successful opening the other night in Detroit.

Another success has been Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," at the Savoy. Miss Stahl made a hit in the piece, then in vaudeville form, both in this country and in England. The play is full of catchy slang, and then there is the usual heart interest. Grace George has made good in "Clothes" but you don't know much of Miss George in California. She is the wife of W. A. Brady, without whose untiring efforts, she never would be in her present position, although she has an amount of personal charm, and not too deep emotion.

* * *

John Drew has done very well in "His Home in Order," the new Pinero play, but the success of the season so far and what promises to be the big success of the entire season—"The Hypocrites" at the Hudson. Henry Arthur Jones came over from London for the opening, and I am sure, is not sorry in taking the trip. The play is a wonderful success, and is almost perfectly acted—no star, no limelight for anyone, although Richard Bennett a very young actor, manages to dominate by force of excellent work. Jessie Milward is in the company. I haven't seen "The Hypocrites" yet, but am going very soon, you may be sure.

An awful fizzle is "Man and His Angel" at Hackett's, pronounced to be almost incredible in its awfulness. Someone said it was an affront to intelligent people.

So this is how it goes in a dramatic way. It is easy enough to howl about things after they are done, and make criticisms. There is a huge fortune for the man who can tell a good play when he reads it. I am sorry to harp so much upon theatrical things, but that is about all there is going on in New York. The manager makes a lot of fuss over things that interest no one but himself. A controversy has been on about "The Kreutzer Sonata," in which Blanche Walsh and Bertha Kalich have been appearing, and then, there's the new Astor Theater, in which Annie Russell's opening in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." has been postponed. Melville Ellis has written some pretty music for Lew Fields' "About Town" at the Herald Square, but the show hasn't caught on. In the company are Edna Wallace Hopper, Louise Allen Collier and Elita Proctor Otis. Frank Coffin has made a big hit in a trail performance of a musical hit at Proctor's, and is getting splendid time.

It is too hot to write any more. I don't know if I'll survive the journey to the post box.

DYING MAN SLAYS FAMILY

Charles Brewer Was Hurt in a Cable-Car Wreck in San Francisco.

FRESNO, Sept. 29.—Because his devoted affection for his wife would not permit him to leave her to go to the hospital for treatment for fatal lung hemorrhages, Charles Brewer shot his sleeping wife and then killed himself at 6 o'clock this morning at their home at M and Mono streets. Brewer was to have been taken to the hospital today and he had frequently said that if his illness was fatal or that he would have to go to a hospital, he would kill his family.

His 9-year-old child, Bert, escaped death by hiding. Brewer was a motorman on an electric car here and was hurt in a cable car wreck in San Francisco one year ago, from which he contracted his illness. The relatives of Brewer live at Ukiah, Calif. His wife was Miss Clayton of Healdsburg, Calif.

He shot his wife twice in the forehead as she lay asleep with the boy at her side, and after a fruitless search for the boy, who had escaped and concealed himself behind a trunk, sent a bullet through his left temple, falling dead on a lounge in an adjoining room. Death in both cases was instantaneous.

LAND COMPANY HAS HALF MILLION CAPITAL

Articles of incorporation of the North Berkeley Land Company were filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday, showing the corporation to be capitalized for $500,000, of which amount $500 has been subscribed. The directors are Wickham Havens, Walter H. Leimert, Duncan McDuffie, Louis Titus and J. H. Spring. The headquarters are at North Berkeley.

CHARLES SCOGGINS COMES HERE TO LIVE

Charles H. Scoggins, the song-writer, has come to Oakland to live. For the present he will reside with his father-in-law, J. W. Parmelee, 2106 Adeline street. Mr. Scoggins is the author of several catchy songs, including the one entitled "Where the Silvery Colorado Ends Its Way." He is a bright young man and some clever work is expected from him.

ASSAULT WITH DEADLY WEAPON IS CHARGED.

During an altercation between Neil Perry of 462 Third street, and G. Sevill, last night, the former is accused of attempting an assault upon the latter with a deadly weapon. Perry was placed under arrest and his case went over in department one of the police court yesterday morning, until Monday morning, for the filing of a complaint. It is alleged that Perry threatened to shoot Sevill.

ONE BIG LAWN AT CITY HALL

Small Greens and Cross Walks Are Done Away With in New Scheme.

Work of beautifying City Hall Park is about completed, lawns having been laid out and new shrubbery and plants placed in the ground. There is to be one broad expanse of lawn hereafter, instead of several small lawns with cross walks as in the past. Mayor Mott is much pleased with the appearance of the park and believes that it will be a great improvement to the center of the city. Loafers have been tabooed for a time and will probably be kept off the lawn until it is full-grown.

BUSINESS IS RESUMING.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 29.—Via Meridian, Miss.—Business was partially resumed in Mobile today. The city authorities are clearing the streets of the debris as rapidly as possible. The street cars are expected to resume service by Sunday night. The Postal and Western Union Telegraph companies are still out of business, their wires in every direction being down. At Coden, Ala., only one house is standing. The Mobile & Ohio is maintaining a partial service but it has no telegraph wires nearer Mobile than Whistler, Ala., which is seven miles out.

25 ARE KNOWN DEAD.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE, W. R. Hearst service, over longest leased wire in the world.)

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 29.—The vastness of the destruction wrought by the hurricane here Thursday is now being realized. Twenty-five persons are known to have been drowned.

DID YOUR PIANO BURN?

It is estimated that 25,000 pianos were burned in the San Francisco fire. The total loss in this line was enormous. After the fire, Eilers Music Co. sent a representative to the east, who made arrangements with nineteen piano factories by which San Franciscans whose pianos were burned are to be allowed one-half of all they had paid on them toward the purchase of a new piano.

Eilers Music Co. have had their store all remodeled and you will find a complete stock, also an assortment of the finest of pianos, such as the Hazelton, Decker, Kimball, Schumann, Crown and Bailey; in fact, over thirty different makes from which to make your selection.

BIG FRAUD IN CANNED GOODS

Commission Finds That Veal Loaf Is Made of Feathers and Bits of Rope.

New Yorkers have watched with interest the recent sessions of the Government Pure Food Law Commission held in the city. Father Knickerbocker learned that the "prepared" foods he eats do not in many instances, alas, bear any relation to the names blazoned forth on the labels. Salt cod, according to the testimony evoked by the commission, is often haddock, canned baked beans are usually merely boiled and veal loaf is sometimes concocted largely of feathers and bits of rope. Butter is dyed yellow and catsup is dyed red, and the green of the pickle is said to be put there very often by man rather than by nature. Even the cherry in New York's cocktail is said to be colored red—but as no New Yorker of taste takes cherries in his cocktail this news will not greatly cause worry along the Great White Way.

STOCKTON SUICIDE WAS KNOWN BY THREE NAMES

STOCKTON, Sept. 29.—The man who shot himself on Main street last night after purchasing a revolver at a local hardware store was identified today by W. M. Burke, a construction foreman of Banta, as a man whose real name was Hennessey, though he had received letters from his home in Albany, N. Y., as J. J. McCormick. He was also known under the names of Clark and Collins.

SUSPECTED FORGER IS CAUGHT IN BAKERSFIELD

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 29.—George Hamilton, wanted here for forgery, has been arrested in Baton Rouge, Pa. Application will be made to Governor Pardee for extradition papers.

THEFT IS CHARGED TO HANDBINE

For the alleged stealing of a bicycle in Hayward, Dudley Handbine was arrested Friday in this city at 280 San Pablo avenue. A grand larceny complaint was made against him in Hayward and he was arrested on a warrant in this city. Handbine has been turned over to the authorities at Hayward.

SIX PERSONS DROWNED.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—Six persons were drowned in Mississippi Sound by the hurricane, eight large sailing vessels and about thirty small vessels wrecked, and Ship Island, Cat Island and Horn Island were submerged. The federal quarantine station on Ship Island was badly damaged and about $1,000,000 damage was done to property on the mainland.

GAMBLERS USE CHEAP BEANS

Frequency of Arrests Makes Chinese More Economical With Counters.

While they were playing cards for money in a place at 21 Ming alley yesterday afternoon, Ah Lung and Ah Lee, two Chinamen, were surprised by Policeman Cox, who placed them under arrest on a charge of gambling. The two celestials deposited $25 bail each and were released. Considerable money and paraphernalia were secured by the arresting officer as evidence. At the time of the first raid on gambling dens in Chinatown it was found that the Chinamen used expensive beads to count with and many of these were confiscated by the police. The Chinamen now use cheap lima beans to count with and the police have secured enough of these beans to plant a fifty-acre garden or feed the prisoners for two months.

646 JAP IMMIGRANTS ARRIVE IN HONOLULU

HONOLULU, Sept. 21.—Via San Francisco, Sept. 29.—The Japanese steamship Kasato Maru, formerly a Russian vessel captured in the war, arrived here September 12, bringing 646 Japanese immigrants. Forty of them were returned to Japan by the America Maru, having been rejected at the immigration station because they had trachoma.

The Blue Book

Nineteenth Year of Publication.
THE FASHIONABLE PRIVATE ADDRESS DIRECTORY.
Now being compiled for the Season 1906-07.

We depend upon the courtesy of each one to note the correct name and address, making the Blue Book a standard authority as a book of reference.

Embracing in departments an alphabetical list of the names and residential addresses, with private telephone numbers of the leading families, designating the individual members of each family, within one hundred cities and towns of California, viz.:

San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, San Jose, Burlingame, San Mateo, Menlo Park, Redwood City, Sacramento, Stockton, Fresno, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Riverside, San Diego, etc.

A special feature being the Clubs representing 25,000 members, with their addresses.

Also street and avenue guides, theater diagrams, prominent residents of the Pacific Coast, personnel of the press, shopping guide, permanent guests at the leading hotels.

Shopping by mail order and telephone call is one of the modern conveniences extended to the subscribers through the announcements in the Blue Book, as only responsible concerns will be represented.

The utmost care and discrimination will be used this year in the revision and compilation to make the work complete and accurate.

VOL. LXVI. OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 30, 1906. NO. 41.

Jim Gallagher Will Wear the Yellow Jacket.

THE KNAVE

Ruef Takes a Large Interest in Judicial Ticket.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 29.—Jim Gallagher is to wear the peacock feather and the yellow jacket of authority while Mayor Schmitz contemplates the storied scenes, towers and fanes of the Old World oblivious of the political din he has left behind him. Abe Ruef has won out in his fight to have his man Gallagher wear the mayor's mantle during Schmitz's absence. A strenuous effort was made to head this off, but Ruef stuck to his guns, and has finally had things fixed his own way. This is taken to mean that Maestretti will lose his head as a member of the Board of Public Works, as both Ruef and Gallagher have their axes ground for him. Other officeholders are also trembling in their shoes at the prospect.

But some of those in close touch with the city administration are of the opinion that Ruef has paved the way for a future break with Schmitz by putting his man Gallagher at the helm while the mayor is away.

"If Ruef and Gallagher get gay and commence turning things upside down, there will be trouble when Schmitz comes back," said one of these yesterday. "Ruef has been making a lot of enemies in the labor ranks lately, and a good many of his own following in the Republican party are getting sore and disgusted at his high-handed way of doing things. Schmitz does not lean on him as he used to do, and mark my words, if any of his friends are jammed during his absence there will be a row when he comes home. You know strong influences are being exerted to make Schmitz break away from Ruef, and these influences will not be slow to take advantage of anything that Gallagher may do by Ruef's direction."

Despite all this, Ruef has the whip handle for the present, and the fellows at the pie counter are bowing very low to him, for there will be no one to stay his hand when Schmitz is gone.

* * *

A story is out that McNab has given Ruef the double-cross in relation to Judge Lawlor. Just before the Sacramento convention met Ruef made a deal with the Scot whereby McNab was to program Ruef's delegates, mostly Union Labor men, in return for defeating Judge Lawlor for renomination. McNab used the Ruef delegates to retain his hold on the organization and nominate Bell, but Lawlor's head is not to be given Ruef on a charger. The Scotch boss executed one of his lightning changes on his return from Sacramento and now Lawlor's name is again on the judicial slate. Ruef is furious, but can't help himself. He will move heaven and earth, however, to defeat Lawlor at the polls.

Lawlor will be denounced in every labor union in the city because of his action in the Rice case.

Rice was sentenced to be hanged for a murder committed out on Twenty-fourth street during some of the labor troubles. An appeal was made to the Governor to reprieve him on the ground that if sufficient time were given it could be proved that the killing was done by someone else who had escaped from the State. Lawlor wrote to the Governor requesting him to deny the petition, intending the letter to be private, he having given Rice's friends to understand that he would offer no opposition. A copy of that letter to Pardee is in the hands of every labor union in the city, and is to be used to smash him as soon as he is nominated.

* * *

Another interesting bit of political gossip is to the effect that Ruef is preparing to knife Judge Kerrigan, who defeated Ruef's man Gallagher for Associate Justice of the District Court of Appeals at Santa Cruz. Ruef has it in for Kerrigan on account of the latter's action in a probate case in which the boss was interested. In addition to getting rubbed up the wrong way, Ruef lost several thousand dollars, so his vanity and his pocket suffered at the same time.

In order to get revenge he is making capital with the merchants and the laborites of Kerrigan's decision in the Fresno rate case. That is why Judge Dooling of San Benito was slated for the Union Labor nomination. As he is also the Democratic and Independence League nominee, he will be a formidable candidate at the polls.

Judge Garber will not be Dooling's running mate for Associate Justice, but Judge Hall will not get the Democratic endorsement. Both the Democratic and Union Labor conventions will nominate Robert T. Harrison, whose chief distinction is that he was once a law partner of Frank Pixley. A report said that the nominee was Ralph C. Harrison, now presiding justice of the District Court of Appeals and a former justice of the Supreme Court. So Judge Hall's friends in Alameda county had better make sure that he gets a big vote on that side of the bay.

Nothing funnier in politics has been presented in this State for many years than Theodore Bell's candidacy for governor. While he is the nominee of the Union Labor party and is shouting the battle cry of eight hours and eight dollars a day, his campaign is being financed by Dick Hotaling, a whisky millionaire and a leader of the Citizens' Alliance, and James D. Phelan, who broke all the clubs in the police department over the heads of labor union men during the teamsters' strike, when he was mayor a few years ago. Phelan's active interest in the campaign is shown by the attitude of the Bulletin, which has never failed to follow the ex-mayor of late years. Phelan will also take the stump to emphasize the fact that Bell is a friend to union labor. Mr. Phelan has a fortune of several millions, amassed, like the Hotaling millions, in the whisky trade. A few days ago Phelan boosted Bell's candidacy by charging Schmitz and the Union Labor Board of Supervisors with selling out to Spring Valley. It is certainly a joyous mix-up.

To make matters merrier Tim Spellacy is roaring long and loud because the Standard Oil Company has refused to buy any more of his Coalinga crude oil. Tim also made himself famous by telegraphing instructions to the New York Democrats not to nominate Hearst, which proves that a knock is sometimes a boost.

The daily papers have made public the fact that Chief of Police Dinan wants to make Detective Ed. Wren "Inspector or Director of Police," but they have not told the reason why. Wren can't pass the examination for a captaincy, so his old friend Dinan is trying to make a $250 a month place for him without exposing him to an examination that will trip him up at every turn.

Dinan and Wren used to be running mates on the detective force. They worked together, stood together, and some people said they lied together. At any rate they were inseparable on and off duty, making a pleasure of business. Since Dinan's elevation to the head of the force he has been looking for a soft snap for Wren. Failing to find it, he is now trying to make one.

Big Jim Jeffries said he was going back into the ring, whereat all the fight lovers set up a huzza, for Jim is a mighty puncher and a square fighter, even if he is as clumsy as a grizzly bear. Then he said he would never fight again, whereat there was a roar of disgust, for as long as Jeffries is in the game there is profit and some respectability in it.

Jim is out because he got a punch that laid him flat. His wife said nay, and Jim cried aye. She put her foot down and said Jeffries should never go into the ring again, declaring she had rather live on a ranch and milk ducks than to have him make a living training and fighting. So Jim decided to remain a husband and quit being a fighter.

High society is agog over recent developments regarding the engagement of Francis Underhill to Miss Carmelita Dibblee. Mr. Underhill is a man of fashion and was formerly quite wealthy. He used to be a social lion in New York, and was one of the swells at the horse show. As private secretary to Edward H. Harriman he is a man of consequence. He has been regarded as the ideal bachelor and a great catch. Mr. Underhill is building an artistic adobe house at Santa Barbara.

It has just come out that Mr. Underhill is not a bachelor, but a divorced man with two grown daughters one of them older than his prospective bride. As Miss Dibblee is a member of the De la Guerra family, proud and Spanish to the core, and devoted to the church, there is a world of speculation as to what will happen. All the tabbies are wondering if Miss Dibblee will renounce the church or her lover. Society had pictured to itself a grand wedding, solemnized by some high dignitary of the church, but there can be no such religious ceremony. The church will not sanction a marriage with a divorced man, hence Miss Dibblee must get married, if at all, by a Protestant clergyman or a civil magistrate.

It is given out by the police that all the saloons are kept closed after midnight, but the Globe restaurant, on Franklin street, near Golden Gate avenue, which has a bar attachment, runs full blast every night from 12 o'clock till 6 o'clock in the morning, and is usually filled with policemen, who cut up all sorts of shindies. After midnight it is a regular copper point, and the way the members of the force sing and dance and carouse is a caution.

The place is kept by a man named Furey, who used to be a physician for men only, but who has gone into even a better get-rich-quick business since the fire. It is not known who protects Furey in his riotous and illegal traffic, but it is evident that the hand of some one high in authority is over him, or he could not run his joint in the wide-open way he is doing. It was reported that he is a relative of Supervisor J. J. Furey, but this is denied.

Supervisor Furey has declined the Democratic and Union Labor nomination for Clerk of the Supreme Court at the bidding of Abe Ruef, who wants Frank Caughey, the Republican nominee, elected. Ruef told Furey to skidoo off the ticket, and Furey obeyed, like the good little man he is.

Life below stairs is getting to be exceedingly prim and virtuous, if a recent example of moral fastidiousness in the servants' quarter is to be taken as a criterion. The family of a prominent merchant is in the habit of discussing matters at table in a rather plain-spoken manner that shocked the moral sensibilities of the young serving lady who handed the dishes around. Her ears tingled and her cheeks burned at such language, while the family discoursed in calm ignorance that they were saying things that were just awful.

Finally she told her mother of the terrible goings-on in the house of her employer, whereat that austere dame called on the master of the establishment and informed him that she could not permit her daughter to remain under his roof if his family didn't chasten their speech and spare her blushes. Then the old lady heard language indeed. In a few minutes she hastily emerged, and the Chinese cook worked with zeal and energy in dumping the girl's belongings on the sidewalk.

From this, I judge the movement to reform the table manners of the rich instituted by the ladies of all work is doomed to failure.

Conversation overheard on a street car. Stout merchant, speaking in a loud voice: "No, I haven't registered. What's the use? Ruef owns the town, and will do just as he pleases anyhow. Hang me if I'll take the trouble to register and vote as long as this —— condition of affairs prevails."

"Do you want Ruef to own and run the town?" timidly asked his companion.

"Of course not, of course not; he ought to be driven from the city."

"Then why don't you register and vote? How is Ruef to be driven out if men like you don't take the trouble to vote?

"Oh, I don't bother about that. My firm has Ruef retained as an attorney—we can stand it. But — —n it, the people ought to rise and put him down."

HE VIOLATED 8-HOUR LAW

Washington Contractor Is Given Maximum Sentence——A $500 Fine.

WASHINGTON, Sept 29—Another government contractor, Warren F Brenizer, has been fined for violation of the eight-hour law relating to work on government contracts. Brenizer has a big sewer contract in this city and was arrested charged with working his men ten hours, even after he had been repeatedly warned that he must not do so. He pleaded emergency, but the court fined him $500.

Judge Kimball imposing the fine said he was making it heavy as a warning to other contractors that the would be treated severely if they violated the law. It has been notorious that until the labor unions forced the president to command enforcement of this law, it was a dead letter in this district.

SUNDAY WORK ON MEAT LAW

Washington Prepares to Enforce Inspection Bill Effective Monday.

WASHINGTON Sept 29—Officials of the Agricultural department from Secretary Wilson down who have to do with enforcing the meat inspection law will work all day Sunday getting ready for the taking effect of the act Monday. Secretary Wilson said tonight that a thousand new inspectors have been appointed under the new law, and several hundred more will yet be named. There were nearly a thousand in service under the old law. About forty slaughtering and packing plants which had inspection under the old law have not received it yet under the new, because of failure to comply which means their products will be denied admission to interstate trade beginning Monday.

The department refuses a part of them and hopes most of them will comply in a few days and get inspection. The situation in large cities is now generally bad, though as late as Friday a delegation of men from New York City came to plead for leniency, because they had not realized their amenity to the law and were not prepared to comply. They were told to go home and get busy, and hurried away.

SCARCITY OF WATER FOWL

Extinction of Ducks, Geese and Swans Is Feared by Government.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE, W. R. Hearst service, over longest leased wire in the world)

WASHINGTON, Sept 29—The Department of Agriculture has issued a report on the distribution and migration of North American ducks, geese and swans, "Formerly abundant over the whole of the United States," says the report, water fowl are steadily diminishing in numbers and some species appear to be threatened with extinction in the not far distant future. The preservation of the numerous species of ducks, geese and swans is becoming an important matter of legislation enactment and the present report is intended to furnish information as to the present range abundance and migration of the several species and reference to practical legislation."

BARSTOW LOSS IS $50,000

Business Houses Suffer Most and There Was Little Insurance.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE, W R Hearst service, over longest leased wire in the world)

LOS ANGELES, Sept 29—The fire which last night destroyed most of the small town of Barstow was extinguished at an early hour this morning. The total loss is about $50,000, with but little insurance.

The principal loss was to business houses. Santa Fe officials here say that the company's loss by fire was small, the depot and other buildings being saved.

QUICK DEATH IN A FOUNDRY

Los Angeles Man Instantly Killed by Flying Piece of Wood.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—F. Elmer Glass, an employee of the Washington iron foundry, at Sacramento and Wilson streets, was almost instantly killed at the foundry today by being struck on the head by a flying piece of wood from the frame of an iron flywheel which he was turning out of a lathe. The wooden frame flew to pieces while being revolved rapidly and several other workmen barely escaped injury. Glass' skull was crushed. He was 25 years of age and married.

FRESNO LOSES TO SEATTLE

Siwashes Win Baseball Game by Their Superior Batting.

FRESNO, Sept 29—The Siwashes won again today by superior batting, score 8 to 2. They knocked Fitzgerald all over the lot in the second inning, and in the third he gave way to Simons, a Fresno boy, who made a good showing, keeping hits well scattered, but making two balks, one of which let a runner in from third. Householder hit the ball into the right field sunflower patch in the ninth, but was stopped at third by Dashwood's quick return of the ball.

WEBER'S BODY TO BE CREMATED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29—The body of Adolph Weber who was hanged at Folsom Thursday for murder was brought to this city today from Sacramento. The remains will be cremated.

TROUBLE SEEN IN VENEZUELA

Looked-for Death of Castro May Mean Complications for United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The report from Venezuela to the State Department that President Castro is a very sick man and may not be able long to continue his hold on the reins of the government, if indeed he ever recovers, has caused apprehension at the State Department and Uncle Sam may have some new troubles with his Spanish-American nephews and nieces. There is a general feeling that, turbulent as Venezuela has been under Castro, it would be far worse without him and that foreign complications would be altogether likely to develop in a short time that would require the vigorous consideration of the United States unless other powers were to be permitted to take a hand. The situation is being watched with close attention and deep concern.

FEARED NOOSE; SLEW HIMSELF

Sacramento Man in Delirium Thought He Was Going to Be Hanged.

SACRAMENTO, Sept 29.—Michael Horrigan, who was supposed to have been suffering from delirum tremens, early this morning, shot and killed himself at Walnut Grove. He feared that he would be hanged, though he had committeed no crime, and fired ten shots through the door of his room before putting a bullet through his brain.

THAW SUFFERING FROM PHYSICAL BREAKDOWN

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Harry K. Thaw, despite the efforts of his relatives to bring hope and sunshine into the gloomy Tombs, is breaking down physically and is meloncholy, fretful and irritable.

The Proposed New $20,000 Hotel

We are about to commence the erection on our beautiful tract at Roseville, the new railroad town, one of the most artistic and best arranged hotels in Northern California. It will be built on an elevation giving a grand view of the snow-capped Sierras and surrounding country. OUR TRACT ADJOINS THE GREAT SIXTY-MILE RAILWAY YARDS OF THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC, where they are building two of the largest round-houses in the State, and where they will erect MACHINE SHOPS, ROUND-HOUSES, ETC., which will make it one of the LARGEST SINGLE RAILWAY TERMINALS WEST OF CHICAGO. In this immense yard the freight will be transferred and distributed and freight trains from the North, South, East and West will run in and out of this yard, which, it is estimated, will easily guarantee a population for Roseville of from four to five thousand in the next two years.

We are Selling Lots 50x125 in our Roseville Heights Tract from $150 up which price includes the grading of streets, curbing and cement sidewalks. TEN PER CENT DOWN AND $10 PER MONTH WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES will buy one of these fine lots. SPECIAL DISCOUNT TO CASH BUYERS. Now is the time to buy and take the profits that we believe will accrue in the near future.

For further particulars call or write us. Literature, maps, price lists, etc., will be mailed or given personally on application.

SEALS LOSE TO PORTLAND

Portland won from 'Frisco yesterday afternoon in an ordinary game of ball. The Webfooters outplayed the Seals at every stage of the game, and earned the victory. In the last inning Hildebrand was called in to bat for Pitcher Meyers, but is was useless, and the side was retired without being able to score. Spencer's hitting was the feature of the game. Follow is Scoreer Frank Herman's version of the game:

NEWS FROM BERKELEY AND CITY OF ALAMEDA

BERKELEY MEN HAVE A PUZZLE

How the $100,000 Polytechnic Is to Be Ruled the Conundrum.

BERKELEY, Sept. 30.—Just how the proposed $100,000 Polytechnic High school which was voted for at a recent bond election is to be administered is a question that is now puzzling the Board of Education. The property for the new school was purchased at the last meeting of the board for $35,000. It will adjoin the present High school on Grove street, and those who believe that the funds of the city should be economically administered are urging that the High school and Polytechnic school be conducted under one administration. If this is done the principalship will more than likely fall on the shoulders of M. C. James, who has been the principal of the Berkeley High school for the past eight years.

If the Board of Education decides to install a separate principal in the Polytechnic school it is more than likely that Charles L. Biedenbach will be a candidate for the place. In the plan to conduct the schools under one administration is a scheme to have the pupils of both schools attend classes jointly except where there is a conflict of subjects. By the union of the two schools, declare the economists of the city, students will be able to combine regular high school work with technical studies in the other school.

The Board of Education has already decided that the new school is to be of reinforced concrete and that it is to consist of three or four stories. It will be larger than the present High school, and besides sixteen or more classrooms, will contain a large assembly, library, drafting-rooms and laboratories. There will be four shops devoted to woodcarving, pattern-making, forging and foundry work.

An up-to-date business college will also be one of the chief features of the school, which is planned to be one of the finest in the county.

REPUBLICAN CLUB FORMED BY DOCTORS

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—A new Republican club was formed in Berkeley last Thursday evening, when a large number of professional men met in the office of Dr. Hubert Rowel and set on foot an organization which is to be called the Iodoform Club. The preamble of the club indorses the entire Republican ticket up and down the line, particularly those candidates who have been connected closely in the past with the town of Berkeley. The Iodoform Club is expected to take an active part in the campaign this fall, and to cause a large number of the medical and other professional men of Berkeley to rally round the Republican banner.

STOP SPELLING FOR 25 YEARS, SAYS PROFESSOR

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—"Nothing would be lost to our civilization if all teachers of English spelling in the world should stop spelling for the next twenty-five years. Nothing essential to culture would be lost. All essentials exist and will continue to exist without the ability to spell. At the end of the twenty-five years a new spelling might be introduced more rational than that we now have."

This statement was made before the assembled public school teachers late yesterday afternoon by Alexis F. Lange, professor of English and Scandinavian philology and dean of the College of Letters at the University of California. Wrapt attention was paid by the teachers to the address, as Professor Lange is noted as one of the best authorities on the English language in the country.

Professor Lange said that the spelling reform suggested by the Carnegie Institute did not go far enough in that it merely urged the changing of 300 words in the English language. He recommended that the system of the British and American philological associations, which propose the changing of at least 3000 words, be adopted.

A considerable portion of Professor Lange's address was devoted to the cultivation of language in children. He said that the first thing to be desired in them was strong intellects and that the correct form of language would necessarily follow.

Professor Lange talked about the teaching of the English language from the viewpoint of the professional student of the English language. He said that there was absolutely no right or wrong in language.

"We try to make our children conform to the national language," said Professor Lange, "otherwise their own childish language would be used.

"Standard English implies community of thought and feeling among English-speaking people the world over. Austria is an empire and not a nation, because it has no national language. That is one of the reasons that the country is continually beset by internal dissension.

"If children were not taught the national language they would be handicapped socially later in life. We teach children spelling just as we teach them to use a handkerchief and to eat with a fork instead of a knife. The teaching of language is merely the teaching of linguistic manners.

"Thirdly, there is a personal or educational reason why the child should know the national language. Through standard English a child can realize his possibilities of growth. Standard English supplies him with a mould or groove for thought. The language that the child brings to school is not adequate for his mental growth.

"Teachers should always make a sharp distinction between sounds and letters. Spelling is merely an external accomplishment. For instance, the wedding march from Lohengrin is not a wedding march until the organist strikes the notes on the organ and the couple begins to walk up the aisle. So the letters in our alphabet are merely what notes are in music.

"Next to China we have the worst alphabet of any nation. Dutch printers who first came to America and who did not understand the language are partly responsible for this."

Professor Lange declared that in reforming the language the connection with the past should not be lost. One English-speaking nation should not be ahead of the other in the reform.

"Strictly phonetic spelling should not be introduced," continued Professor Lange. "That is only for specialists who need to be strictly accurate."

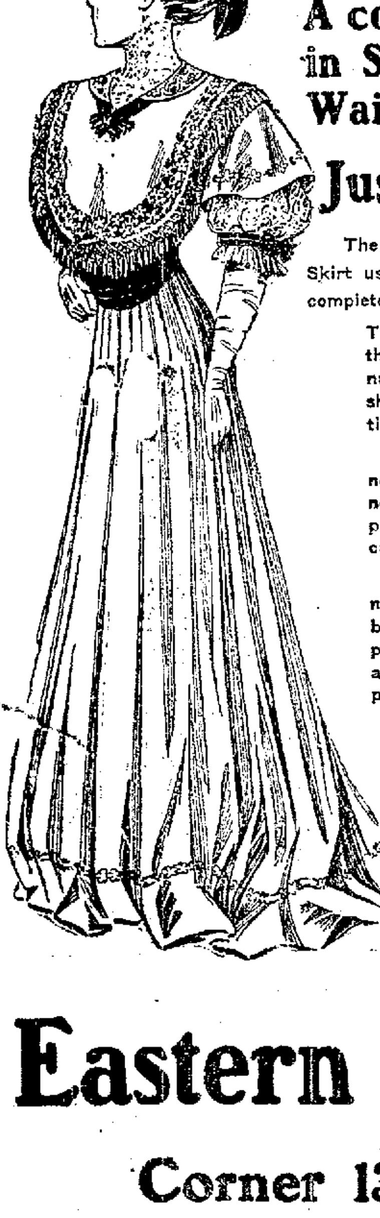
ALAMEDA MAN GETS FORTUNE

ALAMEDA, Sept. 29.—Thomas Carr, who for the past five years has been employed as a motorman by the Oakland Traction Company, this morning received word from Brooklyn, New York, that his uncle, James Carr, had died, leaving him a fortune of $27,000.

The uncle had accumulated considerable wealth during his life, and there are four heirs among whom it will be divided. Carr is one of these, and he now considers himself elevated from a carman working for $2.50 a day to a local capitalist.

HOPE TO AVERT STRIKE BY CONFERENCE

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—Mill owners of Alameda County will meet with a committee from the Millworkers' Union tonight for the purpose of adjusting differences that may result in a strike unless they are amicably settled. Employes demand a 25 per cent raise, while mill-owners believe they can afford only a 12½ per cent increase. At the meeting tonight the mill-owners will urge the men to wait until a uniform scale of wages, which will include a substantial raise, can be arranged for the mill-workers on both sides of the bay.



Style---Supremacy

More Pronounced Than Ever

If you have not yet become acquainted with the wonderful achievements of our Eastern buyers in securing exclusive designs it is time you investigated this marvelous display, which represents the careful thought and splendid skill of America's foremost tailors.

A complete showing of all the Novelties in Suits, Skirts, Evening Costumes, Waists, Furs, etc.

Just a Word About New Skirts

The fancy patterns in dress fabrics this season are peculiarly adapted to Skirt uses. In cases where the pattern would be deemed too obtrusive for a complete suit, the fabric is not regarded as a bit too showy for a separate skirt.

The following guests were there: Marjorie Taylor, Marguerite Herman, Hazel Dow, Marion Hand, Bernice Brooks, Beatrice Zinns of San Francisco, Wanda Bryant, Will Curtis, Leland Weber, Chester Dow, Ernest Lombardi, Hiram Kent, Ralph Freese and Albert Hinds.

PILOT SAVES BIG CRASH IN RIVER

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—While approaching her slip at Liberty street yesterday the ferryboat Lakewood of the Jersey Central, collided with float No. 1 of the Harlem Transportation company, which carried twenty-one freight cars, and was being taken down the river by the tug Commander. The Lakewood was crowded with passengers.

The float struck the Lakewood on the starboard side of the bow. The pilot of the Lakewood signaled to reverse the engines, and this probably averted a serious mishap. No damage of any account was done to either boat.

THROWN FROM TROLLEY CAR

James Melvin Receives Severe Cuts About Head on Chestnut Street.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 29.—While attempting to board a fast moving car of the Santa Clara avenue line last evening at Chestnut street, James Melvin, whose residence is at 827 Chestnut street, was thrown heavily to the gound and was badly cut about the head. Spectators rushed to the assistance of the man and he was taken to the office of a physician, where the wound was dressed.

CUT-GLASS BOWL IS SURPRISE-PARTY GIFT

ALAMEDA, Sept. 29.—Mrs. F. N. Eckley, president of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational church, was yesterday given a surprise luncheon in the parlors of the church. At the end of the courses Mrs. Eckley was presented with a handsome cut glass rose bowl.

A KENTUCKY BREAKFAST.

Those who desire to imbibe spirituous liquors at a Louisville hotel on Sunday will be obliged to order a regular meal with it. This is at once suggestive of the menu of the famous Kentucky breakfast, a sirloin steak, a bottle of whisky and a dog—the dog to eat the steak.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HE WILL SUE IN GERMANY

William J. Gorham Crosses Ocean to Recover $35,000 Fire Damages.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 29.—William J. Gorham, president of the Gorham Rubber Company, left this morning for Germany, where he is to begin suit against the Rhine and Moselle Insurance Company to recover the amount his policies called for and which the company refused to pay, after the San Francisco disaster. Gorham carried $35,000 insurance on his stores on Fremont street and they were not damaged by the earthquake and were not burned until late the first day of the conflagration.

LEE IS NOW A POLICE SERGEANT

BERKELEY, Sept. 29.—Clarence Lee is now a full-fledged sergeant in the Berkeley police office instead of stenographer to Chief Vollmer. He has been given the raise in position by the Board of Trustees and will receive $90 a month for his services instead of $75 as formerly. The Board of Trustees has also decided to make official the last school census for the purpose of making the Berkeley office of the Justice of the Peace a second-class office. This will raise Justice Edgar's salary from [illegible] a month to [illegible].

GREAT RALLY IS PLANNED

Young Men's Republican Club to Meet Early in October.

BERKELEY, Sept. 30.—Enthusiastic preperations are under way by the Berkeley Young Men's Republican Club for a great rally in support of the Republican State, county and Congressional ticket, to be held early in October. Several of the most noted campaign orators in the State are being secured for the rally, which will be preceded by a street procession, bonfires and colored lights.

James N. Gillett, candidate for Governor, and Warren R. Porter, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, have already signified their intention of appearing before the Young Men's Republican Club, and it is possible that their schedule may be fitted to correspond to the night on which the rally will be held.

Although the Young Men's Republican Club has been organized but a comparatively short time, it has hundreds of the most influential and best-known citizens of the city enrolled as its members. George Stoddard is president of the aggressive club and James Wilson is the vice-president; Charles Gregory and James Carpenter are secretary and treasurer, respectively.

80 CHILDREN IN CANTATA

They Will Represent Many Nations in Their Costume and Singing.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 29.—Miss Ida Fisher and Miss Blanche Tisdale are now coaching about eighty children of the Presbyterian Sunday-school who are to take part in a cantata entitled the "Meeting of the Nations," which is to be given on next Friday evening. The cantata is an elaborate affair and will take much work on the part of the children and the coaches. The young folks who represent America in the cantata will receive as their guests visitors from the various countries of the globe, who will be attired in the costumes of the nation they represent. The children will sing a number of characteristic songs of the different nations. The entertainment promises to be a great success.

BODY WILL BE TAKEN EAST FOR BURIAL

The remains of the late Mrs. Mary A. Blackburn, wife of Leslie F. Blackburn, will lie in state at Taylor's undertaking parlors on Clay street, between Fourteen and Fifteenth streets, next Monday between the hours of 10:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. At 3:30 o'clock services will be conducted at St. John's Episcopal church, Eighth and Grove streets, by Rev. Edgar Gee, rector of the church. Pallbearers will be Guy C. Earl, Henry P. Dalton, Arthur M. Breed, T. M. Robinson, Frank M. Shay and R. A. Shay. Tuesday morning the body will be taken to Kalamazoo, Mich., and placed in a vault by the side of her mother. Mrs. Blackburn died yesterday morning at Providence Hospital, after a long illness. She and her husband had lived at the Crellin hotel.

GUARIAN FOR PHILLIPS CHILDREN

Ethel McManus, a niece of James McManus, the undertaker who died July 27, leaving an estate valued at $70,000, was appointed guardian by Judge F. B. Ogden in the Superior Court today, of Mae Phillips and William Phillips, minors, niece and nephew, respectively, of the deceased. The will left everything to the widow, which caused Ethel McManus and her brother, Frank McManus, to contest the will, the Phillips children also joining in the fight.

HANDWRITING EXPERT IN SALOON ACTION

Handwriting Expert Kytka was the central figure in Judge Waste's court today in the suit brought by A. A. Caldwell, as assignee for Lemle Levi Company, wholesale liquor dealers, San Francisco, against Timothy Muldowney, a former saloon-keeper in the city across the bay. The plaintiff claims that Muldowney' purchased fixtures worth $2600 from the Levi firm and then made fraudulent entries in his books to show that he had paid for the goods. The saloon was destroyed by the fire. Kytka has been called upon to show that the entries were made a long time after the dates were made. Kytka stated that the entries alleged to have been made by Muldowney in December were in different ink than other handwriting of the same month.

MRS. ESTHER MOSES DEAD AT HER HOME

Mrs. Esther Moses, a widow, 83 years of age, died yesterday morning at her home, 832 Fifty-third street. She was a native of Pennsylvania and leaves five children, two sons and three daughters, one of whom is Mrs. Ella Raycer.

Mrs. Etta Harding, who is well known in this city, passed away last Wednesday in Goldfield, Nevada. Her body has been brought to this city for interment. Deceased was a widow and 56 years of age.

LABOR ROW LEADS TO ARRESTS

After having Paul Chandler, formerly a sailor but now a picket for the sailors' union, arrested Friday night on a charge of battery and carrying concealed weapons, James Campbell, a sailor, was taken into custody on a felony charge, sworn to by Chandler. The two men appeared in department two of the Police Court this morning and their cases went over until Monday to plead. It is alleged by Chandler, who has preferred the felony charge against his accuser, that Campbell assaulted him with a knife several days ago. Chandler is a union picket and Campbell a non-union sailor. The two men met several days ago and the picket endeavored to win the sailor over to the union. Campbell, it is said, drew a knife and attempted an assault. Campbell and Chandler met last night again and it is said that the latter struck the sailor in the face. Campbell called a policeman and had his assailant placed behind bars.

MOTHER OF PROMINENT PHYSICIAN IS DEAD

Mrs. Mary L. Wythe Dodge, mother of Dr. C. W. Dodge, the prominent physician of this city, passed away Friday night at her home, 825 Fourteenth street, in this city. Deceased was the daughter of the late Dr. J. W. Wythe, who was one of Oakland's well-known physicians during his lifetime. Mrs. Dodge had been ill for some time, but it was not thought that her ailment was serious. Deceased is survived by four children, Dr. C. W. Dodge, Guy, Stephen and Ruth Dodge.

PRESIDENT ON A BATTLESHIP

Witnesses Target Practice of North Atlantic Squadron off Cape Cod.

BARNSTABLE, Mass., Sept. 29.—President Roosevelt passed six hours on the battleship Missouri today witnessing the target practice of several ships of the North Atlantic squadron. As difficulty was experienced in reaching him by wireless, many messages were sent out from here by launches. The president started on the return to Oyster Bay on the Mayflower at 2:30 p. m.

HIT WITH BOTTLE IN RED-LIGHT DISTRICT

"My friend hit me on the head with a beer bottle" was the explanation given by B. Saville, forty-five years old, an Alameda merchant, living at 2128 Clinton avenue, that city, when he was brought to the receiving hospital at 2 o'clock yesterday morning suffering from several bad cuts on his scalp. He was found near the red-light district on Broadway, but stated to Officer Ford that he did not know why his companion should have attacked him. Saville said that his assailant had been arrested by Officer Powers and taken to the City Hall. He was allowed to proceed to the Hotel Vendome after Warden J. M. Page put seven stitches in his wounds.

HE FRIGHTENS AWAY PORCH-CLIMBER

According to the story of C. W. Barlow of 1014 Twenty-first street, he was about to be the victim of the porch-climber who has made his appearance of this city in the past few days, when the would-be burglar ran away. About 3 o'clock in the morning, Barlow heard a noise at the side of his house, and he went to investigate. He asserts that when he peered out of his window, he saw a man trying to climb from the side fence into a window at the side of the house which was open. The prowler heard the window go up and jumping to the ground made good his escape, before Barlow could sound an alarm. The matter was reported to the police.

SUES WOMAN FOR RENTS AND DAMAGES

J. F. Baumgarten brought suit against Jennie Roberts in the Superior Court yesterday for $500 damages and for $300, the value of rents accruing on a lease to a disorderly house on Fifth street, which lease the plaintiff claims was obtained by Edna Cameron from B. Hallgarten October 30, 1903. Baumgarten states in his complaint that the defendant ejected him from possession of the premises, having obtained the lease from the Cameron woman, to carry on the house. He declares the lease is void and asks the court to set aside the document as such and award him judgment for the sums named.

WILLIAM HERRICK DIES AFTER ILLNESS

At the age of 79 years, William F. Herrick, for thirty-one years a prominent resident of this city, passed away Friday night at his home, 63 Santa Clara avenue. Deceased was the father of Mrs. Mark A. Requa, whose husband is the son of the late well-known banker. Death came after an illness of some duration. Deceased is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Requa, Mrs. Colin Ross, Mrs. Josie W. Stanford, Lucy, and Margaret Herrick.

FRANK BACON TO OPEN NEW THEATER

Next Monday night will be the most important event in San Francisco theatricals since the great calamity. The Colonial theater, by the way, did not suffer from the earthquake or by the fire, so this playhouse starts with a very good record as far as being fire-proof. The doors of this theater will be thrown open to the public for the first time Monday night. The Oakland theater-goers are more than a little interested in this new enterprise. Frank Bacon, who has been a local favorite for years, has been selected to manage the Colonial. He has recently returned from the East with a new company and plays. Inasmuch as the Colonial is the only theater built according to the building laws in San Francisco, it should be a great success. Mr. Bacon said: "The Colonial is a modern building in every way. There will be as many comforts and conveniences for the public as any theater I have been in. While it is not a large house, it will do very nicely. The balcony will be started in a few days after the opening and will take about three weeks to finish, then we will seat about fifteen hundred. As to the class of plays to be given, that will depend entirely on the public. We will give them what they want to see, even if it is contrary to what we think they should have. Managers of theaters are often criticised for the plays they put on, when it is not their fault. The manager wants to see his theater filled and he is going to produce what they want if it is to be had. The company that will present 'The Man from Mexico' next Monday evening will, I think, give the public a good account of themselves. As for the theater, we are all proud to be the pioneers of the first real theater in Greater San Francisco."

THE GOLD LEGION

The forthcoming report of the United States mint officials indicates that over $425,000,000 of the precious basic metals were produced last year, against $375,000,000 in 1904. People now living will in all probability see a billion of dollars in gold produced in a year. In the United States, Nevada, California and Idaho are the centers of greatest development and promise at present.

The Gold Legion

Has a most promising group of claims under development at Knob Hill, Eldorado Canyon district, Lincoln County, Nevada. We have sulphide ores in two shafts on two separate ledges, and can develop these sulphide ores in a half dozen shafts at less than 100 feet on a half dozen ledges on our ground. These sulphides carrying silver and gold, make a permanent and profitable mining, milling and concentrating proposition. This camp has produced several millions from surface workings. We could install a milling plant now, but we prefer to open up and block out 20,000 or 30,000 tons of this ore before we put in our mill. This is good mining, and is proof of conservative management. We are selling blocks of stock from $50 to $500, to consummate this work. With funds to develop we believe it just as feasable to block out 200,000 or 300,000 tons of ore on this ground. The indications are that we will have great bodies of these sulphides. Why not put some of your surplus funds to work for you?

REVOLVER STOLEN FROM BUILDING

The office of C. A. Rick in the Macdonough building was entered sometime Friday night and an Iver-Johnson revolver taken by the thief. The burglar forced open the door of Rick's office and after rummaging about among the desks, took the pistol and made his departure. The theft has been reported to the police. The room of H. D. Rice in a local lodging-house was entered and the thief stole a pair of trousers and about $8 in coin.

BEATEN ON HEAD IN ELECTION FIGHT

Hereafter Joseph Marshall, forty-four years of age, an expressman living at 671 Fourth street, may not be so eager to engage in an earnest discussion for his favorite. Marshall became involved in an election quarrel last night and was beaten on the head by a club in the hands of a man who had a candidate on the other side of the fence. Dr. Irwin put three stitches in the expressman's scalp and he left the Receiving Hospital declaring that he will keep his political opinions to himself for the future.

FISH ON TRAYS AT A FISHING STATION

By WALDON FAWCETT

Not content with stocking the streams rivers and lakes of America with the most appetizing and valuable members of the finny tribe, the United States Fish Commission is now undertaking to populate the ocean. The especial object of Uncle Sam's fish experts in turning their attention to new fields of activity at this time is to save certain important families in the aquatic realm, such as the lobster which are threatened with extermination and the new move is cited here as illustrating the lengths to which this novel institution will go in its efforts to extend its usefulness

The Fish Commission is a regular branch of our national government, yet despite the important character of its work, it is safe to say that it is so far as a large portion of the public is concerned one of the nation's least known activities It costs Uncle Sam close to half a million dollars a year to conduct its fish culture enterprise but the wonder is that a project of such magnitude can be carried on so cheaply Almost half of the aggregate expenditure is disbursed as salaries for employes and other big items represent the cost of maintaining the railroad cars and fleet of vessels used by the fish growers and distributers

The total number of fish distributed by the government has been increasing by leaps of about one hundred million yearly, until now the aggregate is far above the billion mark The work of the Fish Commission is carried on at 25 stations or hatcheries located at suitable places throughout the country At Woods Hole and Gloucester Mass., cod, mackerel, lobster and other important marine species are fostered and the finny babies deposited along the coast.

At three stations in California, one in Oregon and one in Washington the eggs of the Pacific salmon are collected and hatched and the young liberated in the neighboring streams. The Atlantic and landlocked salmons are cultivated in Maine to restock the depleted streams and lakes of New England and Northern New York. On the Great [illegible] ere four stations are maintained the work is with white fish and lake trout in order to sustain the great commercial fisheries conducted for those species In the interior of the country hatcheries are maintained in Vermont, Virginia Michigan Iowa, Montana Missouri Illinois, Texas and Colorado for the important task of maintaining in the inland lakes and streams the supply of brook trout rainbow trout, black bass, crappie and other fishes During the spring on the Potomac Delaware and Susquehanna Rivers shad are hatched and distributed in streams along the Atlantic Coast

The fish sharps which are employed by the government to preserve and improve one of the leading sources of food supply for the American people have been greatly aided in their work of late by the introduction of up-to-date mechanical devices and other improved equipment for handling and transporting fish and eggs Particularly has there been a betterment of ways and means for carrying the delicate water dwellers from place to place Originally the fish were carried by messengers in baggage cars on regular passenger trains but now the Fish Commission has for its exclusive use four private cars specially equipped with tanks air-circulating apparatus and other appliances The reservoir tank of one of these cars will hold 600 gallons of water and living accommodations are provided for the men who look after the fish

For marine work on the oceans the commission is similarly well equipped In addition to vessels of various kinds engaged for short intervals from time to time, the governmental Department of Fish and Fisheries has a fleet of three vessels—the steamers Albatross and Fish Hawk and the schooner Grampus The Albatross is fitted with appliances for deep-sea dredging and collecting work, and is used for surveying and exploring ocean bottoms and investigating marine life The Fish Hawk is in reality a floating hatchery and is engaged in hatching shad lobsters and mackerel, in collecting eggs and distributing the infant fish, in addition to making surveys of fishing grounds

Some very ingenious schemes have been introduced by the fish experts for the purpose of determining how rapid is the growth of fish of a given species in a given locality For instance, on the New England coast sometime since the commission released 1 500 cod, each with a tag designed to identify the fish wearing it as an individual No two tags were alike the markings on them consisting of a series of letters and numbers each properly recorded, so that when any tagged fish is captured in later years it will be possible by consulting the record to determine just when and under what conditions it was released. This novel tagging scheme has likewise been employed in the case of fish in other parts of the country, and some very interesting data has thus been obtained as to the travels of these tiny swimmers in the ocean.

The hatching apparatus used by the Fish Commission at its various stations consists in the main of troughs, jars or baskets, or a combination of these receptacles An average trough is perhaps from 16 to 20 feet in length, from one foot to a foot and a half wide, and say half a foot in depth Sometimes these troughs are placed end to end on different levels. By means of partitions the water is kept constantly in circulation around the eggs, which are placed in the trough in baskets. These baskets, like the troughs, vary greatly in size, but as a specimen it may be cited that a basket such as is used at the salmon hatcheries is one foot wide by two feet in length and is capable of holding two gallons of salmon eggs, or approximately [illegible].

The packing of eggs for shipment is one of the delicate duties connected with the industry. Usually they are transferred in wooden boxes of dimensions about two feet square. At the bottom of the box is placed a thick layer of moss, then a layer of mosquito netting, then a layer of eggs, followed by mosquito netting again, and so on with successive layers of moss, netting and eggs. In the case of most eggs it is necessary to surround the entire box with layers of hay in order to guard against changes of temperature, and certain species of fish require a layer of ice between each two boxes of eggs By means of refrigerator boxes packed with finely chopped ice the United States officials have successfully sent fish eggs to England, Mexico, New Zealand, Japan and South America.

While Uncle Sam's fish experts do much of their colonizing by means of the distribution of eggs, they also establish new communities of members of the finny tribe which have attained to good size. The kindergarten methods followed in the case of lake trout at the hatcheries on the Great Lakes may be considered representative The baby trout are kept in troughs until they are large enough to be transferred to ponds. For the first four weeks the youngsters are fed four times per day on finely chopped beef liver As they grow older the amount of food is increased, and when, after about three months, the fish have attained a length of from one to two inches, they go to the rearing ponds, which are perhaps [illegible] feet long and not more than two feet deep. A pond of this size will at the outset accommodate 10,000 lake trout In about a year after hatching the artificially reared trout will measure from four to eight inches in length, and are taken to their new homes. They make the journey in cans, each of which contains [illegible] fish.

The whitefish, another favorite food fish, is hatched in a glass jar, and through each of the hundreds of jars in a whitefish hatchery fresh water is circulated at the rate of six quarts per minute, the eggs being thus kept in constant motion The young whitefish are turned loose to shift for themselves almost as soon as hatched, anywhere from [illegible] to [illegible] of the diminutive wrigglers being crowded into each of the kegs in which they make the journey to the waterway where they are henceforth to take up their residence.

The shad being the most palatable and popular of fishes, especial interest attaches to the efforts of the Fish Commission to increase the population of this branch of the fish family. As early as [illegible] efforts were made for the extension of shad culture, but it was not until [illegible] that the matter was taken up by the general government. The United States authorities when they undertook to deal with shad eggs upon a scale unprecedented in the history of fish culture had considerable difficulty in discovering really satisfactory hatching apparatus, but finally they devised an automatic hatching jar of about seven quarts capacity, which meets all requirements In the busy season the hatcheries devoted to shad culture are frequently taxed to the limit of their capacity and, despite the fact that the stations in question can accommodate an aggregate of 88 000 eggs, and that the average hatching period is only eight days, it has frequently been necessary to call into requisition as temporary supplementary hatcheries the four special cars of the commission, each of which are capable of caring for from 3,000,000 to 4 000 000 eggs at a time.

Of late years the Fish Commission has devoted especial attention to spheres of activity wherein there has appeared to be exceptional need for remedial measures in order to save some important class of food products For instance, there is the case of the lobster which has been threatened with extermination. Recently the commission has had one of its steamers plying up and down the coast of Maine in search of egg-bearing lobsters and while the yield has been by no means all that could be desired it is evident that the tide has turned and that in time the new methods whereby there are taken and hatched million of lobster eggs that would otherwise be lost, will have an effect. Lobster eggs are hatched in jars in each of which 500 000 eggs are placed Great care has to be exercised, however, for the little lobsters if crowded quickly develop cannibalistic tendencies

The scientific fishgrowers have also turned their attention to the oyster industry and "oyster fattening" is to be carried on systematically and on an extensive scale, principally by securing by artificial means a more abundant growth of the minute plants on which the oyster feeds Most wonderful of all is the effort which is to be made to produce artificial currents through the oyster beds in order to make the bivalves grow more rapidly Three plans of campaign are being followed in fostering the oyster—namely the increase in the number of oyster eggs, providing protection from enemies of the oyster, and the establishment of new oyster beds The government officials have also come to the conclusion that further steps must be taken to protect the [illegible] industry. GO TO DEATH LIKE SHEEP

By ROBERT CROZIER LONG,

(Special Commissioner in Russia.)

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 29.—The wholesale military executions going on all over Russia are productive of scenes which for terror and pathos surpass the novelist's most vivid imagings.

The features are nearly always the same. The majority of the doomed men die quietly and patiently. Only the most irreconcilable revolutionists are defiant. It is the sheep-like docility of the majority which gives the executions their most tragic feature.

The mutineers, though condemned to hanging, are invariably shot. It is impossible to find a hangman in Russia, such is the hatred of capital punishment. The last two military hangmen committed suicide, and even convicted murderers refuse to execute men on behalf of the hated government.

I send you a remarkable description of how the mutineers of the warship Pamialazova met their death. It was witnessed by an officer who witnessed the scene:

"Into every convicted man's cell was carried a short coat of sackcloth. They were ordered to put these on. Most begged to remain in their sailor jacket, but they were told that their sentence deprived them of their rights as sailors, upon which they submitted with sighs and redressed themselves.

"When the order was given to bind their hands behind their backs they wept at the indignity but bowed their heads and submitted, asking only that their limbs should not be bound. The men were lined up in the corridors and taken through the castle yard to the place of execution. As they passed the centries on guard they cried: 'Farewell, and forgive us, brothers!' One struck up a hymn and the others joined in for a moment. Then all was silence. On arriving at the place of execution they addressed the commanding officer to be allowed to take leave of one another. This was granted, and each man having kissed all the others, they marched steadily to the end of the square, where a cable was stretched between two posts, and to this cable the condemned men were bound.

"When all were bound, the shooting party, which was chosen by lot, drew up in line before the men. The priest went around with a cross, which all kissed. One of the condemned called an officer and asked who would shoot him, as he wished to leave the man his silver watch.

"After this the sentence of death was read, preceded by the judges' reasons for convictions, but before this was finished, the condemned began to shout: 'Enough! We know our guilt!' and turning to the shooting party the men cried: 'Shoot straight, brothers, so that we may die at once!'.

"When the command to load rifles was given, they again cried: 'Aim, brothers, at our hearts!'

"The volley rang out. All had been killed at once, but as they hung backward, and across the cable, a second volley was poured in. Then, as in some cases, reflex movements continued, a few separate and final shots were fired.

WOULD LIKE TO SEE WAR

Germans Pleased at Estrangement Between Japan and United States.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—It is evident from the tone of the German newspapers that they view with considerable satisfaction the growing estrangement between Americans and Japanese on both sides of the Pacific ocean.

Immediately after the war one of England's most prominent financiers pronounced the opinion that the Japanese would know how to use the friendly feeling in America to further their own plans and only a few days ago M. Witte, the famous Russian statesman, speaking of the new $125,000,000 loan the Japanese are endeavoring to raise in the United States, is reported to have said:

"The time will surely come when America will regret loaning money to Japan instead of to Russia. It is not that Russia is in need of gold of the Yankees, but what I mean to say is that all this American money will in time be used against the United States, in a war which will be even more gigantic than the one between Japan and my own country."

It is the general opinion here that a war between America and Japan must come, if not over the Philippines, which the Japanese hate to see in American hands, then when the subjects of the Mikado try to oust the United States from the markets of the Far East.

It is not because of any ill-will against America that Germans rejoice at the growing estrangement between Americans and Japanese, but because they would prefer to see a war between these two people to one between Grmany and Japan, which German statesmen have foreseen.

PRINCE ATE POISON BUDS

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Princess of Wales has just had a severe shock, but nothing serious came of it. She and Prince "Eddie" and the other children were paying a visit to one of Lady Esher's country places. Running about the house the Royal children, including the future King of England, hit upon a game which was a sort of "touch." They had run to something and pretend to eat what they touched. All went well until they ran out into the garden to continue their game.

Lady Esher has a beautiful collection of flowers and flowering plants, some of them of a deadly poisonous character. To her horror, and the rest of the household and the Princess of Wales, they found the children were so eager on their game that out in the garden they were actually running to the flowers, touching them and eating them.

The whole household ran out, pale with fright, and petals of various flowers were snatched from the mouths of the Princess of Wales' children. Prince "Eddie," the eldest son, seemed to have had a special appetite for flowers. The whole countryside was ransacked for a doctor and emetics, and for hours everybody was in a state of great alarm, wondering what the succession to the throne of Britain in the near future would be, but next day the Royal children were quite well and the alarm subsided.

Such incidents as this in the life of the future King, as he is fondly called, are strenuously kept from the British public, who are surfeited with stories of his goodness, docility and capability at lessons, but are never allowed to hear anything about his scrapes.

PRIVATE CAR FOR THE POPE

Luxurious Coach at Disposal of Holy Father if He Ever Leaves Vatican.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—If ever the Pope makes up his mind to leave the Vatican and go on a railroad journey, he will find all ready for his use one of the most sumptuous private cars ever prepared. This car, which was originally ordered for Pope Pius IX, is the property of the Roman Railway Company and was decorated inside by the celebrated French painter, Gerome. The car is divided into three compartments, comprising an oratory, a drawing room and a sort of boudoir or resting room.

On the wall opposite the armchair intended for the Pope, Gerome had painted an allegory in which the figures of St. Peter and St. Paul appeared prominently. In one large panel His Holiness was represented blessing a steamer which was making its way into Roman waters; in another the Pope is seen blessing a locomotive. Various medallions are filled with heads of the Virgin and the Apostles.

The upholstery and appointments of the car are luxurious in the extreme, and except for the sacred subjects depicted in the decoration one might think the car intended for a Pierpont Morgan. Americans who are familiar with the nude subjects chosen for Gerome's statuary during the last years of his life, would hardly expect to find such religious work from the brush of the great French artist.

SHE WILL ACT WITHOUT PAY

Mary Anderson to Appear in "Macbeth" for Sake of London Charities.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Mary Anderson de Navarro has been prevailed upon by Farther Bernard Vaughan, the smart castigator of the Smart Set, to emerge into the public gaze this winter. Although many years have passed since the then beautiful actress performed what had been looked upon as an impossible feat, namely, that of playing Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale" at the old Lyceum for 164 nights, doubling the parts of Hermione and Perdita, she still retains sufficient charm to rouse a London audience to enthusiasm.

No one but Father Vaughan, however, has the power to lure Mme. de Navarro back to the glare of the footlights now. He has prevailed upon her to promise to act some scenes from "Macbeth" and to sing a few songs in aid of his Catholic charities during the coming winter.

Mme. de Navarro lives a secluded life at Court Farm, Broadway, Worcestershire, lapsing back, as she says, with a smile, to the ease of the days when she gained a character for idleness at schools in Kentucky. Since she left the stage, at the age of twenty-eight, she has been implored to go back to it, but has always slowly shaken her head and said no. Offers of hundreds of thousands of dollars have failed to draw her.

Father Bernard Vaughan and the opportunity of working hard without pay have succeeded where all else has failed. She says she is still as much in love with Shakespeare as ever, and she often shows her vibrant voice to advantage in little readings which she gives in the family circle at Court Farm.

KING VICTOR IS SCORCHER

Italy's Monarch Has Thoroughly Mastered Driving of an Automobile.

ROME, Sept. 28.—King Victor Emmanuel has earned the reputation in Italy of an automobile "scorcher." He is indeed an expert and enthusiast in the sport, which he considers one of the finest and most useful in existence. He learned the art of motoring very thoroughly about eight years ago, shortly after his marriage, and is now a very successful driver.

He shares the motor mania with his mother, Queen Margherita, who tries to forget the tragedy of her widowhood in the excitement of the road. One day the king was speeding along a straight and lonely road when he passed his mother's car, which was halted by the wayside with a punctured tire. He would not have noticed the other machine, but his automobile tore off the mud guard of the standing car as it flashed by. At the grating noise and the sound of a woman's voice he pulled up.

He then saw that he had narrowly missed killing his mother, who was sitting in her disabled automobile. She turned off the danger with a joke, saying, laughingly:

"Why, Victor, I would not have believed your auto could go so fast. I don't think I will accept your challenge to a race, as I would certainly be beaten."

The king believes in the value of the automobile for military purposes. Like the kaiser, he attends the army maneuvers in an automobile, flashing from one position to another with a celerity that is sometimes embarrassing to general officers.

In his more peaceful and moderate spins, King Victor Emmanuel often takes his queen and little Princess Yolande with him. Yolande loves motoring, and stands between her father and mother, grasping the steering wheel, and imagines herself a skillful "chauffeuse." She further insists upon taking a whole family of dolls, which she dresses in motoring costume and places in a row in the tonneau.

CROSS GREAT GOBI DESERT

Two British Officers Complete Daring Journey in Wilds of Asia.

PEKING, Sept. 29.—Two British officers, Coloned C. Bruce and Captain Layard, have accomplished a daring journey across the wild regions of Central Asia. They traveled 8306 miles, a journey which took them nearly twelve months.

They started from Simla, India, in August, 1905, and traveling through Kashmir, reached Thibet through the mountain passes of 17,000 to 24,000 feet. Another British officer on a sporting expedition, whom they met in the Marsemika pass, was the last white man they saw, for six months.

The travelers wandered about a desolate region south of the Kuen-Lun mountains for six weeks without meeting a human being or seeing any signs of habitation. The crossing of this range was very difficult, the journey of thirty-five miles occupying five days.

An entirely new route was struck out across the great Cobul desert, by the two Englishmen, who crossed it at an unfavorable season, their journey being probably the first ever attempted under those circumstances.

Colonel Bruce and Captain Layard reached Peking safely, afterward proceeding to Wei-Ha-Wei, where they were welcomed by the British garrison.

THIS WOMAN IS MUCH WORRIED

Financier's Husband Demands She Sit in Old Work Dress for Portrait.

Mrs Rawles-Reader has been going about near her London home of late in the oldest and most soiled attire any woman of means has ever been seen in for a long time She has an English husband although she is an American herself, and she has trained him to be as much alive as a real American She often tells friends that sh ohas brought him up in the way he should go

But docile and tractable as Mr Reader has proved to be under the great woman financier s regime, he has insisted on one thing He has demanded that the new portrait which she has just ordered painted by Mrs Melton Fisher of Orme Square, London shall be a picture of her in what he says he likes so much—her old working dress

She has been popping out into the city and various places in the clothes which she has been giving sittings to the artist, and some of the results have been queer She has been painted in a white serge dress or rather one that was white originally, and her gloves and her clothes have been of the oldest description

As the smart woman, to use her own words is fighting Teddy Roosevelt," this attire has worried her very much, as people of importance have been continually popping in but her English husband who she has trained to be so smart, does nothing but laugh at her distress

BEGGAR'S HUMP WAS OF STRAW

The plague of fleas which infested the upper part of New York during the month of August, has been succeeded by a swarm of beggars, who clog the most crowded thoroughfares and pester the passersby with their importunities Ever since last spring when Police Commissioner Bingham abolished the mendicancy squad, which kept the curbstone grafters on the run the number of beggars in the city has increased alarmingly Since early in September, the mendicants who prefer to lead a vagrant life in the country during the warm months have returned to town Many of the mendicants have waxed wealthy One ragged fellow who grinds a pitiful hand-organ on Herald square every night is known to possess several tenement houses The patrolmen on the beat do not drive him away because he has a political pull One beggar apparently a one-armed hunchback with his sole hand crippled was arrested at the Brooklyn bridge entrance recently He exhibited deformities so horrible that the police judge scored the policeman for arresting him In reply the policeman ripped off some of the man s clothing revealing the fact that the "hump was made of straw and the 'missing" arm was firmly strapped to the man's body, while even the crippled hand was a normal member cleverly held out of shape.

THE GOOD BACTERIA.

Sewage must either purify or nitrify. That is, it must either decompose (with results unfavorable in the extreme), or such chemical action must take place as will change the harmful organic ingredients to harmless inorganic matters, a result really effected through bringing them somehow into contact with the air the oxygen of which will consume them The problem before us, then really resolves itself into this How may we so oxidize or nitrify sewerage as to change the noxious organic matter into harmless substances" To do this the sanitary engineer instead of removing the germs as in water filtration, cultivates myriads of helpful bacteria. 'Whether we consider such sewage disposal as carried on by natural or by artificial means, on the irrigated farm or the trickling filter, we find this startling and remarkable fact—the oxidizing of the sewage is done by millions of living organisms. The sewage filter is, in its essentials, nothing more than a pile of rock upon which the good bacteria may grow, These bacilli take in the organic wastes and turn them into safe and harmless inorganic matters. To cultivate such bacteria and to use their destructive powers on dangerous elements has been the effort of all recent sewage researches.—Hollis Godfrey in the September Atlantic.

NOT WORRYING ABOUT DEFICIT

New Yorkers Smile When They Are Told of Municipal Ferry System Losses.

New Yorkers who have their homes in the borough of Richmond (Staten Island) must go to and from their business in Manhattan by one route—the municipal ferry Staten Islanders are rather proud of the ferry, and as a matter of fact the ferry-boats are the finest in the harbor When citizens of less favored boroughs of the city point out that the ferry is steadily losing money, Richmond folks smile gravely So long as they have good service they do not worry if the city has to put up the weekly deficit But recently the Staten Islanders had an experience that has made them take a new view of the blessings of municipal ownership Nick Muller, political boss of Staten Island wished to control the executive committee of the local Democratic club, so on the evening of the club election he had his friend Lawrence Hanlon, assistant superintendent of the city's ferries, stop three boats for on trip each, so that the crews might vote for Muller Of course hundreds of passengers were put to great inconvenience Unfortunately for Hanlon, the people kicked up such a row that Mayor McClellan was forced to bounce him But now New Yorkers are wondering what would happen if the city, take for instance operated the subway, and Big Tim Sullivan wanted the employes to swell the crowd at his annual chowder party Perhaps the subway would stop for the day and the tall skyscrapers downtown would remain empty until the army of clerks could walk downtown from Harlem

SKINNER VALUES ONE CRITIC.

Otis Skinner knows a good critic when he finds one Robert Mantell relates the story He and Donaghey, a Philadelphia journalist, were discussing actors of our own day, when Mantell asked 'Putting aside all questions of odiousness in comparisons, differences of taste and various lines of business, tell me, whom do you consider the best living actor?"

"Not as a matter of opinion, but as a matter of fact,' replied Donaghey, "the best living actor is—Otis Skinner"

Mantell may or may not have been disappointed but he was certainly surprised A short time afterward he met Skinner, and the decline and fall of dramatic criticism was discussed, both denouncing hotly those young writers who have never seen Forrest, Booth and Macready, but persist in judging modern players by those standards Finally Mantell said

'Is there one critic under sixty years of age whose opinion you value?"

'Yes,' replied Skinner, "there is one—only one'

"Who is he? Where is he?" asked Mantell

THE 'SCORNED' SUFFRAGISTS

Sister of Gen. Sir John French Joins Them Now and Is Despair of Friends.

Mrs Despard, sister of General Sir John French, the great British cavalry leader, is the despair, not only of her one-time friends in her own class of society, but also of the social-labor propagandists, on whose platform she has been cutting an interesting figure —in Trafalgar square and elsewhere—for some time past

Mrs Despard was one of the very first women to join the Adult Suffrage League This league aims at obtaining by quiet preaching to get votes for every Britisher over the age of 21 years

Mrs Despard declared loudly that she would never, never, countenance the "suffragists" In fact, the Adult Suffrage League looked down with scorn upon any one who belongs in the "Women s Social and Political Union" as the shrieking, parliament-disturbing "suffragists" officially style themselves.

The suffragists stopped the House of Commons this summer by screaming through the grill, up above the Speaker's chair and waving a flag bearing the inscription, "Votes for women!"

Several of these "female hooligans," as several of the London papers call them, have been sent to prison recently for creating disturbances around the houses of members of the government. "I shall never have anything to do with the suffragists," said Mrs. Despard She also wrote to a friend the other day to the same effect

Within three days of writing that letter she joined the suffragists. General Sir John French is now living in a pitiful state of alarm lest his sister should be suddenly put into prison for some heroic but unlawful act as a suffragist

GOOD ROADS—WHY MISSOURI NEEDS THEM.

Missouri needs good roads so that the farmer can more easily get to town —that will help the town. Missouri needs good roads so that the farmer can quickly get back home— that will heelp the farmer and the farm.

Good roads mean higher prices for the land, which is good, and higher education for the children which is better. They insure a market at all times for the products of the farm and a congregation every Sunday for roads express the neighborliness of a community No man can be happy without neighbors—just far enough away It takes a beast or a god to be happy alone—and the gods dwell no longer on the prosaic earth.

Missouri roads are handicapping her prosperity. We can put a Chinese wall about the State and grow within the borders thus inclosed all that is necessary for man to wear or eat or drink. With Missouri blessed so bountifully in material things we build a Chinese wall of mud between every acre of farm land and the nearest town.—Columbia Herald.

LODGINGS ON RACE DAY $20

New York is looking forward with interest to the 300-mile automobile race for the Vanderbilt cup to be held on Long Island on October 6, and it is estimated that 150,000 persons will view the contest. Part of the thirty-mile course lies within the city limits In the little county of Nassau, where the race is held, the auto day is the most prosperous day of the year. On the night before the race single beds in farm houses and inns rent in some cases as high as $20, and the guest must not care if other persons share the room with him Moreover, on the day of the contest farmers' wives, sisters, cousins and aunts sell sandwiches and fruit to the patient spectators at Waldorf prices, and the race committee employs 500 men as special policemen at $5 per man. Even when an occasional chicken or pig is run over the offender is easily persuaded to part with a greenback. It is little wonder, therefore, that the farmers on the outskirts of the city like the smell of gasoline.

HETTY GREEN IS HOMELESS

Hetty Green, the world's richest woman, is a homeless wanderer, who dare not take up her abode anywhere for fear of the persistent tax collector Hunted by the man with the tax list, she left her home in the metropolis and took up her residence in Hoboken, N J There her quiet and frugal mode of living was interrupted by the tax-office bloodhounds, who again got on her track, and she fled to the rural peace of Bellows Falls, Vermont In that place all went happily until the tax officers recently raised the valuation on her place from $10,000 to $12,000. This Mrs Green viewed with horror, and again it is announced that she has given up her home and fled. This is another instance of the fact that the life of the frugal New York millionaire is not all beer and skittles. No matter to what rural wilderness he withdraws himself, the Shylocks of the tax office find him And they, seem to insist upon treating him like any ordinary subject to taxation and the law.

REVIEW DEPARTMENT

By ADELAIDE SELLS BAKER

"The Tides of Barnegat," by F. Hopkinson Smith. (Scribner's.)

That man of many talents, Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith, has this year in "The Tides of Barnegat" produced a book of great depth and interest. The story is both strong and dramatic, but is relieved from heaviness by the variety of scenes and characters, and by the kindly and humorous quality of the author's style.

The plot of the novel is rather uncommon. In the opening chapter we are introduced to the heroine, Jane Cobden, with her old nurse and friend, Martha Sands, and her pet Meg, a miserable outcast dog whom she had adopted in the kindness of her heart. Mr. Smith's description of Martha and her companion is full of sympathy, humor and understanding. He laughs, but he pities.

"Few friendships presented stronger contrasts She stout and motherly-looking—too stout for any waist line—with kindly blue eyes, smooth gray hair—gray, not white—her round rosy face, framed in a cotton cap, aglow with the freshness of the morning—a comforting, coddling-up kind of a woman of fifty, with a low, crooning voice, gentle fingers, and soft, restful hollows about her shoulders and bosom for the heads of tired babies; Meg thin, rickety, and sneak-eyed, with a broken tail that hung at an angle, and but one ear (a black-and-tan had ruined the other), a sandy-colored, rough-haired, good-for-nothing cur of multifarious lineage, who was either crouching at her feet or in full cry for some hole in the fence or rift in a wood-pile where he could flatten out and sulk in safety."

Two more main characters make their bows to us from the very first; Dr. John Cavendish—immaculate, fine, noble gentleman, an excellent judge of character—the lover of Jane. Miss Lucy Cobden, 17, beautiful pleasure-loving, full of animal spirits—fresh from boarding school, the idol of her sister and nurse, the admired of all her friends. Lucy with her youth and beauty possesses a tact and charm which easily wins her admirers and makes them fondly excuse the faults that in another might be sternly criticised. But the fruit apparently so perfect sometimes conceals a worm. Beneath Lucy's sweet and exquisite exterior she is all indulgence and selfishness.

This is shown at the first in an incident which is scarcely noticed. When the girl first comes home and sees Meg in all her unredeeming ugliness—a sight to arouse pity in any true womanly nature—she says, "What a horrid little beast'" . . . Will he bite, Martha? . . . Well, just love him all to yourselves, then. . . . I wouldn't touch him with a pair of tongs. I never saw anything so ugly. Get away, you little brute."

"She had an aversion to anything physically imperfect, no matter how lovable it might seem to others."

This is the first suggestion of the hardness of Lucy's nature, which grows and grows throughout her life, choking out whatever might have been good in her.

In Warehold there was but one young man who attracted Lucy. This was Barton Holt, dissipated, handsome, and dangerous where women were concerned. Lucy's beauty dazzled him—she, on her hand, decides to make a conquest of him—and a flirtation begins which ends in Lucy's ruin.

Jane, learning of this, determines to conceal her sister's shame from the world, and takes the girl to Paris, giving out that Lucy is to study music abroad. The only other person in the village who knows the truth of the episode is old Captain Holt, whose wrath so alarms his son Barton that the latter leaves Warehold and goes to sea. Some time later a report comes back that he is dead, conquered by yellow fever in a distant country

Two years after the Cobden girl's departure for the continent Jane returns to her old home alone, except for a baby boy—the adopted son of an old friend whom she met dying in Paris, she says. It is not long before the village begins to gossip about the matter, coupling Jane's name with vile things. Jane learns of it and her pride suffers keenly, but for her sister's sake she says nothing and nobly bears the burden she has voluntarily accepted

The doctor, informed of the death of the mother, proposes to Jane and is rejected, but through all, his delicacy and consideration are so strong that he never allows Jane to know that he is a sharer in her secret, waiting for the time when she will tell him of her own accord. This delicacy is the doctor's prevailing characteristic.

The incident of so much moment to the older sister seems to have impressed Lucy but slightly. The child away, the sin concealed, nothing in sight to remind her of what in her own mind was evidently an "unpleasantness," she remains abroad and finally marries a wealthy old Frenchman by whom she has a daughter Of her life in Paris nothing definite is said, but she has evidently allowed herself great freedom, traveling about without her husband when the whim seized her In a conversation later on with Dr. John concerning certain cafes abroad the book says "she answered him quite frankly, telling him of some of her experiences in both places, quite forgetting she was giving him glimpses of her own life while away—glimpses which she had kept carefully concealed from Jane and Martha"

This conversation occurred when Lucy, now a widow, returned to Warehold with her little girl and trunks full of finery Her charming manner, which had the slightest well-bred tinge of condescension—her radiant beauty, and more than all, her exquisite gowns and accessories, these things, together with her willingness and ability to entertain gracefully, drew the villagers around her in adoring admiration. Her external qualities quite overbalanced Jane's sterling worth in the eyes of their neighbors, but it is the same Lucy—selfish and heartless

Her son, Archie, now grown to manhood, is a stalwart, handsome young fellow, but his real mother will not admit his kinship to her, even to her sister Jane. She doees nothing for him, nor cares to see him—his affairs she washes her hands of in utter callousness.

All this the older sister watches with saddening eyes, until, when Lucy leaves her charming little daughter and goes for two or three months to a near by hotel with friends, Jane sees that her sacrifice was of no avail; she had not preserved the family name from slanderous tongues, nor had Lucy profited by her experience and become a noble woman. Instead, she is selfishness, personified.

Finally ,by using all her skill and beauty, Lucy becomes engaged to a great "catch," Max Fielding, a friend of her girlhood days.

The first man she married died unaware of her secret,—she intended to wed a second time without divulging it, but the news comes that Bart Holt still lives and is to return with the expectation of marrying the girl he ruined, and to acknowledge his son.

This is the unnatural touch in the story. to make this man—shallow, dissipated and flippant—repent and at the eleventh hour, when it could be of no avail.

To continue: Lucy, of course, is in great distress—if Max learns the truth he will never marry her—and Max to her represents the heighth of her ambitions. The idea of marrying Barton Holt, she never accepts.

The book ends tragically, with the wreck of the ship, which is bringing home the repentant sinner, on the rocks. Barton Holt is drowned, and in the effort to save him, Archie, a member of the life-saving crew, also loses his life.

In the gloomy old House of Refuge, Lucy, as she looks down at the two bodies, waits with horror for the revival of the one man on earth she feared. Finding him dead, a great revulsion of feeling comes over her—she thinks her secret dead forever. But the doctor takes from the man's garments a package of letters, which he hands to the captain. They are old love-letters from Lucy, and they must go to the superintendent of the department, together with all that is found on the bodies. This means that all the past will be found out. Lucy goes nearly frantic with fear of discovery; she tries to seize the letters from the captain, she demands them, she attempts wheedling; final understanding of her motives dawning on the captain; he is beside himself with rage and tells in most merciless terms the opinion he has kept to himself so long. His anger growing greater, Captain Holt throws open the doors and tells the crowd the secret that has been hidden so many years

There can be no question of the power of "The Tides of Barnegat" to hold and interest; it is strong, sympathetic, sweet and sad. The characters—particularly Lucy—are true to their spheres of life, the descriptions are charming—there is a healthy freshness about the entire book which relieves it from the gloom it might be expected to have. One question or two, however, comes into our minds:

Why it was necessary for Jane to refuse the doctor is one of them. An almost superhuman pride and delicacy is imputed to these two fine characters Secondly the catastrophe which ends the story in so tragic a manner—it unites, evidently, the lovers. As a means to that end it seems unnecessaryily violent. It also tears Lucy's secret from the past and flaunts it before the eyes of Warehold There seems a certain uselessness about this, too. Lucy loses her hardly-acquired lover; she feels disgraced, but her character is of so shallow and selfish a quality that repentance for the sin, as a sin, could never hurt her conscience. One feels that to Lucy the shame would be in being found out, and that she would always feel that the others had wronged her in not concealing her secret forever, whatever the cost.

"THE LION AND THE MOUSE."

By Charles Klein (Dillingham); novelized from the play by Arthur Hornblow.

In attempting to novelize Mr. Klein's play, "The Lion and the Mouse," Arthur Hornblow has concocted one of the very worst excuses for a story of the recent book output. This means that it is very bad, indeed

I have not seen the drama; critics write that although the plot is preposterously impossible, the play is sufficiently clever to hold the interest. In brief, the plot is as follows

The central character is supposed to be the richest man in the world—clever, cruel and unscrupulous. He holds the greatest power of any one man or organization on earth

The author goes on to imagine that John Burkett Ryder (the richest man, etc.) holds the reins of government of the United States, and manipulates Congress to suit his own plans. There is in the Senate one honest man who has no fear of the millionaire; this man, Senator Rossmore, is too good for Mr. Ryder's ends, so he decides to remove him from his place. Accordingly, through his satellites, he has Rossmore indicted for corruption, and all looks very black.

Senator Rossmore, however, has a clever daughter. John Ryder has an honest son. The two fall in love most desperately.

Shirley Rossmore has written (assisted by Jefferson Ryder) a book about the great millionaire, which is so true to life that Ryder gets her (under an assumed name) to stay at his house in order to write his biography. In the meantime he is attempting to force his son to marry a Miss Kate Roberts, daughter of another senator.

Jefferson Ryder declines the honor, and assists Shirley in finding (too late), the letters which may clear her father's name from disgrace. Toward the end, Shirley announces her real name to John Ryder, denounces him and his methods, refuses his son's hand, and proceeds to pack her possessions preparatory to moving. ,

Her pluck, beauty and cleverness move the cruel millionaire to repentance. He saves Judge Rossmore, forgives his son and begs Shirley to become his daughter-in-law.

BEFORE ADAM.

A number of excellent judges of literature have seen part or all of Jack London's manuscript of "Before Adam," and all admit enthusiastically that it is more profound and better in every way than that admirable work, "The Call of the Wild" There was a time when London's genius was doubted, but now there can be no uncertainty about it. Above a host of mediocre and good writers he towers, strong, original and big. It is not too much to prophesy that his will be one of the tremendous figures in the literature of the twentieth century.

ANECDOTE ABOUT MRS. WARD.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in her methods of work, is an apt illustration of that absorption and impatience of interruption that is commonly associated with genius during its creative moments. It is said that not even her favorite dughter would think of entering Mrs. Ward's room while she is at work. In this connection, an Englishman tells a story of being at a house party in Italy a few years ago, near the villa Mrs. Ward was then occupying. A well-known Italian statesman was in the party, and Mrs. Ward, wanting to discuss certain political questions with him, sent an invitation for the hostess to bring him and the rest of the party to luncheon. They accepted with alacrity and went the next day. A maid welcomed them and asked them to begin luncheon, saying that Mrs. Ward would join them later. When the meal was nearly finished Mrs. Ward appeared, her gown and hair rumpled, her manner much abstracted. She placed a chair beside the statesman and entered into animated conversation with him in French, paying no attention to the rest of the party. When she had the information she wanted she went back upstairs saying she hoped her guests would stay as long as they chose and ask the maid for anything they wanted. "That was the last we saw of her," the Englishman added.

GIRL'S WEALTH BARS HER FROM COLLEGE

NORTHFIELD, Mass., Sept. 29.—Unusual wealth was today ruled an insurmountable barrier to admission to Northfield Seminary, made famous by the late Dwight L. Moody. The test case was that of the daughter of a prominent New York family who came to Northfield, accompanied by her mother. Although the girl's mother is a Northfield graduate and has been a contributor to the Moody schools, it was deemed inadvisable to admit a child of luxury.

The ostensible ground for the faculty's action—the assertion that the school is overcrowded—is authoritatively said to be secondary to the determination of the seminary managers to guard against the wide extremes in social standing which obtain in the large women's colleges.

REAL ESTATE.

WHY are you waiting?
DO you not know that winter is upon you?
THAT the longer you wait, the more a house will cost you?
THAT price of labor and lumber and plumbing is rising?
DO you not know that you have no time to buy a lot and build a house before wet weather?
DO you not know you cannot grow bearing fig trees, apple trees and large palms before spring?
THAT it will cost you much money to do this?
BE willing to pay three-quarters of what it would cost you to furnish all this and buy this 6-room house on a lot 50x100, in a fine residence neighborhood and among people who own their own homes and all for $4200.
HALF cash takes it.

George W. Austin

1002 Broadway

$60,000

Where in the world, except in Oakland, can you invest this amount in a modern brick building in the heart of the best business section of a city of 200,000 inhabitants and get $610 a month in rents? That is what I have to offer you today. It's within 50 yards of 10th and Broadway. Now, this is GOOD. (1091)

$25,000

To properly keep pace with the improvements being made by Geo. W. McNear, Esq., across the street, consisting of a reinforced concrete building costing over $100,000, this lot ought to carry a four-story building, and it would return big rents. San Pablo avenue, inside of 22d street, is about "the best what is." A total investment of under $50,000 will handle this. I know a good thing. This is one. (569)

$20,000

Or $400 a foot on 8th, near Washington street. This lot can be improved with a new 3-story brick building, 50 feet front, for about $25,000. Will pay 12 per cent per annum, and the land and rental value ought to double in 10 years. Clay street's growth and development will make this property very valuable. A commercial hotel or stores and apartments would pay here. (2337)

$10,000

I feel perfectly safe in saying that this lot will sell for $15,000 in less than a year; surely it will if you build on it and add the cost of improvements; three-story brick going up across the street; Clay and 8th sts. are both pretty fine; 12 per cent would be easy to get on the right kind of a building here; $25,000 would handle the whole thing. (1396)

$9000

$2750

Cosy cottage of 6 rooms, bath and basement; all in fine condition; right on Market st., near Key Route station at 22d st. This would make good store property if remodeled. (3)

$2000

A brand new California bungalow; modern in every respect; on a corner lot, 40x100; on 55th street, only 3 blocks west of San Pablo avenue. $1000 in cash will handle this. (174)

$6000—In a fine location in East Oakland we have a fine new flat building containing 6 flats of 4 rooms each. The building is in excellent condition, modern and well arranged. The income is about $75 per month. This is a good investment and worthy of your inspection. (240)

$5750—On 36th street, near San Pablo avenue, we have a pair of new modern flats—5 rooms downstairs and 6 above. These flats are really fine, interior finish is good; the building is well built and is on a large lot, 50x106. This is a good buy; income about $50. (106)

$5000—On Chestnut street near 16th, we have a splendid investment; this really cannot be equaled. These flats have been built only 8 months; finished in dull redwood. The building is modern and convenient, containing two 4-room flats, also a large attic of 3 rooms with an outside stairway, which could be made into a flat very easily. You can handle this flat easily on a very small capital. Come in and ask to see this place. It is a rattling good buy and you can have it on your own terms. Income 14 per cent. (125)

$4650—On Sherman street, only about 500 feet from Telegraph avenue—A fine 2-story house with 4 rooms on the first floor and 3 rooms on the second. This place is finished beautifully in redwood and marble; modern and nicely arranged; heated by gas. This is a splendid place and in a fine location. (234)

$3500—On 37th street, a nice 6-room house, 3 rooms downstairs and 3 up. This is a well appointed and modern place; gas and electricity; rented at present for $3500. Can make good terms on this—really a good buy. (124)

$3500—Right near the city, only a few blocks from the Key Route. Fine 6-room modern house, with all modern conveniences; large lot 42x100 ft. in size on the north side of 28th street; interior finished in redwood, in good location. Look this up. (241)

$3250—On Chestnut street near 21st, we have a nice 7-room cottage, street work and sewer work, etc., all complete; A1 condition. Large lot 56x122. This is a good buy at the above price. (494)

$3250—On 35th street, on the south side of the street, near Telegraph, we have a pretty little cottage of 5 rooms, very neat and homelike, modern and very nicely finished; lot 26x120. This will please you, look it up; it is a bargain at the price quoted.

$2250—

Near 22d ave. on East 16th St., a 6-room house, divided into 3-room apartments, with separate entrance on a lot 25x140 feet; there is a good barn with alleyway entrance; well located, convenient to electric cars and local train, making it a desirable home at a low figure.

$2250—

Good 5-room story and a half house with bath and gas, fronting south, on the northwest corner of 19th st., and 14th ave.; lot 68x75; worth one hundred cents on the dollar.

$2500—

Almost new cottage of 5 rooms, with modern conveniences, fine mantle and cement walks, on lot 30x125, fronting east; very convenient to two car lines, and can be handled with about $500 cash, and balance like rent; an "A 1" East Oakland bargain.

$2650—

13 % On 3d street, near Chester, two flats of 5 rooms each, with 7-foot basement, which could easily be made into another flat of 5 rooms; present rentals $30 per month, making about 13 per cent on the investment; snap for some one.

$2800—

On Attwell ave., a fine new bungalow of 5 large rooms, very large reception hall and pantry, electric lights and gas; lot 50x100, worth almost half the price asked; splendid opportunity for some one seeking a home in Fruitvale.

$2950—

$600, and balance like rent, will place you in possession of a fine new modern cottage of 5 rooms, on a lot 37½x100 feet, near 8th ave. car in the upper section of East Oakland.

$3000—

16 % Fine home of 6 rooms, bath and gas, artesian water, one block from electric car and two blocks from S. P. local, on a good lot, with fine lawn, in the best residence section of West 9th st.; furnishings are included; this property would readily rent for $40 a month, which would amount to 16 per cent on the total investment; a rare opportunity for some one seeking either a home or investment.

$3250—

Southeast corner 28th and Chestnut sts., a well built 6-room house, with bath and gas; lot 28x100; for quick sale the price has been reduced from $3600. Investigate this and you will buy.

$3550—

Within two blocks of San Pablo ave., on 28th st., fronting south, two flats of 5 rooms, bath and gas each; the rents on these would pay 12 per cent on the investment.

$3700—

Two good cottages of 4 and 6 rooms on 27th ave., near S. P. local and electric cars; lot 47½x157½ feet. A good buy.

$4000—

On 6th street between Grove and West, a good two-story house of 6 rooms and high basement. This is a good home, within a few minutes of business center and very convenient to local train and electric car.

$4600—

$5250—

25% On 41st st., near Grove, on a lot 32½x137½, south frontage, two flats of 4 rooms and bath each, and a cottage of four rooms and bath; this property is nearly new and rents for $65 a month; mortgage of $3100 can stand at 8 per cent, leaving the purchaser 25 per cent on cash invested.

$10,500—

15% Between Webster and Franklin, on 9th st., a good house of 9 rooms and two stores, with side alley; the rents on this amount to 15 per cent net on the investment.

Suitable for Roomers

$3250—

Good two-story house of 8 rooms, bath and gas, on Filbert street, between 18th and 21st sts., fronting west, in walking distance of business center and two blocks from Key Route. This is a splendid location for roomers. Present owner has two rooms rented for $20 a month, and was recently offered $30 a month for two rooms downstairs, and the other two upstairs would bring $20, which would make a total of $70, and still leave plenty of room for a small family. Estimate for yourself the percentage the total rentals amount to on the investment and be convinced that this is a snap. $1250 cash will handle this.

MEDICAL.

DR. SYLVESTER'S Office.

Leading Specialist for Women.

Ladies—

If you are suffering from any ailment peculiar to your sex, worried about your condition, in trouble and need help, consult this famous specialist in full confidence for the following reasons:

1st—He is truly the only regular graduate physician (specialist for women) advertising.

2d—His qualifications are well known and recognized by the highest medical authority, and his nineteen years of unlimited success in San Francisco and throughout the country speaks for itself.

3d—He gives you relief at once, without drugs, needless operations or detention from your occupation. He never fails or disappoints, and one visit is all that is usually necessary.

6th—He helps the unfortunate.

Remember, the best is always the cheapest, and why suffer anxiety by consulting quacks and self-styled specialists when you can have the advice of a man eminent in the profession absolutely free of charge? His fees for treatment are very moderate and you can safely intrust your case in his care and be assured of prompt and happy results.

Hours—9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Open Sundays.

Why Don't you Follow my Tips?

If you have not been following my advertisements and this is the first one you have seen, you don't have to take my word for it right now, but look over the past files of the paper and see what I have told you.

Last week I told you that Silver Pick was a buy on any break; it was then 73. It broke to 68, and then went straight up to 95. Several of my customers followed my advice and made lots of money. I made some myself, for I never recommend a stock that I am afraid to buy myself.

I also told you of a stock that is selling at 25 cents that would go to over a dollar before January 1st. That same stock today is selling at 50 cents, and it is just as good to buy this week as it was last week at 25 cents. The developments on the mine are such that it ought to sell at a dollar within a few weeks. You had better get some right now.

I know another stock that you can now get at 15 cents, which I feel very confident will double in value within a month. It is one of the best buys in cheap stocks on the market. I know the developments in the mine warrant a big advance in price. You ought to more than double your money in less than two months.

Now you want to get in quick on these. Last week several people who had read my advertisement, enclosed the money and they got the 25-cent stock. Others who stopped to write and inquire about it, did not get any, for I cannot buy a stock at 25 cents when it is selling at 50.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Yesterday's late bulge in the stock market attracted heavy realizing sales this morning, under which prices fell sharply throughout the list. There were running sales of 7000 shares of United States Steel at 46½@45¾, compared with 46 last night. Great Northern preferred was carried down 4 points. Union Pacific 1¾, Northern Pacific and Smelting 1½, St. Paul and Missouri Pacific 1⅛, Canadian Pacific, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Amalgamated Copper and Colorado Fuel a point, and United States Steel preferred, Pennsylvania and Reading ¾. Central Railroad of New Jersey sold at an advance of 3 points.

The vigorous selling at the opening was soon arrested by the distribution of supporting orders and the covering of short contracts. All of the losses, with the exception of a small fraction here and there, were made up, but the market became almost inanimate at the recovery. Northern Pacific moved up 1¼ over last night, Wisconsin Central preferred and Reading common and first preferred 1.

The market closed easy at a decline from an upward movement. Trading stagnated until after the appearance of the bank statement, when the advance was renewed. Reading led the movement. The general list did not get more than a fraction away from last night's level. Reading's gain ran to over 4 points. Rock Island preferred, St. Louis & San Francisco preferred, Delaware & Hudson and National Railroad of Mexico preferred rose 1¾ and Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Ontario, Amalgamated Copper and Sugar 1 to 1½. Central Railroad of New Jersey recovered 5 and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha 3 points over the declines recently made. The ore deal stocks receded again in the late dealings.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, Sept 29.—Continued small receipts in the northwest had a strengthening effect on the wheat market today. December opened a shade to ⅛@ c higher at 75½c, sold at 75 @75⅜c and then advanced to 75½@75⅝c.

The corn market showed moderate firmness. December opened unchanged to a shade higher at 43⅜c to 43⅜@43½c and sold at 43½@43⅝c.

Provisions were quiet. January pork was up 2½@5c at $13.35; lard was unchanged at $7.82½ and ribs were 2½c higher at $7.12½.

MONEY ON CALL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Money on call nominal; no loans. Time loans dull. Sixty and ninety days and six months, 6½ per cent.

Prime mercantile pare, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Sun Rises..........6:03 | Sun Sets..........5:59

NOTE.—In the above tabulation of tides the daily tides are given in the order of their occurrence, commencing with the early morning tide in the left-hand tide column, and the succeeding tides as they occur. On some days there are but three tides, the usual fourth tide occurring the following morning.

Furs for Autumn

NO NEED TO GO FURTHER THAN

KAHNS' FOR FURS

"Why, I had no idea anyone in Oakland had such a fine assortment of furs—I'm surprised—Why, you seem to have everything"— That's what the writer overheard and that's what prompted this advertisement—this introduction to our splendid new deparment—the department of Furs—

With the destruction of all San Francisco stocks (of importance), with Dame Fashion calling for Furs, with every indication of a phenomenal demand, we rushed to the markets of the east and purchased thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of the best fur pieces the makers could show us—

No expense of time or energy was spared— The Kahn standard of excellence was at stake—the old, old watchword of this wonderful store "just a little better for just a little less" had to be lived up to—

No exclusive fur store prices would answer for Kahns' fur store—They had to be a little less and the quality, too, had to be a little better—

We succeeded—

We had to send a man on to New York to buy—He had to spend weeks at the work—He may have made enemies—But we succeeded—

And tomorrow, when we show you this stock, the styles, the qualities, the prices, you, too, will say we've succeeded—

We show furs for every want from the beautiful brook Mink Stoles for one hundred dollars to the pretty little French Coney Sable four-in-hands for a dollar ninety-five—Soft glossy Kolinsky Boas for $38.50, real Mink Muffs for $125, $100, $65, $45, $38.50, etc., Natural Squirrel Muffs for $6.00, $7.50 and on up to $12—Far Eastern Mink Boas for $5, $7.50, $8.50, $12, $14, $16.50, etc., with muffs to match at about the same prices—Sable Squirrel Boas for $35 with tails or with ermine and ermine heads—Oppossum Stoles for $6, $10, $12.50, $17.50, etc.—Pretty little Chinchillas for $5, $6, $12.50 and $20 and with muffs to match for $12.50 and $20—Fox Stoles that come to the knees with six tails for $38.50 or Fox muffs, animal size using the whole fox skin with head and tail for $10, $11, $12.50, and $20 and real Mink boas for $20, $25, $30, $38.50, $45, $50, $62, $68.50 and $85—In fact an assortment so complete, so bewilderingly assorted, so wonderfully extensive that no pen picture can tell more than a fraction of the story—

Furs are everywhere—Special racks are crowded, cabinets are full to overflowing, cases are chock-a-block and we're splendidly ready—

Now don't delay—Choose while the stock is at the zenith of its glory—not when the best blends and the prettiest pieces have all been picked out—A small deposit will hold, for you, any piece you fancy—so come at once for all these nights are chilly enough for furs and it is to be a great fur season—

Sharp reductions—rattling specials—trade bringing items that will make business hum—when Kahns' have "specials" they wake things up—we propose to continue tomorrow the sales that caused such excitement here last night—isn't that good news?

Ladies' Night Gowns

We bought an entire sample line at a bargain The styles are so varied, the values so ranging that detailed description is out of the question. "V" shaped necks, Dutch necks, square necks, yokes tucked and finished with hemstitching and ruffles and ribbons galore. You'll find a bargain here—each . 59c

GENUINE SQUIRREL FOUR-IN-HAND Ties

You'll pay ten dollars for them before the season is over; 56 inches long (nearly 5 feet); beautifully lined with fine furrier's satin; these are all the style in New York and will be scarce before many weeks; get yours here tomorrow; special... $5.00

RUSTLING TAFFETA Petticoats

Black only but of most excellent quality. These petticoats are made wide, with accordion plaited ruffle and finished with flounce. The silk alone in them is worth almost the price we ask at this sale. We purchased several hundred in one lump to get "a price." The department manager says, "They're worth $6." But let us say $5 to be safe. Get one tomorrow for each $3.95

Plaid Taffeta Silk

This is our 85c grade, 20 inches wide—a splendid silk for petticoats, waists and costumes; wears beautifully; a grand assortment will be on sale, including all the newest plaids. Don't miss this item. It is one of the strongest in the sale—yard.......... 66c

Oriental Allovers

Here's another good item! These all-overs are 18 inches wide and come in white, cream or ecru. The lot is assorted and the values run up to $1.00 a yard. It is very seldom that such goods are offered at any but regular prices. We earnestly advise all regular patrons to look at them—yard.... 50c

Twenty-five regular $10 Long Plaid Coast—50-inch—which will be sold at	$4.95 each
Fourteen dozen Irish Point Scarfs and Squares—18x54 and 32x32—To be sold at ..	50c each
A big lot of black and white striped and Scotch Plaid Ribbons—4 to 5 inches wide at	25c yard
One thousand yards German Flannel (Kimona and wrapper cloths) the 15c kind for ..	11c yard

Oriental Lace Sale

Here's the snap of the ad!—The biggest value of them all!—Oriental laces from 2 to 6 inches wide and worth up to 35c a yard; white, cream or ecru; a fresh, crisp, new lot picked up in New York by turn of good fortune. On sale tomorrow — yard 10c

Ladies' Underwear

You'll have to come early for these. Sale starts at 8 30 a. m. tomorrow. We can't tell how long they'll last. Natural gray wool mixed. Vests H. N. L. S. pants; ankle length. Our 75c line—special, garment 55c
